THAT WILL INTEREST
CARPET BUYERS

For the next two weeks the Carpet Floor of the GOLDEN LION will be the scene of busy crowds after rare bargains. July is the month for clearance of Carpet stocks—the time when we are compelled to pocket quick losses. All through the store real and radical reductions appeal to buyers, but nowhere more temptingly than in our Carpet Department. The importance, of this two week's sale is enhanced by the fact that manufacturers have just advised us of an advance of from 8c to 10c per yard—doubtless owing to the scarcity of the wool. If you want to save money on floor coverings, put that and this reduced price list together:—

BEST ENGLISH 5 FRAME BRUSSELS CARPET, 8 good patterns to select from. 5-8 borders and 3-4 stairs to match, worth to-day $1.35 per yd., sale price, made and laid $1.17

GOOD QUALITY 4-FRAME BRUSSELS CARPET, worth to-day $1.10 per yard, sale price, made and laid 89c

BEST ENGLISH BALMORAL TAPESTRY CARPET, wears better than any but best Brussels, worth to-day 90c and $1.00 per yard, sale price, made and laid 79c

BEST 3-PLY ALL-WOOL CARPET, worth $1.10 per yard, sale price 79c

GOOD QUALITY INGRAIN CARPET, all-wool filling, one yard wide, worth to-day 70c, sale price 52c

BEST ENGLISH LINOLEUM, 3 patterns only, 4 yards wide, worth 85c and $1.00, sale price per square yard 69c

CHENEILLE PORTIERES, all-over patterns, in good designs and colorings, 50 inches wide, 3 yards long, worth to-day $10.50 per pair, sale price, per pair $7.25

RUSSIANS SUFFERED SEVERELY

Japs Repulsed a Stubborn Attack at Metien Pass.

RUSSIANS LOST A THOUSAND

Count Keller Driven Back on July 17, While on a Reconnaissance Expedition--Japanese Losses Were Trifling Japs Pursued Flying Russians.

St. Petersburg, July 19.—General Kuropatkin reports that Lieut.-Gen. Count Keller lost over 1,000 in killed or wounded in the attack on Motien Pass, July 17. On July 17, in order to determine the strength of the enemy, it was decided to advance against his position in the direction of Lianshankwan. Lieut.-Gen. Count Keller had been instructed not to start with the object of capturing the pass, but at act according to the strength of the force that he would find opposed to him.

At Point of Bayonet.

At 11 o'clock a battalion of Russians dislodged a Japanese outpost at the point of the bayonet at the crossing of the Lakho and the Sinkia roads. The details of this engagement have not yet been verified, but its general course, according to the telegraphic reports sent in by Gen. Keller, was as follows: "During the night the Japanese had evacuated Siakokao Pass and the heights surmounted by the temple leaving only outposts. At dawn Gen. Kashtalinsky's column occupied these passes, driving back the Japanese advance posts.

"At about 5.30 o'clock on the morning of July 17, the Japanese in considerable force, and with numerous guns, occupied Wafaktwan Passes and the mountainous bluffs to the south on the flank of Gen. Kashtalinsky's column. From this position and from the crest of the mountains to the east of heights surmounted by the temple the enemy directed a heavy artillery and rifle fire. General Kashtalinsky advanced to occupy the bluffs, sending forward at first one and then three battalions, but the attempt failed, notwithstanding the support given by the horse mountain battery, as our field guns could not be brought into action on account of the nature of the ground.

Strength of Enemy Great.

"At about 8 a. m., Gen. Keller, who was directing the fight, deemed it necessary to lend assistance to Gen. Kashtalinsky's column by bringing up from the general reserve three battalions to the heights, surmounted by the temple. In order to maintain the positions we had already occupied, it was necessary, owing to the enemy's pressure, to reinforce immediately with other reserves the troops in the fighting line, but these positions, owing to their situation, were untenable. Gen. Keller found the strength of the enemy so great, compared with ours, that he decided not to continue the fight and not to bring up either the special or the general reserves, especially in view of the fact that in case of his ultimately taking the offensive it would be necessary to attack without support of field artillery."

Our losses have not yet been exactly ascertained, but Gen. Keller reports that they exceed 1,000. The gallant 24th Regiment suffered most. Gen. Keller especially mentions the activity, courage and coolness shown by its commanding officers. Col. Koschitz was severely wounded in the leg, but remained in the ranks until the end of the action.

Jap Losses Trifling.

London, July 19.—The correspondent of The Times at Gen. Kuroki's headquarters, says the Japanese losses during the fighting at Motien Pass on July 17 were trifling.

Japs Pursued Russians.

Tokio, July 19.—Gen. Kuroki reports that two divisions of the Russian army made a desperate assault on Motien Pass at dawn July 17, but were repulsed. At three o'clock Sunday morning, a heavy fog veiling their movements, two divisions of Russians, commanded by Lieut.-Gen. Keller, made an assault on the Japanese positions at Motien Pass and in its vicinity desperately.

Gen. Kuroki adds, the Japanese resisted stubbornly, repulsed the Russians and pursued them for a considerable distance westward.

Battle Any Day.

London, July 19.—The morning papers have despatches from correspondents at General Kuroki's headquarters which bring the situation in the Far East up to July 16. All of the writers agree in saying that the situation is unchanged, that the armies are always in touch, and the Russians are being strongly reinforced and that a battle may be expected any day. Slight skirmishes are reported to have taken place on July 15.

To the Red Sea.

London, July 19.—The Daily Express this morning prints the following despatch, dated July 18, from its correspondent at Malta: "The British Mediterranean fleet left here to-day for Alexandria. It is believed that the destination of the fleet may be connected with the presence of Russian volunteer fleet steamers in the Red Sea. The British cruiser Terrible is said to have sailed from Suez to-day for the purpose of looking after the interests of British merchantmen."

Postponed Till Thursday.

London, July 19.—Earl Percy, under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in the House of Commons yesterday asked Gen. Laurie (Conservative and Unionist) to postpone a question which he proposed to ask anent the doings of the Russian volunteer fleet steamer St. Petersburg in the Red Sea until Thursday.

GREAT BRITAIN GIVES WARNING

Eighteen British Warships Leave for Alexandria to Check Russian Illegalities.

RUSSIA WILL LIKELY SUBSIDE MEEKLY

P. & O. Str Malacca Arrives at Suez Commanded by Russians --The Admittance of the British Company Agent Aboard the Vessel Was Refused.

SPECIAL TO THE REVIEW

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain has informed Germany of the dispatch of a British fleet of eighteen warships to Alexandria, with the intention of checking Russian illegalities in the Red Sea. It is expected that this demonstration will cause Russia to subside meekly. The general feeling is that the first European complication with regard to the war in the far east has arisen.

SUEZ, July 19.—The P. & C. steamship Malacca, which was seized in the Red Sea by the Russian volunteer cruiser Petersburg last week, has arrived here, flying the Russian flag, and manned by a Russian crew. The admittance of the British company agent aboard the vessel was refused.

THE GLOBE INFAMY.

The Globe thinks that Lord Dundonald was guilty of bad taste in refuting its infamous calumnies. It seems to think that etiquette or ethics or some other unnamed consideration should have bound the gallant general to submit in silence, while, his report having been dishonestly suppressed by the Minister, lies organ should day after day, lie about its contents to create unfounded prejudice against Lord Dundonald. The Globe and its masters and its imitators were to accuse him of demanding an enormous expenditure for permanent defences, of planning to erect Gibraltars on our frontier, and to construct thousands of miles of fortifications, and to weigh us down with an army like those of continental Europe, while Lord Dundonald was not to tell the truth that all this was pure invention on the part of the Globe and its allies under the shelter of the cowardly and mendacious concealement of his actual report from Parliament and the people.

According to the barnacle organ, Lord Dundonald made a campaign speech. As a fact he carefully refrained from any personal attack upon the Ministers, justifiable as it would have been after their disreputable treatment of him. What he did was to give the facts in dispute in a plain, honest soldierly speech. If the facts condemn the Ministers in the eyes of every patriotic Canadian and of every honest man, it is not the fault of Lord Dundonald.

Some political officers of the 91st Foreigners are endeavoring to make the regiment serve the party in power by refusing to let their colonel present their colors to them.

Sometimes the Hamilton Times is more truly a comic paper than Punch or Life. It has now discovered that the recent reception in Toronto has left a black stain on the record of Lord Dundonald.

Though not often in accord with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, especially in his joining in the conspiracy to get rid of Lord Dundonald and Mr. J. Lorne McDougall, we must offer him our sincere sympathy. He has received the approval of Mr. Stead.

There are eleven ammunition pack saddles in charge of the Ordnance Corps with ten field officers and ten other commissioned officers to look after them. It is said, however, that one of the saddles is rotten, which makes the numbers even.

The Gazette contains new regulations for salutes. By some extraordinary oversight no provision is made the Ministers Responsible for their Districts, so there will be no salute for Mr. Fisher when he goes to exercise his command of the militia in the Eastern Townships.

President Roosevelt is rather bigger than a Fisher. He says:—

"But there are certain branches of the public service in which, if we are wise and farseeing we will never allow partizan politics to enter. There must be no partizan politics in the Army or the Navy of the United States. All that concerns us to know about any general or admiral, about a mighty captain by sea or land is whether he is a thoroughly fit commander of men and loyal to the country as a whole."

General Fisher.

"A young man called Fighting Syd. Fisher,
Went meddling with the militia-r;
When the smoke cleared away,
At the end of the fray,
You were gone, Syd, but nobody'd miss yer."

Kept Poor by Doctor's Bills.

Many a family is kept poor by doctors' bills when just as good and oftentimes better results could be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which sell at 25 cents a box of twenty-five doses. As one pill a day is the most frequent dose under any circumstances there is no treatment obtainable which costs so little, and at the same time none which brings about such excellent results in derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

How Raffle Hats Are Made.

In the August number of the Delineator there is an article that will be greatly appreciated by the young ladies of Peterborough. The subject is "Lace hats made from raffia," and full instructions with excellent illustrations are given, so that the making of a fancy raffia hat is not a matter of great work or patience, as is generally supposed. The Review stationery department has a full stock of raffia in black, brown, red and natural.

OUR SPECIAL OTTAWA LETTER

Interesting Notes and Comments From the Dominion Capital

THE WEEK IN PARLIAMENT

State of the Militia—Fisher as a Chicken Fattener — Backing the Auditor-General—Hays in Command—Fearing the Light —Another Ministerial Steal.

THE WEEK IN PARLIAMENT.

During the week the Militia bill was passed with the exception of a single clause, which was held over for further discussion.

It came out in the course of the debate that the Government has determined to make all future appointments to the militia on political grounds. Each minister is to act as a deputy Minister of Militia in the district he represents. The opposition made a vigorous protest against this dangerous policy, and they were backed up by Hon. Wm. Ross, who was Minister of Militia in the Mackenzie cabinet. Sir Wilfrid Laurier however, refused to entertain the objections.

It transpired, too, that in the letting of many militia contracts, tenders are never called for and party favorites are paid their own prices for services and goods. A number of glaring instances of this kind were brought to the attention of the Government.

The leader of the Conservative party asked the Government to consider a draft bill to increase the powers of the Auditor General, who, under the terms of the present Audit act, is unable to prevent unlawful expenditure of money. Again the Liberal leaders attacked the Auditor General and refused to give him the powers he has been asking for for some years. By a vote of 94 to 56 Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers turned the guardian of the treasury out of court.

A special committee was named at the suggestion of the opposition to inquire into the terms of the Davis contract for the lighting of the Cornwall canal, which, the Auditor General alleges is a scandal.

In supply considerable progress was made. The Government bill to amend the Railway act was also taken up and amended.

By the death of John McIntosh, M.P., for Sherbrooke, the Conservatives lost an able supporter, and Canada a sterling public man.

MILITIA IS ROTTEN TO CORE.

Lord Dundonald has done much to expose the rottenness of the militia department. An attack upon the system by Col. Thompson, one of the strongest Liberal supporters in the Commons, opened the eyes of those who imagined that the millions of additional expenditure incurred in connection with the force and resulted in improvement. The opposition, in its criticism of the militia estimates, have made it a rule to be more or less lenient, realizing that it was in the interests of the country as a whole to have an efficient militia. But the attack upon the management of the militia by the late General Officer Commanding has placed the matter in a different light. In the recent debates on the Militia bill, the department has been shown to be run for the benefit of politicians and grafters. When supplies are needed public tenders are not called for. The man with the pull gets his own figures, and the treasury pays the bills. In accordance with this vicious system, a contract for carpentering at the St. John drill hall was awarded to a grocer, J. E. Smith. Mr. Smith was down for a contract. It mattered not that he was a grocer and had not the faintest idea as to how a drill hall should be repaired. He had a political pull and that was all that the Militia Department cared for. When the Sussex armories were built, a tailor was made building inspector. Other equally glaring instances of destroying the usefulness of the Militia Department have been brought to the attention of Parliament, and more are promised in the near future. This is what Lord Dundonald saw going on about him every day and that is what he was expected to close his eyes to. Canadians will not begrudge money to help bring the militia forces up to a high standard, but it will be surprising if they are willing to tamely submit to its waste in this reckless manner.

MR. FISHER'S CHICKEN FATTENING.

Before he became a member of Parliament, Mr. Horace Hazzard, member for West Queens, P. E. I., was an employee of the Dominion Government. He is a great authority on the fattening of chickens, and for three years ran the government chicken fattening station at Charlottown. In the year 1900 it cost the country, through Mr. Hazzard's management, $676 to run the chicken station, and the revenue was $47. In 1901, Mr. Hazzard ran the expenditure up to $604, but the revenue fell off to $124. In 1902, Mr. Hazzard went a little easier and only expended $153, and the result was no revenue. Last year he was a candidate for the House of Commons, and consequently does not appear in the public accounts as a chicken fattening demonstrator. It is only fair to Mr. Hazzard to say that he was not alone in his lack of success in raising fat chickens at lucrative prices. The total expenditure for the different stations in P. E. I. for the four years was $2086 and the revenue was $1446.

CONSERVATIVES BACK AUDITOR GENERAL

The Conservative party to a man are at the back of the Auditor General in his attempt to protect the treasury from the hordes of graiters who throng the corridors of Parliament Buildings. Since 1899 that official has been vainly endeavoring to have the Audit Act of 1878 amended. He has repeatedly pointed out that new conditions have arisen which have rendered the present act inoperative. To his many appeals the Liberal party, who, by the way appointed him to office, have turned a deaf ear. He is continually turned down by the Treasury Board, a tribunal that is defendant and judge at the same time. True he has on many occasions in recent years fought this court to a finish, and defeated it, but this, at best, is an onerous duty that should not be imposed on the man to whom the taxpayer looks for protection. He should not be expected to spend his time in fighting the men who are elected by the people to spend taxes for the advancement of Canada. Mr. McDougall, driven to desperation by the persecution to which he has been subjected, placed his resignation in the hands of the Government. This should have at once been communicated to Parliament, whose official the Auditor General is, but instead of doing so the Premier locked the document up in his private vaults and it was only through the press that the opposition were informed of the true condition of affairs. In the meantime the Liberal leaders fearing a scandal did their best to induce the Auditor General to withdraw this letter of retirement. The people can easily see what importance the Government attach to hiding from the electors any difference they may have with the one man who stands between the treasury and the grafter. But Mr. McDougall was not to be browbeaten and has forced the issue. Will Canada stand by the Auditor-General or the grafter? That question must be answered at the next general election.

MR. HAYS IS THE WHOLE THING.

It is a somewhat ludicrous spectacle to see Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his associates dancing attendance on Mr. C. M. Hays. Ever since the first hitch in the Grand Trunk Pacific contract Mr. Hays has played a very important part in the affairs of Canada. The Government is unable to move hand or foot without the consent of the chief promoter of the big railway deal. A dispute arises. Sir Wilfrid at once hastens to Montreal to consult Mr. Hays. The deliberations have passed that stage when Mr. Hays considers it his duty to approach the Premier of Canada. The Liberal party has committed itself body and soul to the Grand Trunk Pacific and the promoters know it. Whether the elections are to be held this year or next is a matter for Mr. Hays to decide. The Government must do his bidding or they will hear from Mr. Hays. When the Grand Trunk Company decided in London that they would accept the terms of the second contract, they specified that there were to be no amendments passed in Parliament. The result was that the deal went through just as it left the Grand Trunk shareholders. The Parliament of Canada was not considered for a moment. Ministers piteously stated that they were powerless to protect the interests of the public, because the Grand Trunk would not hear of it. And so it continues. Sir Wilfrid is still at the beck and call of Mr. Hays and must needs go to Montreal whenever he is summoned. What a treat for the electors to find their first minister trotting about in a private car to confer with Mr. Hays. It is the railway promoter and not the Liberal party who has the whip hand at present.

LIBERALS AFRAID OF TRUTH.

The leader of the opposition failed to get the ear of the Government when he proposed to strengthen the hand of the Auditor General in the control of public expenditures. The idea of Mr. Borden was to give the "watchdog of the treasury," the right to appeal against Treasury Board overrulings in cases where it was clear that the public chest was being rifled and to draft bill the Exchequer Court was named as the court of appeal. The Finance Minister suggested that there were ample safeguards thrown about the expenditure of the taxes collected from the people. For instance, the public accounts committee is empowered to investigate all financial transactions. But what has been the experience under the Liberal Government? Witnesses have been called, but the moment a question was asked that was embarrassing to the Minister on trial, the witness under fire was told to ignore it. That is as far as the opposition have got since the present Parliament was called together. In every suspicious case referred to the public accounts committee the civil servant was suppressed by his superior. With the Exchequer Court judge conducting an enquiry such tactics would not be tolerated for a moment. That is what the Liberal party dreads. So long as a minister is able to dictate to his subordinate what question he shall or shall not answer it will be impossible to have a fair trial of a minister however corruptly he may manage his department. The bill proposed by Mr. Borden would stand for years, and as the Conservative party will sooner or later be in power, they would suffer from the searching enquiries of an independent tribunal quite as much as the Laurier administration provided they are dishonest. The amendments are in line with the principles of honest government and the Liberal party in rejecting them have not shown that desire for clean politics which should prevail in Canada.

A CLEAR CASE OF STEAL.

The Auditor General has the details in connection with the sale of the Dominion steamer "Bayfield" in a way that proves beyond contradiction that the property of the people was stolen with the full knowledge and consent of Hon. Raymond Prefontaine. The steamer was disposed of for $3250 to Harrison & Horn Co., Limited, of Owen Sound. This firm is strong in its support of the Liberal cause. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries before parting with the ship called upon Capt. Stewart to place a valuation on her. The officer did so and fixed her worth at $7000. The assessment was concurred in by the captain of the vessel. Capt. Stewart also informed Mr. Prefontaine that he had received an offer of $5000 for the vessel. In the face of this the minister sold her to the Harrisons for $3250. Mr. Prefontaine thus disposed of property which he holds in trust for the people of Canada at a figure away below its value and the price tendered for it by a second party. The country loses $1750 at least by the deal. The Harrisons are still using the boat, while the Government has been forced to replace her by an expensive craft. This steal is an outrage and the electors should remember it on election day.

Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New for the Cure of Man's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

YOU PAY ONLY IF CURED.

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write for It This Very Day.

A Detroit specialist who has 16 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and state boards of medical examiners, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes; so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have or have not been able to get cured of nervousness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotency, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for any money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him, and if he accepts your case for treatment it is equivalent to a cure, as he does not under any consideration accept incurable cases for treatment; and, remember, if he does accept your case you may pay when you are cured. He sends the method, as well as his booklet on the subject, explaining the 16 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply 176

DUNDONALD INCIDENT

Causes Questions to Be Asked in the British House.

Could Not, However, Be Answered Without Full Notice—London Papers Urge That Lord Dundonald Be Called Home—Daily Mail Says He Serves the Larger Interests of the Empire Most Indifferently.

London, July 19.—(C.A.P.)—J. Henniker Heaton, M.P. (Conservative), asked the War Secretary yesterday whether the name of Lord Dundonald was on the active list of the War Department, whether his services had been dispensed with by the Canadian Government, whether it had come to the knowledge of the War Office that Lord Dundonald had been making inflammatory speeches in Canada against the Government of Canada, and that at meetings largely attended by the Opposition he had been cheered and hooted by the various parties. The Speaker intervened and said: "I hope the question will not continue in the same tone, because those controversial expressions are not admissable. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Heaton continuing, asked whether the War Secretary had been warned that the action of Lord Dundonald might be resented and might greatly endanger the loyal and kindly feeling now existing between Canada and Great Britain.

W. Bromley-Davenport, financial secretary to the War Office, replied: "I think the honorable member will see that these are questions which the Secretary of State cannot properly answer without full notice. (Hear, hear.)

To Call Dundonald Home.

The Daily Mail says the sooner the War Office and the British Government turn their attention to the doings and sayings of Lord Dundonald, the better it will be for both the Motherland and Canada. Lord Dundonald has embarked upon what looks perilously like a political campaign against the Canadian Government and has appealed to the Opposition like the merest demagogue. It is no part of the duty of an Imperial officer to cause friction between England and Canada, and a soldier who does so serves the larger interests of the Empire most indifferently.

Risk of Imperial Crisis.

The Daily News asks: "Are we to have the risk of an Imperial crisis raised over that trumpery quarrel in which Lord Dundonald has not the shadow of a case. The threatened meeting at Montreal should be emphatically vetoed. It is high time the British Government, which closures Parliament, closured this indiscreet bearer of a great name and assured the Canadians that England disassociates itself from this fire-eating general."

Controversial.

London, July 19.—Henniker Heaton, M.P., in the House of Commons, desired to ask the Secretary of State for War a question re Dundonald, but the speaker said it was too controversial to be admissible.

No Difficulties Raised.

London, July 19.—(C.A.P.)—Premier Balfour, replying to T. Gibson Bowles, M.P., (Conservative), said the Newfoundland Government had raised no difficulties affecting the rights conceded to the French in connection with the local regulations for bait fishing and the concurrence of the Newfoundland Government had been obtained during the negotiations.

Child Killed Outright.

Hamilton, July 19.—Yesterday morning shortly after 9 o'clock there was a distressing accident at the corner of King street and East avenue, where a street car crashed into a buggy containing Mrs. George Schuler, Union Park; her daughter, Mrs. Herman Myers, and her granddaughter, Bertha Myers, aged four years. The three occupants of the rig were thrown under the car wheels. The child was killed outright, Mrs. Myers was seriously injured and Mrs. Schuler was painfully bruised. An inquest will be held this evening.

THE BISLEY MATCHES.

Colonials Visited at the Canadian Hut By Duke of Connaught.

Bisley Camp, July 19.—Colonials were on the alert yesterday when the Duke of Connaught visited the Canadian hut and inspected the Canadians, Natalians and New Zealanders, who were drawn up in open squad in front. After the parade His Royal Highness visited the quarters and remarked to the commandant on their comfortable appearance. It is announced the Prince and Princess of Wales will visit the hut on Saturday.

The principal events yesterday were the first stages of the Alexandra and Prince of Wales competition. The Alexandra is competed for by individuals at two distances, 200 and 600 yards, seven shots at each, the first prize being £20 and the total number of prizes 350. At 200 yards Pte. J. G. Goudie, Quebec, made 35, and at 600 yards 33, but one competitor made 33 at the 200 yards range, and then a possible at 600 yards, so beating Goudie.

Prince of Wales—First Range.

This is a squadded competition open only to winners of N.R.A. gold, silver or bronze, affiliated associations or counties medals (not recruits or revolver medals). Distances are 200 and 600 yards, ten shots at each. There are 64 prizes, aggregating £300, the winner receiving the Prince of Wales prize of £100 and the badge. At 200 yards Pte. Goudie, 8th Que., and Pte. Smith, 21st, made each 49, but other competitors than Canadians made five possibles and fourteen forty-nines.

Capt. John Crowe and Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe are so disgusted with their scores in the Prince of Wales at 200 yards that they will not shoot over the 600 yards range in the same match. The first made 48 and the second 40.

Other Results.

In The Daily Telegraph match, seven shots at 600 yards, the following places and prizes were taken by Canadians:

Pte. Neil Smith, Stewart, 34th place, £3.

Sergt. W. Gould, Guelph, 74th place, £2.

In The Graphic, seven shots at 500 yards, Lance-Sergt. Fowler of the 12th York Rangers, took 60th place, winning £2.

Capt. Crowe, of Guelph, was 109th, winning £2.

In the 600 yards sweepstakes, Capt. R. Dillon, of Whitby, was second, winning £2 10s.

In the Stock Exchange, a match over 200, 500 and 600 yard ranges, Corp. R. McGregor, of Ottawa, took 21st place, winning £2.

Pte. Neil Smith was 27th, winning £2.

Pte. A. Baynton, of the 48th Highlanders, was 78th, winning £1.

Capt. Crowe, 81st place, and Lance-Sergt. Fowler, 64th, each won £1.

OTTAWA TO TAX BACHELORS.

They Get the Benefits of Civilization, But Do Not Pay.

Ottawa, July 19.—A proposition to have a tax imposed upon bachelors in Ottawa is to be laid before the City Council by Ald. Desjardins. He intends to have the finance committee consider the advisability of an application to the Legislature to secure authority for such action.

"There are some bachelors in Ottawa," Ald. Desjardins stated, "who own property and pay taxes, but there are a great number who do nothing of the sort. They use our streets and have the benefit of the whole corporation service without paying a cent toward the maintenance of the city. These, too, nearly all belong to a class who are well able to pay by reason of their holding positions which give good salaries. They should pay taxes as well as the rest of us.

"The special tax, moreover, may have the tendency of increasing the number of marriages. Old bachelors are far too numerous in Ottawa."

Grass and Water.

The amount of water given off by an acre of grass is said to be thirty hogsheads a day.

Odd Old Records.

The British museum contains records and books written on bricks, oyster shells, bones and flat stones, and manuscripts on bark, ivory, leather, lead, iron, copper and wood.

After One Year.

Ottawa, July 19.—The Government has just received the first official information of the wreck of a steamer in charge of the Northwest Mounted Police at Herschelle Island, which occurred on Aug. 25, last year. This station is 2,000 miles north of Edmonton, which accounted for the belated information.

Killed By Lightning.

Chalk River, July 19.—During heavy thunders and hail storm Sunday night, William Hurley, a station man, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. He leaves a wife and three small children. The Presbyterian Church was also struck and slightly damaged.

Killed at Burlington.

Hamilton, July 19.—George Wooley, C. P. R. brakeman, fell off the train and was killed at Burlington Junction yesterday morning. He lived at 170 East Wood street.

SIEGE OF PORT ARTHUR

EASTERN GIBRALTAR AND GENERAL STOESSEL, ITS COMMANDER.

A Brave Man to Defend a Strongly Fortified Post Against a Determined Foe—Japs Now Have It Surrounded by Sea and Land—The Case May Become Desperate, and the Siege Is Likely to Be a Notable One.

Port Arthur is a fortress of extraordinary strength, and it is commanded by an officer of exceptional courage and determination, Lieutenant-General Stoessel. But the strength of the fortress and the nerve of the commandant will be put to a severe test during the siege by the Japanese. It is said the Russians would have evacuated Port Arthur some time ago had it not been for the loss of prestige they would have suffered in so doing. However that may be, the Japanese now have it surrounded, were within ten miles of its walls on the 26th May, and it is too late for such a move, so the fortress must stand a siege, and the temper of its commandant is such that it is not likely to surrender at the first politely preferred request of the enemy. General Stoessel in a proclamation to his garrison not long ago declared that they must fight to the finish, as he would never give an order to surrender, and he pointed out that there was no means of escape except by fighting. "On three sides there is the sea," said the proclamation of the general, "and on the other will be the enemy." Thus the case will become desperate if the Russians are unable to send re-enforcements to Port Arthur's relief before the store of provisions and ammunition is exhausted.

The Russian general staff claims that there are supplies enough at Port Arthur to last a year. After the Japanese had sent expeditions to attack the railroad running to Port Arthur and destroy it at several points the Russians repaired the damage and at great risk sent one train load of ammunition over the line, so as to have as large a quantity of war material as possible on hand before the siege began in earnest.

Re-enforcements for General Kuropatkin, consisting of 100,000 men, are being hurried, but it is impossible to rush soldiers over the Trans-Siberian Railroad at any great rate of speed because the troops carrying capacity of the single track railroad cannot be much in excess of 1,000 men a week after necessary supplies for the troops already in the field have been delivered. If no more than 1,000 men a week could be carried over the road, it would take about two years to get all these 100,000 men to the relief of Kuropatkin and of Port Arthur.

Vicksburg was invested by General Grant on May 18, 1863, and it surrendered on July 4 of the same year. The Confederates had about 25,000 effective men at the beginning of the siege and rations for sixty days. The Ottoman army under Osman Pasha was besieged by the Russians at Plevna from July 18 to Dec. 10, 1877, the final surrender of the 43,000 Turks who were taken prisoners being the critical event of the Russo-Turkish war.

General Stoessel distinguished himself in this war with Turkey, which he entered as a volunteer engineer in the engineer corps, rising rapidly in the service. He was with the Russians in the campaign against the Boxers in China in 1900 and accompanied the expedition for the relief of the beleaguered foreign legations in Pekin. He planned an important movement, the success of which resulted in the capture of Tientsin. His command crossed the Lutai canal on a pontoon bridge under fire and captured a number of batteries after losing 150 men. He was conspicuous in the remainder of the campaign, and his men fought side by side with the Japanese.

Port Arthur, which is also known as Lushk'ow, was simply a fishing village until selected as a naval station by Li Hung Chang, acting under the advice of German engineers. The harbor is formed by an oval inlet of the sea and is about two miles long by a mile wide. The high bluffs on each side are fortified so strongly as to make it seemingly impregnable. The fortifications, which surmount every hill on the land side, are semi-inclosed works of great strength. It is said that very few of the forts which were in existence during the Chinese occupation and when it was captured by the Japanese during the Chino-Japan war now remain, as the Russians have supplanted them by stronger works and have also extended the defenses in various directions. Upon Hwangchin Hill, at the east of the entrance and rising some 265 feet above the sea level, there is a battery of four sixty-three and a half ton guns.

After Lovers' Quarrel.

Berlin, July 19.—A young woman, Lucena Melitzer, aged about 23, committed suicide here Tuesday night by taking Paris green. It would appear that she was in company of her young man about 10 o'clock Sunday night at the home of her sisters, Frederick street, and it is thought that she had a quarrel with her lover, as immediately after he left her she went to her room and took Paris green, lingering in dreadful agony till about 5 o'clock yesterday morning, when she died.

Shoe Brush.

A strip of carpet glued to a piece of wood will remove mud from boots quickly and without the slightest injury to leather. It is far better than the usual brush.

The Los Islands.

The Los Islands, ceded by England to France, got their name through the carelessness of an engraver. The Portuguese charts described them as Los Bolos, but the engraver who copied from them omitted the noun and only reproduced the article.

Civet.

Civet, which is one of the essential ingredients of nearly every high grade perfume made, is taken from the pouch of the civet cat, an animal found in Abyssinia.

The Art of Gravedigging.

There is an establishment in Brussels for teaching the lugubrious art of gravedigging. It was founded by a cemetery company and was so successful that it received official approbation. All candidates for the post of sexton in Belgium must have graduated at this unique academy.

Potato Peelings.

Potato peelings, if dried in the oven, are very useful for fire kindling. If sufficiently abundant they may be used instead of wood, but in any case they will economize it.

Origin of Pearls.

The contested theory that pearls are due to a parasite in the oyster was first advanced by Filippi in 1852. Several recent observers have confirmed the view.

Aberdare's Boast.

Aberdare, in Glamorganshire, has probably more places of worship within a limited space than any other town in the United Kingdom. One short street contains four chapels and one church, while in the two roads running parallel there are five chapels, one church and a mission hall.

Milton.

Milton was extremely anxious to have his poems properly punctuated.

Saccharomaniacs.

People who are excessively fond of sugar and confectionery are called "saccharomaniacs." Professor Ooston, a British chemist, declares that kidney and liver complaints are caused by too much indulgence in sugar.

Cheese Eaters.

Every person in England consumes on an average twelve and one-half pounds of cheese per annum, and more than half of it comes from abroad.

Shaving.

Probably few people in getting shaved have noticed what a lot of work there is in the operation. A curious observer counted the motions of a barber's hand during the process and found them to be 678.

The Frigate Bird.

The frigate bird can feed, collect materials for its nest and even sleep on the wing. The spread of the frigate bird's wings is very great, and it can fly at a speed of ninety-six miles an hour without seeming to move its wings to any great degree.

Kid Gloves.

To make a first class kid glove, from four to six months are required for the various operations essential in preparing the skin.

Library Books.

Many mothers take the trouble of having adjustable paper covers to slip over the books brought into the home from public libraries. In these days of microbe fear such a course insures peace of mind, even if nothing else is gained.

Burying a Check.

A miserly rich man by will directed his son and heir to put $5,000 from the estate into the father's coffin. The canny heir wrote out a check for the amount and buried that with his parent.

VERY BAD FALL.

Mrs. McDonough, Rubidge-st., Had Head Severely Cut

An unfortunate accident happened to Mrs. A. McDonough, an aged lady living on Rubidge street, near All Saints' church yesterday morning. She was standing on a table putting up some curtains on the window, when she missed her footing, and fell heavily to the floor striking her head on the table. A neighboring lady heard the noise, and ran to her assistance, and found Mrs. McDonough very badly hurt. Dr. Coughlin was called, and dressed the wounds, but the injured lady is suffering severely today.

Brevities.

—There was no police court this morning.

—The C.M.B.A. excursion to-morrow promises to be well patronized.

—The Sunday school picnic of St. Andrew's church took place down the river today, and a large crowd accompanied them.

—The members of St John's choir go to Fenelon Falls tomorrow. Bus leaves for Chemong from Post Office at 7.15 sharp.

—During the last three days we have been experiencing some very warm weather. On Sunday the thermometer reached 92 deg., and today it touched 100 in the shade.

—To show that he has not forgotten us, Mr. Dickson Hall has sent to us a paper from Berlin, Germany. As it is in German we have had it aside for more leisurely perusal.

—A local liveryman had the misfortune to be relieved of the sum of $25 between here and Port Hope on Saturday. He did not notice his loss until he was boarding the eastern train at Port Hope.

—The man who predicted a cool summer following the heavy rains is now trying to explain that the hot wave is an extra, just thrown in because there was a little more heat than would go round evenly over the globe.

—And still the demand for house room continues. Several mechanics who have come to town are unable to find houses into which to move their families, and say they must get out to some burg where cooksheds are rented at $10 per month and anything habitable is not held at high figures.

—The moonlight excursion arranged for by the All Saints' church for to-morrow night over the lift lock has been cancelled, as the lift lock is unable as yet to be operated after dark, according to instructions received from Ottawa. Any person who has purchased tickets may get their money back from the persons from whom they procured them.

—The new pavement on the north side of Hunter-st. to the bridge has the rough finish instead of the smooth, as heretofore laid. General opinion seems to be that the rough surface is an improvement, affording a better foothold, though well in the interests of the boot and shoe man. Sliding a boot sole over the pavement is much the same as rubbing it with a coarse file.

—Rapid progress is being made with the foundation of the new Y.W.C.A. building, corner of Aylmer and Simcoe-sts. By the end of the week the foundation will be bank high, and ready for the out stone capping. Some of the stone will be cut at the Longford quarries, from which it comes, and a part cut in Toronto. The contractors have struck luck in the shape of a fine layer of sand right in the centre of the excavation. This was piled up and will serve for the foundation work.

—The humors of the dearth of of houses find illustration in the following mix-up: A citizen received notice to leave the house he occupied, and not finding a house that he could rent, decided to buy one. He did so, taking a double house, one half of which was occupied. He leased the other half to a tenant, and gave notice to the man in the first half to get out. This the party refused to do, saying that he had leased from the previous owner, subject to his remaining in possession as a tenant of the part he occupied, even if the place was sold. This claim was found to be a good one, and he stayed. The new tenant of the second half then refused to give up, and the owner, who had bought the building to make home, found himself out on the street.

—Another phase of the house famine. The owner of a house desired very much to sell the building occupied by a tenant. He gave the tenant notice to quit, and to further the end in view, blocked repeatedly the efforts made to secure another place, hoping in the meantime that the tenant would buy. Presently the tenant found a house and prepared to move, giving notice of his intention to leave to the landlord. In the meantime an agent offered a second house, and the landlord, hearing of this, properly advised his tenant to take it, and that he might not be saddled with two houses, to give up the house first engaged. Then the landlord secured both houses, and the tenant found himself without a house, and obliged to arrange and stay where he was at a higher rental, or buy outright.

PETERBOROUGH OLD BOYS

Held a Meeting in Toronto Last Night.

At the meeting of the Peterborough Old Boys, held in St. George's Hall, Toronto, last night, arrangements were made to come to Peterborough on Toronto's Civic Holiday, Monday, Aug. 1. They will travel by special Grand Trunk train, going by way of Port Hope, and on their arrival here they will be treated to a special demonstration of the workings of the new lift lock on the Trent Canal, through the courteous permission of Engineer Rogers. Mr John Braden, first vice-president, was in the chair.

VERY SUDDEN DEATH

Of Mrs. Geo. Moncrief, of Smith Tp., Yesterday Afternoon.

Mrs. Geo. Moncrief came into town yesterday morning by the 11.30 train from Smith, and proceeded to do some shopping. She was seized with a violent headache and went into a drug store to get relief but not getting any, she went to Dr. Bradd's office, and asked if she might be allowed to lie down a short time. Shortly after lying down she was seized with convulsions, and in the second one she expired. Everything possible was done for her, but it was unavailable. Dr. Gray, the coroner, was called, but did not think an inquest was necessary.

Deceased was the wife of Mr. Geo. Moncrief, of Smith, and was well known and highly respected by all. Several children are also left to mourn her demise. She was a sister of Mr. Gardener, confectioner, George street.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Moncrief will take place tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock from her late residence, 4th line of Smith, near Fowler's Corners, and proceed to Omemee cemetery for interment.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Lift Lock Excursion.

What promises to be the best excursion of the season has been announced to take place on Thursday, 21st instant, to Burleigh Falls. The steamer City of Peterborough will leave the Wolfe street wharf at 8 a.m., the lift lock at 8.30 and Nassau at 9.30, arriving at Burleigh Falls at 10 o'clock, where special arrangements for dinner have been made. This will afford the best opportunity of the season to view the canal and experience the thrilling trip over the lift lock in the largest and most commodious steamer on the inland waters. It will be the first appearance of a Rice Lake boat on Stoney Lake. Special pilots have been engaged so that no delay may be occasioned. The steamer will leave Burleigh on her return at 3 o'clock arriving in Peterborough at 8 p. m. The Review has been requested to state that only a limited number of tickets will be offered for sale so that those who desire to go should secure them at once. Tickets for the round trip $1 and may be procured at the Times bookstore, Ormond O Walsh's and Sailsbury's bookstore. The sale of tickets will be withdrawn as soon as the limit is reached.—1d.

Boat Trip of the Season.

T.A.S. DEFEATED HASTINGS.

By the Score of 5 to 2 at Hastings Yesterday.

The T. A. S. lacrosse team went to Hastings yesterday, accompanied by a number of supporters, and defeated the Hastings team by the score of 5-2. The game was a good clean one, and the referee, Mr. Lancaster, of Havelock, did not have to do any penalizing. In the first half neither team secured a goal, though the T.A.S. shot one from inside the crease, which was not allowed. The play in this half was very ragged on both sides. In the second half the teams steadied down and the spectators witnessed a nice exhibition. This win of the locals practically gives them the championship of this district, although they have a tie game to play with Port Hope and home and home games with Millbrook. Following was the line up.

T. A. S.		Hastings.

Referee—T. P. Lancaster, Havelock.

The weather was extremely hot for lacrosse and towards the end of the game the players were completely fagged out, and in the last five minutes the Hastings bunch were all in. Teh T.A.S. play their next league game here on Friday evening with Millbrook and in order to stay in running must win. Millbrook is always noted for putting up a stubborn contest so a good game will result. Everyone should see the match and assist in bringing at least one lacrosse championship to Peterborough this year.

LACROSSE.

Belleville Intelligencer: Our old friend "Reddy" McMillan bumped into another bunch of misfortune on Saturday when the Shamrocks of Montreal and Cornwall played. "Reddy" was playing inside home and it seems that, according to a despatch, in the third quarter McMillan checked Currie with considerable force and the gut of his stick put an ugly scratch on Currie's head which bled profusely. Currie then did the baby act, throwing the ball at McMillan and rushing after him with his stick. Robinson more than avenged him, however, by cracking McMillan over the head. There was a general mixup for a while and the referee penalized McMillan twenty minutes, Currie ten and Robinson only five. "Poor Reddy!" He seems to get up against most of the trouble there is going.

BASEBALL.

We have been asked to publish the following:

A great game of baseball has been arranged for Wednesday evening, when the Inverlea Park nine and Nicholls oval teams will clash for the championship of the northern district. The Inverlea team will line up as follows: Roaring Bill Kelly 1st; Hemlock Shaw cf, Cucumber Togus ss, Silk Worm Clegg 2nd, Tommy Long c, Bunny Pollock lf, Lift Lock Newell rf, Mike Bellingham 3rd, Life Chip McCorry p, Choppy Curtis spare. The Nicholls Oval team will line up as follows: Pat Brotherson 2nd, Lady Jim Rutherford p, Maureen Vinette ss, Slippery Allison 1st, Punk Brumble rf, Flag Tail Flannery cf, Slippery Oil If, Wool Pick Shaw 3rd, Dark Horse Long c.

There will be special police to handle the crowd, and Mr. David Trotter has consented to sing at the second innings.

Flaherty is still maintaining his old reputation. On Saturday in a game between Galt and Acton, he struck out fourteen men, allowed no walks, and only five hits.

FOOTBALL.

At Berlin yesterday the champion W.F.A. team of Galt, were defeated by the Scots of Toronto, by the score of 2—1 in a hard fought battle. The Scots are now champions of Ontario.

VAGARIES OF FASHION.

Mohair Is Very Popular—Black and White Taffeta Silks.

Mohair is once more to the fore among tailor made materials. It is seen in white, in gray, in heliotrope and in a new rich shade of red.

Black and white taffeta silk is used for many gowns, both tailor mades and dressy creations. One of the former seen recently had its jacket made blouse fashion. The back was tucked into a wide swathed belt. The front and sleeve cuffs were trimmed with applications of grass green cloth outlined by black and white braid. The skirt was made very full. It was laid into tucks around the hips, but allowed to flare from the hips downward. The rest of the skirt was plain with the exception of a cluster of three large tucks about five inches from the bottom.

Very many trimmings are of oriental embroidery in figures which can be detached and used singly or in groups. Prominent among these are embroideries combining grass green and red.

The picture shows a taller made of purple mohair. The coat is strapped a darker shade, and the wide cuffs and hip yoke are also strapped.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A Queer Will.

Ingenuity runs to madness at times in the conditions imposed in wills. A trial in court some years ago was to test the legality of a will which stipulated that to inherit the prospective legatee must drink all the water in a certain sea. Fortunately for common sense the court awarded the legacy without stipulation.

From Over Study at School

This Girl Became Pale, Languid and Nervous -- Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Her Well.

MRS. R. WAREHAM, 267 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., states:—

"One of my children suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, and in fact was all run down, pale and languid. These troubles we attributed to over study and confinement at school. She began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I can say that we have found this treatment exceedingly helpful. It has relieved her of headache, settled her nerves, and built up her system wonderfully. We can see a great change in her, as the color is returning to her face and she is gaining in flesh and weight."

"I know it. That is why the idea attracts me. I want to do something ridiculous—something unconventional—while I have this lovely hour of freedom. You are always free. You do not understand."

"What do you want to do?"

"Wear your uniform and inspect the prison."

"You inspect prisons? Why, you live in one!"

"I know. I live in the main building, but I have never yet looked into a cell. I have heard stories of all sorts of cruelty, and yet those who have been in the dungeons say there is no cruelty. I want to see for myself."

"Well, I will take you with me when I go."

"The colonel would not consent. He forbids us to enter the prison portions of the place. I want to go tonight, and I want to be you—you, Alexis. I want to be the inspector general of prisons for an hour."

He looked at her in bewilderment. Her eyes were brilliant. A flush came to her cheek and went again, leaving it white. Her bosom rose and fell. She let it rest against the breast of the prince.

"Such an absurd impossibility to ask!" he said. "You would be missed."

"No, I would not. Speak to the colonel. Tell him you and I are going somewhere—anywhere—to talk and arrange matters for the betrothal. He will tell the governor, and we can go unmolested. I have set my heart on it, Alexis. You say you love me and that I can do anything. I am willful and must have my way."

"But how can you get my uniform?"

"Are you not a guest of the governor? You have other uniforms. Go put one on, bring this with you and wear a great cloak that covers you. We will go to the prison, and in my own room I can put on your uniform. Then you shall be my staff officer, and we will go and inspect the prison."

"It would cost me my sword if it was discovered. But you cannot be serious—you, a refined Russian girl, to don the uniform of an officer and go masquerading in a prison!"

"But can't you see? It is the oddity, the capriciousness, the very wildness and wickedness, that appeal to me. Had you been caged a year you would fight a duel for the mere exhilaration."

"Well, if you must have your way, you must. I will go and tell Colonel Jurnieff that we are going to seek a quiet spot to talk and that you have almost given your consent to the announcement of our betrothal."

"Tell him I have, since you will do as I ask." And he kissed her rapturously.

"God help me through!" she murmured after Alexis had gone. "It is my life or his. I am willing to lose mine for him."

CHAPTER X.

INSPECTING THE PRISON—A CHANGE OF ORDERLIES.

WHILE the governor and Colonel Jurnieff were planning the great surprise to be given the guests two stealthy figures left the palace. Jurnieff's carriage was easily found, and they stepped into it. Prince Dellnikoff was dressed in a plain uniform he had worn as lieutenant of cavalry. He wore over that a long black cloak that concealed every inch of his apparel. In his arms he carried his brilliant uniform of inspector general of prisons.

Alma laughed, called him a good prince and patted his cheek. She let his arm rest about her waist as the carriage hurried to Jurnieff's home. Arriving, she led the prince by a private way to Jurnieff's apartments. A servant met them and was dismissed with the curt remark that Colonel Jurnieff had sent them for something and they needed no attendance.

She left Dellnikoff in the library and took the bundle from him. She hurried to her room. When she got there, she knelt and prayed. Marie found her on her knees and lifted her.

"Marie, hush for your life! Swear by all that you hold sacred you will not breathe a word of what you see tonight until tomorrow. Better yet, go; see nothing."

"Can you not trust me, mademoiselle?"

"I cannot trust myself. Go! You know nothing. I came home from the ball feeling ill."

The maid retired, and Alma dressed herself in the uniform of the inspector general of prisons. In a closet were a pair of boots she had purchased. The long cloak she had bought, as that worn by Dellnikoff, covered her completely. With a pair of shears she cut her beautiful tresses short. In her excitement she left them where they fell upon the floor. She went to the library and threw aside the cloak.

"Alma," cried the prince, rushing to her, "you are superb! The uniform becomes you better than it does me, though it is a trifle large. Where did you get the boots?"

"They were left by a—by a soldier who knows Marie, my maid. Oh, I am so nervous! I can scarcely bring myself to the lark now that I have won you to it. But we have gone so far, we must go on. We will have some wine before we go."

She left the room and returned with two glasses filled.

"Drink to the success of our expedition!"

He took the glass from her hands and asked her to touch her lips to the rim. She did so and gave him her glass for the same salute.

"To the success of the handsomest, dashingest, daringest inspector of prisons the czar of Russia ever had!"

They both drank the toast.

"Now come. I know the way," she said. "The papers—the commission—I found them in the breast pocket."

"You will not need them if you make your voice heavier."

Amazed, half conscious of what he was doing, the prince followed. She led him down a staircase to a stone corridor. The captain of the prison guard came to meet them. The visor of her cap was pulled down. She stiffened up and addressed the guard with dignity.

"I am Prince Dellnikoff, inspector general of prisons. Here is the seal of the czar. I am here to examine your dungeons."

"Yes, your excellency," stammered the captain. "There are but few of us here tonight. The governor's ball"—

"I know. I just left there."

"But you need an escort through the dungeons."

"I never have an escort. I wish to see for myself. My orderly is escort enough."

Dellnikoff stood silent, marveling at this splendid acting. "Have I really known the girl before?" he asked himself.

"What prisoners have you?"

"In the lower dungeons there are but few. They are waiting for transportation to Siberia."

"Do you keep all prisoners for Siberia in the lower dungeons?"

"Yes, excellency."

Alma knew the general plan of the prison and went at once to the lower dungeons. She found the key that unlocked the iron door that led to the corridor.

"That wine—I drank too much. I shall not be fit for the toasts at the supper," whispered the prince.

"It is the close atmosphere. We shall be out again soon. You will feel better."

They passed in, and she locked the door behind them. The first cell they came to she unlocked. A dirty looking wretch was lying on his pallet of straw.

"He will be cleaner in Siberia," said Alma as she locked his cell.

The next cell was empty, and she did not relock the door. Each cell door in turn she opened and looked in. They had almost completed the round of the corridor when she heard the prince breathing heavily. She turned and found him leaning against the wall.

"I am ill!" he whispered. "My head is splitting."

"Come out in the air," she said.

"I c-can't!"

His head drooped. With a strength born of the exigencies of the moment she thrust him into an empty cell and tore the long cloak from under him. Then she locked the door. Swiftly, breathlessly, with panting bosom and trembling hands, she opened door after door. In almost the last cell of the row was Harvey Irons asleep.

"Wake up! Wake up, M. Irons!" Alma whispered. He sat upright.

"Who are you?"

"Hush! Our lives depend upon your silence and obedience. I am Alma, now acting as the inspector general of prisons. Come with me!"

"Alma! Alma Jurnieff!" he whispered as he looked at her in bewilderment.

"Yes. Come with me. I will help you to escape. They will kill you here. Come, now. Wear this cloak and do not speak."

Marveling, he staggered to his feet and donned the cloak.

"Follow me," she whispered. "Do not speak. Our lives depend upon your discretion."

Harvey obeyed her injunctions. She led him to the corridor.

"How did your excellency find things?" asked the captain of the guard timidly.

"In good condition, all but the atmosphere. It is so close it has made my orderly ill. We will step out into the cool air for awhile, after which we will return and resume our inspection."

The bunch of keys was heavy, and as the guard took them from Alma's hand he did not notice that one had been abstracted. He hung the bunch in its accustomed place. A moment later the doors of Tiflis prison had closed behind Alma Jurnieff and Harvey Irons.

CHAPTER XI.

PRISON ALARM.

COVERED by their long cloaks, unnoticed by the few who were in the streets, Alma and Harvey Irons went toward the river. Several times Harvey tried to speak, but Alma would not permit it. Winding through the narrower streets, met twice by sentries and giving the password, which she knew, Alma led him safely to the wharf where the hayboats lay. Lanterns moved here and there, but most of the boatmen were asleep. Alma knew where the boat of Charka of Ashkar was moored and hurried to it. It could not well be mistaken, for it was the largest of the hayboats, and its cargo had not been touched.

"Charka!" she said as the two stepped upon the boat. "Charka of Ashkar!"

"Who calls Charka of Ashkar?" asked the sleepy boatman as he emerged from the dingy little box he called his house.

"It is I, Charka, who purchased your hay and bargained for you to deliver it at Astrabad with a passenger."

"Good. You were long coming. The hay has been wanted many times. But I knew you would come, so I did not sell."

"M. Irons," said Alma, turning to Harvey and putting out her hands, "I can do no more. Knowing that you were in danger of being killed or of being sent to Siberia, where your identity would be lost and all hope of rescue gone, I determined that I would set you free if possible. I have purchased this hay, and Charka will deliver it—you, rather—at Astrabad, where you will be safe from the persecutions of your enemies."

"But what of you, my darling girl, my bravest? You have sacrificed yourself for me."

"They dare not kill me," said Alma.

"They would do anything. But I cannot go like this. Give me just a moment. Let me take you in my arms!"

Charka, with a fine Oriental propriety, walked back to his little box.

"Oh, if love could repay you, dear," said Harvey, taking her in his arms, "if the devotion of a life could pay you for what you have done, how gladly would I make you happy! But what can I do? It will be impossible for me to see you now."

"Some day—some day I will come to you."

"Come with me now," raining kisses on her lips. "I will not go without you. I will go back and give myself up."

"Dear one, do not speak like that! It is ungrateful!"

"So it is, darling. You have cut off your hair, your beautiful hair, that I loved. How did you accomplish my rescue? Tell me what you did?"

Alma told Harvey the whole story.

"I even gave myself up to abandon for your sake, dear one," concluded Alma. "I permitted his lips to touch mine; I allowed his arm to encircle my waist. Oh, the thought of it burns, but it was for you!"

"Great heaven! What a woman! And now you want me to leave you to their vengeance! Russia does not forgive. You will be sent to Siberia. You must come with me or I shall remain and fight for you."

"And be killed! You must go at once. Kiss me, dear one! It may be the last."

"It shall not! Hark! The alarm gun of the prison!"

The dull boom of a cannon smote the air.

"Here, we must get out of this," said Charka, rushing from his box. "The soldiers will swarm along the river in no time."

"My uncle has thought we were gone too long," said Alma, trembling with the weakness of reaction. "He has searched for us in the palace and, not finding us, has gone to the prison. He has questioned the servants and learned that we were there. Perhaps he has even discovered that the prince is locked in a cell. My dear one, hide under the hay. Charka, where can he hide? He is your friend, and your enemies are after him!"

With a sweep of his hand Charka showed them the immense cargo of hay. It rested upon many long planks that met in the middle of the boat and extended some feet over each side. Under the planks was a vacant space.

"Under there," said Charka. "There you will be safe. Hurry! The dogs of Muscovites will soon be here."

"You shall not go back to imprisonment or death," said Harvey. "Come with me! We will go to America, where you will be safe and happy. Come, my darling, come."

Alma hesitated. Again sounded the alarm gun. Perhaps the thought of solitary imprisonment, perhaps the knout, perhaps Siberia, came to her.

CANADA ATLANTIC SALE

Premier Admits That Government Was Approached.

Mr. F. D. Monk's Resolution For Greater Protection of the Native Tobacco Industry Voted Down—Western Indians Do Well—Improvement Since June, 1876—At Qu'Appelle They Raised 65,000 Bushels of Wheat Last Year.

Ottawa, July 19.—In the House yesterday, before the orders of the day were taken up, Hon. John Haggart asked whether any letter or assurance of any kind had been given by the Government or a member thereof that would encourage the proprietor of the Canada Atlantic Railway to believe that an arrangement for its purchase or lease would be carried out after the next general election.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in reply, said the Government had been approached, but the Government had declined to consider the question just now.

Received Royal Assent.

The Commons was summoned to the Senate chamber yesterday, and Mr. Justice Sedgwick, as Administrator, gave the Royal assent to fifty-two bills. This brings the number of bills formally passed up to one hundred. Among the list of bills assented to yesterday was the bill to amend the National Transcontinental Railway Act. The tortuous course of the legislation governing the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is therefore at an end.

Subsidy Before Completion.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson introduced his bill yesterday respecting the payment of certain railway subsidies. The idea is that the Government can fix the amount of subsidy before the railway is completed.

Mr. Monk's Amendment.

F. D. Monk moved an amendment on going into supply yesterday declaring that the Government had failed to extend to the native tobacco industry the protection and encouragement it deserves.

In support of his resolution Mr. Monk quoted statistics to show that the importation of foreign leaf tobacco was far in excess of what it should be under a system of adequate protection. He also pointed out that the measure tardily proposed by the Minister of Inland Revenue to combat the actions of the American tobacco trust in Canada, would be found to be totally inadequate, and advocated the application of an amendment of the criminal code as the only effective cure for this evil.

Hon. L. P. Brodeur defended the Government's policy of suppressing combines by providing that no Government licenses shall be permitted to enter tobacco combines. He acquitted Mr. Fisher of the charge of neglecting the tobacco industry, as two specialists had been sent to Wisconsin to investigate the subject and they would be sent back again by this autumn. The Minister created some amusement by declaring that prices of smoking tobacco had fallen sixty per cent. since the new duty had been introduced and the production of Canadian tobacco encouraged.

Seymour Gourley congratulated the Minister of Inland Revenue upon having been the first Cabinet Minister to make a distinct, clear-cut declaration in favor of the policy of protection and throwing away the hypocritical garments in which his party had masqueraded so long. Mr. Gourley believed in encouraging the growth of tobacco in Canada to the exclusion of the foreign article. Statistics, he said, did not show that the increase in the growth of tobacco was general throughout Canada. In 1898 Ontario produced eleven million pounds of tobacco, and last year only seven millions.

Mr. Monk's amendment was negatived on a vote of 19 to 50.

The Destitute Italians.

Sir William Mulock stated in reply to Uriah Wilson that as soon as Judge Winchester had concluded his investigation with the employment of aliens on the Grand Trunk Pacific, he would enquire into the circumstances of the arrival of a number of destitute Italians in Montreal last winter.

The estimates of the Department of the Interior were under discussion in the House last night.

Western Indians Do Well.

When the Indian Department estimates were being considered, E. F. Clarke asked how much the Indians of the west were helped by the industrial schools.

Mr. Sifton replied that there has been a marvelous improvement in the condition of the Indians since June, 1876, but the full advantage was not derived from the industrial school, where the Indians were taught trades because the Indians had not the mental, moral or physical stamina to compete with the white man.

Day schools and boarding schools were found to give better results. At the Qu'Appelle agency the young Indians are placed on separate farms on a separate part of the reserve where their relatives cannot eat them out of house and home. These Indians last year raised 65,000 bushels of wheat, and have large herds of cattle.

Other Estimates All Passed.

Thanks to the oppressive heat, which took the life out of the House, Mr. Sifton was able to make fine progress. All the appropriations for the Indian Department were passed, whereupon the House concluded that it had sweltered long enough and adjourned at 10.30.

Struck By Lightning.

Comber, July 19.—During a severe thunderstorm here yesterday afternoon, Adam Fenale, a farmer, living near the village limits, while in the act of putting up an eavetrough on his residence, was struck by lightning and lies in an unconscious condition. The Town Hall was also struck, and one corner shattered.

They Are at Liberty.

Toronto, July 19.—At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Samuel Thompson, Thomas Kerr and Abraham Cahoon walked out of the Central Prison. They had been sentenced by Judge Winchester to two years for ballot-stuffing, conspiracy, etc., at the last municipal elections. None of them look any the worse for their confinement.

Fell Off a Bridge.

Brockville, July 19.—A man named James Beggs was brought to the General Hospital yesterday in a serious condition. He went to sleep on the bridge across the canal at Cardinal and fell off. He sustained a compound fracture of the thigh, lip and chin cut and numerous bruises. He is about 30 years of age.

POISONED.

Rank Poison is Created when Food does not digest, and that is when Sickness Commences.

If the man or woman who does not feel right, will at once look to putting the stomach right they will strike the right key—Every ache and every pain is a cry of poison, too much of which has been made in the process of converting food into nutriment. It may be the backache or sideache of the kidneys telling they are overtaxed and cannot filter the poison—It may be weight, pain or distress in the stomach that tells of fermentation and decomposition instead of digestion—It may be headache, dull, depressed, which tells poison has reached the fluid which surrounds the brain cells. The first cause is the same—lack of gastric juice to properly digest. ANTI-PILL, the Great System Treatment, is a new discovery which so acts on the mucous membranes of the stomach, a natural supply of gastric juice is assured. To prove the wonderful action of ANTI-PILL, you may have a free trial bottle by addressing Wilson-Fyle Co., Niagara Falls, Ont.

THERE'LL BE NO SAW-OFFS.

Conservatives Thoroughly Preparing For Protest in September.

Toronto, July 19.—J. P. Whitney, K.C., is at the Queen's. Last night Mr. Whitney stated that there was nothing to any extent transpiring in local politics just at present.

Asked concerning the protests, he said that the Conservatives were carefully and thoroughly preparing their cases.

"Any possibility of some saw-offs?" he was asked.

"No," was the assuring reply, "there have been no proposals made to us nor would they be entertained if they were."

There are eight disputed constituencies, the Conservatives protesting in North Perth, North Grey, North York, North Norfolk and the Soo, while the Liberals would like to reopen North Renfrew, Muskoka and Centre Bruce. The trials are scheduled for September.

TORONTO MISSIONARY DROWNED.

Rev. H. Swartout, Who Went to Vancouver in 1894, Meets Death.

Victoria, July 19.—Swartout drowned on 11th. Boat capsized outside Ucluiet. Part of boat found today. James R. Motion.

Toronto, July 19.—The above is the telegram received by Dr. R. P. MacKay of the Presbyterian Foreign Missions yesterday. Rev. M. Swartout was a former Torontonian, who went out to Vancouver Island in 1894 as mission teacher.

Prior to his appointment in the West, Mr. Swartout was an elder in Parkdale Presbyterian Church and superintendent of the Sunday school. He has a wife and two daughters living in the city.

AMMUNITION FOR CANADA.

Factory May Be Erected at Ottawa Under the Militia Department.

Ottawa, July 19.—Sir Frederick Borden has about concluded a contract with the Armstrong-Whitworth firm in England to erect in Ottawa an ammunition factory, which will be capable of turning out 10,000,000 rounds of ammunition per year. Working night and day the factory will be capable of turning out 20,000,000 rounds. It is understood that the company also agrees to erect factories of small capacity in Manitoba and British Columbia whenever required to do so by the Canadian authorities.

Western Canada Crops.

Winnipeg, July 19.—Within the last five days crop conditions throughout the entire Canadian West have shown marked improvement. Up to that time parts of districts of Saskatchewan, Alberta, Assiniboia and Western Manitoba were beginning to suffer for want of rain, and the crop was at a standstill. Within the past forty-eight hours abundant rains have fallen all over these districts and the drouth is relieved before any damage had been done. The weather is now most favorable, warm enough for good progress and not too hot. Straw is strong and vigorous, but not too lush to prevent early ripening. All grain is well headed out, except in small areas where sown late, and even there the heads are formed, though not so far advanced.

Fell Off Train While Asleep.

Kingston, July 19.—The remains of a man were found Sunday on the G.T.R. track near Kingston Mills, but no identification was possible. They were those of a canvas man employed with Forepaugh & Sells' circus, its trains having gone east on that day. The body was not mutilated, and it would seem to have fallen off while asleep and been killed.

Sheriff Archibald McNab Dead.

Cornwall, July 19.—Archibald McNab, sheriff of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, died on Saturday night at Breadalbane, Glengarry, aged 79 years. Mr. McNab sat in Parliament as a Liberal from 1875 to 1878, as representative for Glengarry. He was reeve of Lochiel township several years, and also held the position of Warden of the united counties.

Another Effort to Be Made.

Chicago, July 19.—Another effort is to be made to settle the stock yards strike by arbitration. To-day President Donnelly of the striking unions will send to the packers another letter, asking for a conference. In his letter yesterday President Donnelly urged the men against violence.

Murder and Arson.

Halifax, N. S., July 19.—A murder has been committed near Bristol, N. S. A man named McKimmick shot Wm. Dougherty dead, shot a brother of the latter through the chin and then set fire to the house and escaped. The sheriff and constables are in pursuit.

Died on the Train.

These Pretty Raffia Hats.

Why don't you make a raffia hat to replace the one that was spoiled on the day of the opening of the lift lock? They are easily and quickly made, and are light and durable. The most popular colors are black, brown, red and the natural shade—a light champagne color. Directions for making these pretty hats may be found in the July Delineator, and the raffia is on sale at the Review office, the only place in town where it may be procured. 2d

THE AUDITOR-GENERAL.

Ministers Would Drive Away or Poison the Watch-dog.

The Auditor-General never assumed to prevent Parliament from doing wrong; what he asks is power to prevent the servant of Parliament, the Government, from doing wrong, and then, with the thing done, and various interests engaged in its favor, going to Parliament and snatching approval of its action from a majority. Mr. McDougall holds substantially that any question as to the proper expenditure of any Parliamentary vote is a matter for some form of judicial decision, and that the Government has no right to enforce a view which a court of justice would reject, in reliance on its power to command subsequent Parliamentary sanction. If Parliaments were sufficiently jealous of its own privileges it would take every possible means to prevent the expenditure of the money it votes otherwise than in strictest accordance with the terms and intentions of the vote as construed by absolutely disinterested authority. This is all the Auditor asks.—Montreal Star.

Of Use Every Day

Once you become acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment and the scores of ways in which it is useful in every home, you would not think of being without it. Eczema, salt rheum, scald head, tetter, chafing, chilblains, burns, scalds and every form of skin irritation and eruption soon yield to its extraordinary soothing, healing influence.

The Dundonald Meeting.

"One of those Present," a British army veteran, reports the proceedings as follows:

Ho, I was at Massey 'All lawst night
With fifty 'undred more.
Hi' never saw such a bloomin' show,
Couldn't get pawst the door.
But when I said I was at Dargai
The busher called me "sir,"
And sat me down with a lot of toffs
—Felt like a yellow cur.

Wanted to see the "Fightin' Heart,"
Bostchuman, too,—I knows,
But wot's the hodds, if 'e plays the game;
A man is inside 'is clothes.
I saw 'is work in the old Soudan
A-drillin' the camel corps—
Treated 'is men most awful white—
—Never was done before.

Don't know why 'e got the sack
—Politics, it's said;
Cawn't see 'ow a man like 'im
'As any tears to shed;
Record pure as the bloomin' snow
Honest and true as steel.
Seems to me that the Government
Put up a dirty deal.

Plenty of cheerin' wen 'e came,
Wavin' of flags and such—
Bands of music a-playin' loud
Couldn't drown it—much.
Dundonald bowed to the yellin' crowd,
Smiled at me—thats' true—
Twisted that 'andsome black moustache,
Just as 'e used to do.

Talked as straight as 'e always fought.
Meant wot 'e said, I think;
Crowd got crazier every time
'E stopped to take a drink.
Nailed the lies of 'is enemies,
Showed wot 'e meant to do—
Said 'e 'ad turned the searchlight on—
Bade 'em a fond adieu.

Band played "Rule Britannia,"
Old "Red, White and Blue,"
"Maple Leaf," and "God Save the King."
Meetin' then was through;
But the Heart shook 'ands with the platform toffs
For fifteen minutes more,
And plenty of others, like me, want round
To see 'im come out the door.

Carriage 'orses was taken out.
'Men volunteered instead,
Marched the keb to the bloomin' train,
Crowd goin' on ahead.
Good old General was shakin' 'ands,
All the way down the street,
Must 'a been awful tiresome.
I would a-been dead beat.

Well 'e's gone—It's a pity, too,
Soldiers as good as 'im
Ain't no easy to find to-day;
Don't 'ang on every limb
But if 'is enemies think 'e's beat
Just cause 'e got the mail
They can revise their opinion now—
SOON 'E'LL BE COMIN' BACK.

LORD DUNDONALD'S REPLY.

A Crushing and Irrefutable Answer to His Accusers and Culminators

Can Lord Dundonald be blamed much for seising this opportunity of replying to his critics? Let it be considered that for several weeks he has been the victim of such abuse and misrepresentation from a section of Canada as few public men have had to endure even in the heat of election campaigns. To blast his reputation and make him either odious or contemptible in the eyes of the Canadian people, monstrous lies have been invented and published by some of the most reputable journals in the country. Schemes and ideas have been attributed to him which he never thought of. Is he greatly to be blamed because at a meeting of citizens gathered togethered to do him honor, he ventured to deal with the calumnies which have been directed against him and attempt to justify himself and his official conduct? In thus speaking in his own defence it was impossible for him to refrain from referring to alleged governmental shortcomings, for these are the issues between him and the government.

We regard Lord Dundonald's speech as a crushing, irrefutable reply to those who have been accusing him of attempting to introduce in Canada the spirit and practice of European militaryism. Whether or not it was in good taste to speak as he did, no one who reads the speech as reported, will fail to be impressed with the spirit of manly candor and sincerity which characterizes it, nor to realize the strength and reasonableness and convincing character of the speech, considered as a reply to the speaker's assailants.—Hamilton Herald, Indep.

DUNDONALD RIGHT.

Liberal Approval of What He Said or Did—Mischievous Insinuation.

The Liberal Montreal Witness says:—

Lord Dundonald has not said too much. One thing we are glad he did not forget to say, and that is to repudiate in the strongest terms the very mischievous insinuations of the Minister, twice repeated, that he had in his administration been prejudiced against the French race. It is very hard to answer such a charge, which, however unfounded, is one calculated to suggest its own confirmation at a thousand points. 'The French-Canadian militia know 'full well that I have always had 'their interests at heart, and have 'been actuated by the utmost possible 'friendliness for them.' It is natural that one who has appealed, as Lord Dundonald has, to public opinion, should accept with all heartiness, the breeze of popular friendliness which his outbreak and its necessary result in dismissal, have evoked. He has declared himself a citizen of Canada and a voter, and to this role we welcome him very cordially."

MONUMENT TO BRAVE DEAD.

What is Being Done to Mark Last Resting Places.

Ottawa, July 17.—Recognizing that many Canadians are anxious to know what has been done to mark in a suitable manner the last resting place of those brave Canadians who gave their lives for the Empire during the South African war, Lady Minto has furnished the following details of the work which has been carried out up to date by the Committee of the Canadian South African Memorial Association:—The number of Canadians who fell during the war was 246. Of this number 11 were buried at sea or drowned, and their bodies not recovered, and 5 are buried in England, whilst it was ascertained that relatives or comrades-in-arms had provided permanent and lasting memorials in 12 cases. After deducting these numbers, there remains a balance of 218 for whom memorials were required. By the end of March memorials for the graves of 193 out of this number had reached South Africa from here, the remaining 25 being graves which have not yet been definitely located. As soon as this has been done memorials for the same will be despatched from here. In the meantime the work of erecting the memorials already in South Africa is proceeding rapidly. Col. H. S. Greenwood, lately commanding the 3rd Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons, and now employed in connection with the South African railways, has most kindly undertaken the heavy task of distributing the memorials on their arrival in South Africa, and of supervising the erection of the same. That the work is being carried out in an efficient and thoroughly satisfactory manner, in spite of the immense difficulties caused by the large extent of ground over which the graves are scattered, is evinced by his latest report, dated June 14, 1904, of which the following is an extract:—"I have heard from Armstrong, who is at Bloemfontein, and he informs me that he hopes to have all the memorials erected which he has in hand at present. We have also finished them at Johannesburg. Those along the railway to Belfast have not been erected yet. However, everything is progressing favorably."

Lady Minto hopes that, previous to her departure from Canada, Col. Greenwood may be able to report that the memorials over the graves of the 193 Canadians which have been located are all in position, and that the remaining 25 graves have been definitely located.

M'MASTER EVANGELISTIC BAND

Held Enthusiastic Service in Murray-st. Church Last Night.

Murray-st. Baptist church was well filled last night at the first week night service of the McMaster Band. The meeting was very interesting, as in a quiet, but strong and manly way the young men presented the claim of Christ to the audience. Their method of conducting the service from beginning to end is worthy of hearty commendation. They do not attempt any of the sensational methods that have often antagonized thinking people, but they rely mainly on the reasonableness of the gospel to convince.

Promptly at eight o'clock the service began. Mr. W. A. Cameron, the leader of the band, conducted the opening exercises. The quartette sang, "O, My Redeemer," in a very pleasing way, after which Mr. Huddlestone gave a short, practical address on "The Human Element in Salvation." Mr. Williamson gave a beautiful solo, "Wandering Child Come Home," and Mr. Nobles followed with an address on "The Universatility of Sin." Then the quartette rendered "Jesus will Let You In." Mr. Cameron, the leader, then closed the meeting in an earnest appeal to the unconverted to accept Christ. The service was over by 9.15.

Miss Alice M. Smith, of Minneapolis, Minn., tells how woman's monthly suffering may be permanently relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never before given my endorsement for any medicine, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has added so much to my life and happiness that I feel like making an exception in this case. For two years every month I would have two days of severe pain, and could find no relief, but one day when visiting a friend I ran across Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,—she had used it with the best results and advised me to try it. I found that it worked wonders with me; I now experience no pain, and only had to use a few bottles to bring about this wonderful change. I use it occasionally now when I am exceptionally tired or worn out."—MISS ALICE M. SMITH, 804 Third Ave., South Minneapolis, Minn., Chairman Executive Committee, Minneapolis Study Club.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carries women safely through the various natural crises and is the safe-guard of woman's health.

The truth about this great medicine is told in the letters from women being published in this paper constantly.

DEATH OF MRS. HOWSON.

Funeral Took Place Yesterday at Keene.

Otonabee lost one of its oldest residents on Saturday, July 16th, by the death of Julia Poole, wife of Mr. William Howson, of Otonabee, in her 85th year. The deceased was a daughter of the late Thomas Poole, Esq., and sister of the late Col. Poole. She was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1820 and came to Canada with her parents in 1830, residing in Peterborough till her marriage in 1839. Her husband, four sons and two daughters survive her. The sons are John W., of Campbellford; Thos. P., of Otonabee; George H. and Edwin C., of town, and the daughters, Mrs Wm. Pugh, of Fraserville and Mrs. Thos. Pugh, of Otonabee. The funeral service was conducted at the Methodist church, Keene, of which Mrs. Howson had been a member for over sixty years, by the Rev. Mr. Secombe, assisted by the Rev. Mr. McDonald.

BAD YEAR FOR UNDERWRITERS.

Losses During First 6 Months Are Many Million Ahead of 1903.

New York Commercial: Semi-annual reports now being made by the large insurance companies confirm the impression which has been current for some time in insurance circles that 1904 will prove an exceptionally bad year for the underwriters. Even if the big conflagrations like those at Baltimore, Toronto, and other cities are left out of the question, it is known that the fire loss for the first six months of 1904 exceeds that of the similar period of 1903 by $19,000,000. The suspicion is general among underwriters that the insurance loss will be very little less than the amount stated.

Blames Sun Spots.

One underwriter, who is perhaps, endowed with more than his share of imagination, suggested that the best explanation he could offer is that as this is a year of maximum sun spots, the unfavorable conditions should be attributed to that celestial phenomenon. Apparently he forgot that the crops, which some prominent authorities contend are affected by the period of great sun spots, this year promise to be good, if not very good. That would indicate that the malign influence, if such there be, has about passed. But sun spots aside, there is a curious periodicity about the insurance loss, which has been heavy for many years past, and apparently reached its maximum this year.

In the first six months of 1904 the fire loss was more than $172,000,000, including the Baltimore losses, which is more than double the amount of property destroyed in the same period of 1903 or 1902.

CARPET BUYERS

For the next two weeks the Carpet Floor of the GOLDEN LION will be the scene of busy crowds after rare bargains. July is the month for clearance of Carpet stocks—the time when we are compelled to pocket quick losses. All through the store real and radical reductions appeal to buyers, but nowhere more temptingly than in our Carpet Department. The importance of this two week's sale is enhanced by the fact that manufacturers have just advised us of an advance of from 5c to 10c per yard—doubtless owing to the scarcity of the wool. If you want to save money on floor coverings, put that and this reduced price list together:—

BEST ENGLISH 5 FRAME BRUSSELS CARPET, 8 good patterns to select from, 5-8 borders and 3-4 stairs to match, worth to-day $1.35 per yd., sale price, made and laid $1.17

GOOD QUALITY 4-FRAME BRUSSELS CARPET, worth to-day $1.10 per yard, sale price, made and laid 89c

RUSSIA'S CZAR MUST APOLOGIZE

Particulars Discussed in Grave Tones in England.

ENGLISH PAPERS OPINIONS

Russians Lost 2,000 at Maotien Pass and Japanese 300--Russian Cruiser Sunk--After the Japanese.

London, July 20.—Once again the leading English newspaper editorials are in the gravest tones on the Russian seizure of British vessels. Even the conservative Standard declares that the nation looks to the Foreign Office to take more effectual action than the ordinary conventions of diplomatic intercourse prescribe.

"The case is not one for fastidious treatment. If nothing is done officially to relieve the painful strain, the irritation of this country may grow into stubborn resentment. We cannot, even for the sake of peace, sit down under a series of undisguisedly provocative measures."

A similar warlike tone pervades almost every other paper. The Morning Post says Great Britain cannot tolerate the seizure of the steamer Malacca except by the abandonment of her self-respect as a great power.

An Armed Pirate.

The paper declares that either the volunteer fleet steamer St. Petersburg is an armed pirate or Russia has violated the Treaty of Paris.

"Palmerston," says The Post, significantly, "would not have required half an hour to make up his mind what to do in such a case."

All details in connection with the seizures of ships by the Russian volunteer fleet of steamers are printed in the most prominent type. No such bitter feeling has been aroused in the English press since the German Emperor's telegram to the Boers.

Intense Apprehension.

Intense apprehension prevails at Cardiff and other British coal ports, and the chartering of vessels for the Far East is practically at a standstill.

From all sides come urgent demands that the Government take swift action to prevent a recurrence of seizures by the volunteer fleet.

"Russian Piracy," as one paper heads it, takes precedence of all other news.

Admiral Sir Edmund Robert Fremantle, in The Daily Chronicle, says "The crisis no doubt is grave, but I hold that our safest course would be at once to inform the Russian Government that our cruisers have orders to prevent our merchantment being interfered with by vessels which we cannot admit to be men-of-war, and to request that their proceedings be disavowed, and that they be immediately recalled to Russian ports after their prizes have been released."

The Daily News declares that the Cabinet yesterday drew up a strongly worded protest which will be forwarded to St. Petersburg. The Cabinet, the paper says, had an interchange of views with the Admiralty and a program of action in the case of eventualities was decided upon. It was decided also to protest to Turkey

Another Cruiser Goes.

London, July 20.—The Constantinople correspondent of The Daily Mail, in a despatch dated July 18, says: "A Russian cruiser has just passed through Odessa with several guns covered with canvas on her deck. She also carried torpedo tubes."

Russians Lost 2,000.

General Kuroki's Headquarters in the Field, via Fusan, July 20.—More Russian troops were engaged in Monday's battle at Maotien Pass than in previous engagements. There were probably double the number of those which took part in the fight at the Yalu River, while opposed to them were only one brigade and one battalion of the Japanese forces. The Russian loss is estimated at 2,000. The burial of the dead continues. The Japanese casualties aggregated 300. The engagement has conspicuously demonstrated the wonderful efficiency of the Japanese infantry. They proved incomparably the better marksmen, with more initiative, and they outfought and outgeneraled the Russians on every point.

DISAVOWS THE FLEET'S ACTION

Russia Claims the Commander of the Fleet Misunderstood the Orders

STR. "MALACCA" ARRIVES AT PORT SAID

The Crew Prisoners Under Armed Guard, and the Passengers are Indignant—They Will Appeal to the British Government for Redress.

SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE REVIEW

PARIS, July 20.—It is learned from a high diplomatic source that Russia is prepared, at least in part, to disavow the action of the Red Sea fleet, because it is claimed the fleet's commander misunderstood orders.

PORT SAID, Egypt, July 20.—The liner Malacca, seized in the Red Sea by the Russian cruiser Petersburgh, arrived here to-day with many indignant passengers on board, and the crew under armed guard.

The passengers were transferred to the Marmora, of the same line, and will proceed to their destination. They announced their intention of appealing to the British government for redress.

Japanese Losses Were 300.

Tokio, July 20.—The Japanese losses in the fighting at Motien Pass and its vicinity Sunday were 299 killed or wounded. The Japanese lost four officers and thirty-nine men killed and fifteen officers and 241 men wounded. The casualties all occurred in the second division. Gen. Kuroki mentions, but he does not enumerate, the trophies captured. He estimated the Russian losses as exceeding his own.

When the Russians finally retreated, they were pursued by the entire Japanese line. Seven battalions of the enemy made a halt on the heights of Tawan and with four guns checked the Japanese pursuit.

Japs Fought on Without Officers.

The attack on Hsiamatang began at 8 o'clock in the morning. A battalion of Russian infantry and a squadron of cavalry assaulted the Japanese company on outpost there. The Russians received reinforcements until they were a regiment strong. The Japanese resisted doggedly. All their officers were either killed or wounded, but still the men fought on. The Japanese finally received reinforcements, and the Russians retired at 8 o'clock in the afternoon.

Cho Foo, July 20.—A junk with eight Russians and fifty Chinese on board arrived here yesterday afternoon, five days from Port Arthur. The Russians refused to talk, but the Chinese say that on July 11 and 12 the Japanese captured and occupied the 4,000 men one of the eastern forts near Port Arthur. Before reinforcements arrived the Russians cut off the 6,000 troops in the fort and exploded mines which resulted in the killing of every Japanese soldier there.

Russian Cruiser Sunk.

St. Petersburg, July 20.—A story has been going the rounds that three cruisers reported by Germany were destroyed to the Russian service, and joined the Vladivostock squadron. One of the cruisers and a torpedo boat, it is added, struck mines and went down. The story is not confirmed. The Admiralty has no news of any vessel having been lost at Vladivostock.

Aims the Japanese.

Tokio, July 20.—The armored cruisers Rossia, Rurik and Gromoboi of the Russian Vladivostock squadron, passed through the Tsugaru Strait into the Pacific Ocean to-day.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1904.

CONTEMPT OF PARLIAMENT.

The truth of Lord Dundonald's statements and the dishonesty of the concealment practised by the Ministry have suddenly had light thrown upon them. Two years ago Lord Dundonald seems to have reported that there were not sufficient rifles for our militia nor sufficient ammunition for the rifles. Now through Ministerial organs we are told that extensive arrangements have been entered upon to supply these deficiencies on a scale never previously adopted. This is a very practical acknowledgement that this serious deficiency really existed through the fact was concealed from Parliament in an unconstitutional disguised and incomplete manner by burking the report of the General Commanding. Possibly one of the services for which the people of Canada have to thank Lord Dundonald is that his searchlight has stirred up the ministry to hasten the arrangements for self-defence. In this matter we have a fresh instance of the contempt with which the Laurier administration habitually treats Parliament. A report made according to the statute disclosing these dangerous deficiencies was most improperly withheld from the representatives of the people, and they were left in complete ignorance that any remedy was contemplated till they got circuitous information through the irregular channel of a favoured organ of the Ministry. To hide everything as long as possible from Parliament and thus to make it public through its hireling press is the favorite method of the Laurier Administration. We have no longer Parliamentary government. The ministers frame their policy on any matter carrying it into effect as far as possible by order-in-council or by departmental action. Then when the concurrence of Parliament is absolutely necessary, they inform their caucus of what they have done and conspire to force the matter through the House by the mere numerical force of their venal majority. There is no full information given to the representatives of the people and no free discussion, but a foregone conclusion is carried out by the Cabinet and the caucus. It is only a mockery of responsible government, being more akin to the Doge of Venice and his Council.

"Mamo me impeach la-a-at.' That's foreign.

Does the Administration intend to publish Lord Dundonald's suppressed report or do they mean to continue the dirty work of giving false versions of it through their organs?

It was very wrong of Lord Dundonald to show that the Globe's account of his suppressed report was a malicious misrepresentation. The general was thereby trenching on politics and attacking the civil power.

Lord Dundonald is still an officer of the Canadian militia; he is honorary colonel of the 91st Foreigners of Hamilton. However he is not to be allowed to assist at the presentation of colours to his regiment. Mr. Fisher would not like it.

The game still goes on of the Ministerial press assailing Lord Dundonald for extravagant demands for expenditure on the militia and on fortifications while the Administration continues to dishonestly conceal from Parliament the General's report showing what he really recommended.

The latest Liberal discovery about Lrod Dundonald is that he is "a mock hero." Next! He has already been described as a foreigner, a dragooning stranger, a drunkard, an insubordinate officer, a liar, a pipe-clay soldier, a military dictator, a snobbish Lord, beneath contempt, ignorant of English, the servant of Mr. Fisher And a wolf ready to devour the Canadian lambs. And he is no pigsam of etiquette as to object to these compliments.

The Ottawa Free Press thinks that Lord Dundonald should have devoted some of his time at the reception in Toronto to the constitutional question of the subordination of the military to the civil power. Lord Dundonald never offended against that subordination or disputed it. He and his officers were carrying out the instructions of the civil power, of the Minister, when they were obstructed in the performance of their duty by a party heeler without any authority in the matter. Mr. Fisher is not the civil power.

A SHIFTING OF POWER.

The Scots No Longer the Strength of the Liberal Party.

The prospect of another Dominion general election next fall calls to mind the remarkable change that has been effected in recent years in the Liberal, or old Reform party, which will then be appealing to the people. The old Reform party was dominated by Scottish Canadians, chief among whom for a long period were Brown and Mackenzie. These were stalwarts whose names will be perpetuated in Canadian history. In the days of Brown and Mackenzie there was no indefiniteness about the principles the party stood for; though the means employed to advance them may have been as blameable as were charged against that greater Scotchman, Sir John A. Macdonald.

The Scotch supremacy in the Liberal party continued for years after the death of Brown and the shelving of Mackenzie, and from mere force of habit the Scotch voters have been chiefly Liberal. But by degrees the old Scotch domination in the Liberal party, which bred their allegiance to that party, has been undermined. Its doom was sealed when in obedience to French-Canadian dictation, the party in Ontario turned somersault on the Riel question. Right up to the day of Riel's execution, the Liberals of Ontario continued to demand that he be hanged and taunted Sir John Macdonald with indecision. The very day after the hanging, the Liberal party, led by the Globe began to veer round and in a short time the whole chorus joined in condemning Sir John Macdonald for executing Riel.

The promoters of that degrading and unnatural violation of principle were not the Scotch Liberals. But the rigidity of Brown and Mackenzie was no longer present, and Scotch Liberals humbled themselves to the depths at the bidding of the Quebec contingent, then led by Mercier and Laurier. The great Blake was the titular leader, but already the leadership was in Quebec. The Scotch Liberals paid an awful price, for the price has been their own degradation. Like Esau they sold themselves fro a mess of pottage. Quebec was the artful Jacob who greedily seized every advantage possible from the yielding Esau.

French-Canadian leadership has become more pronounced year by year. To keep the French vote up to the desired height of unanimity, it has to be fed with the nationalist homage for which it craves. In Rielite days Laurier vied with Mercier in demagogic appeals and wished he were on the Saskatchewan with a musket. With another election now approaching, the French-Canadian appetite calls for more excitement, and Sir Wilfrid gives it in the form of the taunt of "foreigner" and "stranger" at Lord Dundonald, a Scotchman of Scotchmen, followed by dismissal from high office. In Ontario it is claimed that he made a slip of the tongue, but the French press glory in his taunt which marks the final subjugation of the Scotch element in the party. But Dundonald does not suffice as a victim. Auditor-General McDougall, another Scotchman, has to go, and all that is needed to cap the iniquity of his virtual dismissal is the appointment of a French-Canadian to succeed him. The Scotch are no longer "in it" as the saying goes. Even locally their claims for offices are unheeded, and other elements of population are served ahead of them.

For eighteen years, dating from Riel's execution, has this process been under way. Whether it will continue indefinitely the next general election will tell. It will be seen whether the old types of Liberals who form the basis of Liberalism in Ontario, will consent longer to be fetchers of wood and carriers of water to the French-Canadian element, who are not contented with equal rights. There is no doubt thousands of Scotchmen are at this day saying to themselves that they have been deceived and used and humiliated to the limit.—Stratford Herald.

Kept Poor by Doctor's Bills.

Many a family is kept poor by doctors' bills when just as good and oftentimes better results could be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which sell at 25 cents a box of twenty-five doses. As one pill a day is the most frequent dose under any circumstances there is no treatment obtainable which costs so little, and at the same time none which brings about such excellent results in derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

Those Pretty Raffia Hats.

Why don't you make a raffia hat to replace the one that was spoiled on the day of the opening of the lift lock? They are easily and quickly made, and are light and durable. The most popular colors are black, brown, red and the natural shade—a light champagne color. Directions for making these pretty hats may be found in the July Delineator, and the raffia is on sale at the Review office, the only place in town where it may be procured. 2d

GUELPH MAN'S BIG WIN

Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe Won Martin Rifle at Bisley.

Vancouver Man Stands a Good Chance of Winning the Secretary of State Prize—Two Canadians Make Many Bulls in King's Prize—This Is Prize Which Replaced Queen's Won By Sergt. Hayhurst in 1895.

Bisley Camp, July 20.—In the Alexander Martin Competition yesterday, at eight hundred yards, Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe, of Guelph, took first place, winning a Martin match rifle, valued at £20 16s.

Staff-Sergt. Bayles of the 10th Grenadiers, was sixth, winning £2.

Pte. H. Tyers, of the Grenadiers, was eighth, winning £2.

Pte. A. Baynton, of the 48th Highlanders, took seventeenth place; Staff-Sergt. W. Mortimer, 10th Grenadiers, 24th place, Corp. R. McGregor, Ottawa, 26th place. Each of these latter won £1.

Keystone Burgundy.

In the Keystone Burgundy, a 1,000 yard match, Pte. H. Tyers was fifth, winning £2. Sergt. Mortimer, with eighth place, won a similar amount. Sergt. Bayles, with 10th place; Sergt. Crowe, with 11th place; Pte. Neil Smith, with 18th place, and Sergt. Davidson, of Montreal, with 29th place, each won £1.

Hour Glass.

In the Hour Glass Competition, at 600 yards, Canadians took the following places and prizes: 4, Pte. J. W. Smith, £5; 11, Pte. Smith, £2; 19, Sergt. C. R. Crowe, £1; 21, Pte. H. Tyers, £1; 33, Sergt. Davidson, £1; 35, Pte. T. Westman, £1.

Armourers' Company.

In the Armourers' Company match at 900 yards, the following were the positions of our men: 2, Major Moore, £6; 3, Corp. McGregor, £4. 5, Sergt. Bayles, £2; 7, Pte. Neil Smith, £2, 15, Pte. H. Tyers, £1, 10, Sergt. C. R. Crowe, £1; 27, Capt. Dillon, £1, 32, Sergt. Davidson, £1.

Prince of Wales.

In the Prince of Wales competition at 200 and 600 yards, the Canadians did not do so well. The following is their standing: 13, Pte. Neil Smith, £3; 14, Corp. McGregor, £3.

Alexandra Match.

In the Alexandra, at the same distances, they had better success. The following got into the prize list: 5, Pte. J. G. Goudie, £10; 28, Pte. H. Tyers, £5; 96, Major Moore, £3; 99, Pte. C. S. Scott, £3; 109, Sergt. Crowe, £3; 189, Sergt. Davidson, £2; 190, Capt. Anderson, £2; 224, Corp. McGregor, £2; 308, Sergt. Youbill, £2.

Secretary of State.

It looks as though the first prize in the "Secretary of State for War" competition was going to fall to a Vancouver man. Pte. J. Perry, of the 6th D.C.O.R., has scored 48 out of 50. The range is 800 yards. The first prize is £20.

In the "Secretary of State for War," Pte. T. Westman, of Ottawa, made 44; Sergt. W. Fowler, of the 12th York Rangers, 40, Major W. P. Moore, 38.

Kynoch.

In the Kynoch Competition, at 1,000 yards, Major Moore succeeded in making only 38 out of a possible 50. A bicycle and 1,000 rounds of ammunition is the first prize in this match.

Shooting For King's.

In the "King's Prize" Competition Pte. Neil Smith, of the Essex Fusiliers, who has been doing things at Bisley, made a possible in the first stage at the 200 yards range.

The "King's Prize."

"His Majesty the King's Prize" has never been won by a Canadian. It is the most coveted of all Bisley honors, consequently of all shooting honors in the world. To win it a man must excel at the 200, 500, 600, 800, 900 and 1,000 yards' ranges.

The King's Prize was instituted in 1901, replacing the "Queen's Prize," which had been given since 1860. The "Queen's" was won only once by a Canadian, that was when Pte. Hayhurst, of the Hamilton 13th, brought it home in 1895.

The winner gets £250 given by the King; the N.R.A. gold medal, and the N.R.A. gold badge.

Canadians at 200 Yards.

Shooting at 200 yards, Pte. Neil Smith, of the Essex Fusiliers, and Staff-Sergt. T. S. Bayles, of the 10th Royal Grenadiers, each made a possible. Other scores were: Bayston 29, Blair 32, Capt. J. Crowe 33, Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe 31, Davidson 32, Dillon 32, Gardner 34, Goudie 32, McGregor 31, Mortimer 30, Perry 31, Scott 30, Youhill 32, Fowler 29, Gould 29, Tyers 29, Westman 32, Moore 34, Will 32.

Besides the Canadian scores, there were 25 possibles at the 200 yards range and 60 cards were returned with 34.

Sergt. Fowler, of the 12th York Rangers, made 29, Sergt. W. Gould, of Guelph, made 29; Pte. H. Tyers, of the 10th Royal Grenadiers, made 29; Pte. Westman made 32.

In the "Secretary of State for War," Pte. H. Tyers scored 46 out of a possible 50.

NEITHER TRUTH NOR DECENCY.

Squealing Because Object of Their Slanders Strikes Back.

The independent press without exception object to the unworthy treatment of Lord Dundonald. The Ottawa Journal says:—

"Lord Dundonald has been the victim of misrepresentation, together with dismissal from the Canadian service. It is childish in those who have attempted to butcher him, to make a party holiday, to squeal because he strikes back. Neither truth nor decency was adhered to by some cabinet ministers and by the leading Liberal organ in the earlier part of the dispute with the general; why do they expect silence now? The editor of the Toronto Globe found himself in awkward position on the platform in Massey Hall on Friday evening, but why? There would have been no awkwardness for him there had he not been endorsing and manufacturing statements about the general which were not true. The great popular ovation accorded to Dundonald in Toronto should be welcome to all Canadians whose manliness and spirit of fair dealing is not subordinate to party considerations."

The Joy of Living

It is only the healthy who find a real joy in life. Weak, nervous, languid and discouraged people find new hope and energy in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. With new rich blood coursing through the veins and the thrill of new nerve force sent tingling along the nerve fibres, the joy of living returns and disease and weakness disappear.

CLOVER SOD.

Its Beneficial Effects Upon the Soil Do Not Seem to be Understood.

Clover is one of Ontario's most valuable farm crops. It is generally recognized by Ontario farmers to be a heavy yielder of hay, which furnishes a large amount of valuable food constituents. Its beneficial effects upon the soil, however, do not seem to be so clearly understood. Scientists who have made a careful study of the influence of clover on the soil tell us that after large crops have been removed from the land the soil is actually richer in nitrogen after growing clover than it was before owing to the large amount of nitrogen which the clover roots have obtained from the air. As a rule, farmers grow clover and timothy together and are therefore unable to ascertain the comparative influence of each off these crops on the soil.

We have conducted a series of experiments at the Agricultural College, Guelph, on three different occasions in order to ascertain the comparative value of clover and grass sod for crop production. We first grew clovers and grasses upon separate plots and removed the crops, after which the land was plowed and other crops were sown. The results, therefore, show the influence of the roots remaining in the soil upon the productiveness of crops following the clovers and the grasses. In 1902, barley was sown after each of four varieties of clovers and three varieties of grasses in four different places in our experimental grounds. The average results of the four tests in pounds of barley per acre were as follows: Red Clover, 1516; Lucerne, 1450; alsike clover, 1427; mammoth red clover 1468, meadow fescue grass 1068, orchard grass, 1015, and timothy 916. It will therefore be seen that the red clover sod gave an increase over the timothy sod of 570 pounds, or nearly 12 bushels per acre.

In another experiment which was completed in 1900, in which winter wheat was sown on bush clover and grass sods, it was found that an average of 3194 pounds of wheat per acre was obtained from the clover sod, and only 2340 pounds from the grass sod.

In 1899 a mixture of oats and barley was sown on clover sod and also on grass sod. The results were very marked, as an average of 2256 pounds of mixed grains per acre was obtained from the clover sod and only 1078 pounds of mixed grain per acre from the grass sod.

By averaging the results of these three grains we find that the crop grown on the clover sod gave an increase over the crop grown on the grass sod by fully 50 per cent.

The results of these experiments help us to appreciate the beneficial influence on the soil from growing clover. It also indicates the suitability of a properly cultivated clover sod as a preparation for winter wheat or for spring grain.—Prof. C. A. Zavitz, Guelph Agricultural College.

Russian Brides.

One of the most interesting sights in Russia is the exhibition of would be brides, which takes place annually at Klui, near Moscow. On the festival of the Epiphany (Russian style) all the young women who wish to get married in the course of the year are mustered in a long row in the principal street. In order to make themselves attractive to the young men who come to see and admire them they don nearly everything in their possession. Not only do they put on their best clothes, but also a lot of curious old family trinkets, including sometimes valuable scarfs, cloaks and furs, and they even bring with them their bed linen and other articles of their wardrobe. A procession is formed, and on their way to the church the young men approach the would be brides, engage them in conversation, and if the young people think they suit one another a formal visit is paid to the parents.

A Worm Controlled by the Moon.

Samoa, Viti, New Zealand and the Gilbert islands are the natural habitat of a vermicular oddity in the shape of a worm whose every action is controlled by the phases of the moon. By the islanders it is called palolo or mbalolo, a Fijian name having reference to the coincidence of its movements with the moon. These "moon eyed" creatures of the lower order only make their appearance at spawning time, usually on the very day of the last change of the moon in October, but only when that change is a last quarter. Should this change not occur during the last days of the tenth month and fall at the beginning of November, then another lunar month will intervene before they come from their hiding places. Palolo was first scientifically described by Dr. J. H. McDonald in 1857.

CONSTIPATION, PAINS IN THE BACK

Caused Keen Distress at Times--Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Made Thorough Cure.

Mr. Jas. H. Harvey, baker, 641 George street, Peterboro, Ont. states: "I was troubled very much with constipation and pains in the back. At times the pains were sharp like a stab in the back with a knife and caused me great suffering.

"I heard of many being cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and decided to try them. I am pleased to say that they soon helped me, and I used them right along until cured. I never have pains in my back now and only occasionally take a pill in order to keep my bowels regular."

The Unknown Man

By Troy Allison

Copyright, 1903, by E. M. Whitehead

Stanley wondered how it had happened, who she was and all about it.

The letter had dropped out of the library book that he had hastily selected on his way home. The sheets of paper were unfolded, and the letter commenced in a way that made him think he had as much right to read it as any one else. It was a love letter; undoubtedly the whole heart of the woman was in it, but it commenced "Dear Unknown Man." Before he read it he thought some silly schoolgirl had put it in the book with the intention of getting up a flirtation, but he realized that it was a letter a schoolgirl could not have written.

This woman was tired and disappointed. She had evidently expected more than she had found and through some whim had written all her disappointment and heartache to the only person that could fully understand it—her ideal man.

There was a longing for an understanding and for a sympathy that the known men had never been able to satisfy. Stanley could imagine that she had relieved a spell of despondency by putting her thoughts on paper on the same principle that he talked to his dog or smoked an extra cigar. The thing he could not understand was that a woman capable of such depths of intellect and feeling should have had so silly an impulse and put the letter in a library book.

There was no name or address—at least she expected no reply.

He got up from his easy chair and walked to the window. A cold, driving sleet beat against the pane, and the electric lights from the street turned the night into a ghastly gray.

His dog had followed him and stood with his fore paws on the window ledge.

A sudden, furious blast striking the pane made the dog rub his head against his master and whine his desire for companionship and affection.

"Are you lonely, too, old fellow? Two old bachelors like us, living in a flat, ought not to expect to be gay. You ought to be glad that you are not out in the storm, you ungrateful wretch." He stroked the dog's head and thought of the loneliness expressed in the letter he had just read.

"By Jove, she knows the real article. It must be the lonely in a crowd feeling. She seemed to be a society woman—the monogram on her paper didn't indicate a poor girl working for her living."

He went back to his chair before the fire and wondered if it would be possible for him to locate her. He fancied he would like to meet her and study the woman, aided by his knowledge of her inner thoughts as expressed in the erratic letter.

Suddenly he threw away his cigar with an expression of satisfaction, "Sherlock Holmes might have solved it in less time, but he couldn't have thought of an easier method of finding her."

The next morning at the library the woman in charge gave Stanley the attention that his looks always won from women.

"The book was last returned by Joan Ransdell, 2008 Massachusetts avenue. I am sure it will be very kind of you to return anything that you found in it. Very few people would trouble themselves to that extent."

Stanley kept the letter in his pocket, and if his acquaintances could have compared notes during the next few days they would have thought that he was suffering from a mania that took the form of an acute desire to learn if his auditor knew a certain Miss Joan Ransdell.

He himself had only been in the city a few months after an absence of several years. He thought she must be a newcomer, and the address given carried out his idea that she was not among the working class.

It was a week before he met a mutual acquaintance. Then Jim Dent repeated his question: "Know Miss Ransdell? Certainly I do. She takes dinner with us tonight. Do you want to come, old man?"

When Stanley was getting into his evening clothes, he carried on his usual conversation with the dog: "Don, old chappie, I'm going to see her tonight. We are going to solve a problem. Be good, old fellow, and don't get lonely, and I'll tell you about her when I get home."

He brought a rug from the bedroom and put it in front of the grate. The dog looked on knowingly and then lay down on it to take the ham bone that his master always left as a special treat when he went out to dinner. The pretty waitress in the cafe had a habit of coaxing the elevator boy to give the nice bones to the nice dog that belonged to the nice man on the fourth floor.

Don beat the floor with his tail in satisfied approval while Stanley put on his overcoat, patted him on the head and went out.

When he came in that night the dog heard his step and met him at the door.

He put on his dressing gown and slippers, sat down before the fire and took the dog's head between his knees and the palms of his hands before he spoke.

"She's all right, old boy. If I hadn't read that letter I should never have believed that she was lonely. I don't see how such a beautiful woman could be lonely, do you?"

The dog whined a reply that the master evidently took to mean that he really did not see how it could be possible.

"She's tall and slender and gray eyed, Donald, and she is about twenty-eight years old. She has slender, white hands with lots of rings, and she had on a filmsy black dress that trained after her on the floor. I generally hate to keep jumping to avoid those trains, Donald, but I swear I would make a jumping jack of myself forever to stay where I could see those eyes. I'm going to call tomorrow. If you were a man you could go with me and see her smile. Well, old brute, maybe you'll be a lucky dog some day."

As the weeks went by they reached a state of friendship that permitted Don to go driving with them in the trap.

"Old fellow," he said that night, "you've seen her, you've seen her smile, to say nothing of her gray eyes. You know we never liked women, but you don't think I'm a fool to ask her what I intend asking her tonight, do you?"

The dog whined a low melancholy tone that perhaps had a touch of jealousy in it.

"There's only one thing that worries me," he continued meditatively, "how could she have put that letter in the book? I don't believe she intended to do it, Donald, do you?"

* * * * * * *

Joan happened to have on the filmsy black dress when he asked her. Its soft trailing length lay on the white fur rug as she sat by the open fire.

Stanley had forgotten there was ever such an ailment of loneliness in the world. If any one had asked him to name all the elements in nature he would have answered, "One element, happiness, composed of Joan, black dress, white fur rug and light from a lamp with a pink shade."

"When are you going to write me your second love letter, dear?" he asked.

Joan looked surprised.

"Happiness and excitement haven't caused your mind to wander, have they, dear boy?" she asked in astonishment. "I haven't written the first one yet."

He took from his pocket the letter to the "Unknown Man."

"Here's the first," he said, and laughed at her confusion when she looked at it.

"John, I'm so glad you found it. I've been in a constant state of mortification for three months about that letter. I left it in the book while I went for a drive to take away a blue headache. Mother knew I had finished the book and sent it to the library before I returned. Didn't you think it awful when you found it?"

He wrapped the fluffy black train around her feet so that the fear of it would not keep him at an unreasonable distance.

"Darling," he said, sitting on the arm of her chair, "I was seized with a feeling of most abject humility. My greatest desire was to be 'The Unknown Man.'"

Brief Poets of Japan.

Japan is a land of poets as well as of artists and soldiers, but the Japanese poets have the great merit of brevity. They almost invariably adopt the form of poem known as the "hokka," which always consists of exactly thirty-one syllables, arranged in five or six lines.

These poems are usually devoted to an exposition of some delicate beauty in nature. One called "Kokoro ate ni" —"The Frost's Magic"—is a good example. Freely translated, it runs like this:

If it were my wish
White chrysanthemum to cull,
Puzzled by the frost
Of the early autumn time,
I would try to pluck a flower.

The Japanese poets seldom rhyme, and they do not often write love songs. One of the latter, "Akenureba," is reminiscent of Shelley's "Good Night." It may be translated:

Though I know full well
That the night will come again,
E'en when day has dawned,
Yet, in truth, I hate the night
Of the morning's coming light.

The Catfish.

A cowslip basking in the sun
All on a summer's day
Is rightly named. A little one—
Is that a catfish, pray?

Hard to Prove.

"Here is an article telling how to be happy though married."

"Huh, some men would be happy though dead."

Literal.

"Of course you have seen a house fly."

"No; it was never my luck to witness a cyclone."

Fable of the Sudden Conversion.

A long haired Doctor with curly whiskers and a new cult was expounding the beauties of his scheme to a fair haired young Scoffer.

After the Doctor had projected into the air several thousand words that were meaningless in the connection in which they were used the Young Man was happy to say that he was still in the dark and glad of it.

Finding that words were of no effect, the Doctor tried something stronger.

"My young friend," he said blandly, "money is distasteful to me, but some of the filthy stuff appears to be necessary, as the Vulgar Landlord will not keep me free of charge, as a true believer should. However, my only financial trouble is that people give me so much more money than I can use that I have to give most of it back. I need a Handsome Youth like you, who would be of such prepossessing appearance that the ladies would not be scared away, to take charge of this work of giving back the money which I despise; but, alas, you are not a believer."

It was evident that the Youth's feelings were undergoing a change. "I was wrong, Doctor," he said, "and I see where you were right. The truth as you present it is now clear to me. I feel also as you do about giving back the money. Lead me to the job."

Spring.

Sweet, gentle spring drifts down the pike
With apple blossoms in her hand
To scatter, like a sprinkling cart,
Her blessings o'er the pleasant land,
And as she sails along she sheds
Entrancing smiles to beat the band.

And makes a very pretty bow;
The farmer's boy sings as he sits
The soil politely with his plow,
And over in the pasture lot
In welcome moos the bossy cow.

The little lambs upon the green
Skip up and down and kick their heels,
And over all the land a sense
Of patent calm contentment steals,
And, basking sweetly in the sun,
The tramp that tired feeling feels.

Come trilling from the treetops tall
Songs that for six months were unsung,
And as you hear their roundelay
You wish the year were ever young.
You want to pass a vote of thanks
Because at last the spring has sprung.

THE UGLINESS OF IT.

A Bad Temper Not Only Mars Beauty, But Spoils Life.

Of all the recipes which are suggested for the process of beautifying the simple one of a good temper is left out, and yet there is nothing more personally ugly and unattractive in woman than a bad temper, though she often does not realize this till her beauty is marred and her life spoiled thereby. Other women may forgive bad temper, but men never do. It is in their eyes the unpardonable sin, and rightly so, seeing that nothing so quickly creates and insures a thoroughly unhappy home.

Let the girls who are being trained for life remember that a bad temper will as effectually ruin their chance of a happy future as any other hideous deformity, and when they would be ready to sacrifice so much for the attainment of such power as beauty, brilliance or fascination it is surely worth while to swallow something for the acquirement of so great and lasting a charm as good temper.

If a girl were to announce that she was subject to sudden fits of madness, but they were soon over, would it be likely that she would be wanted as an inmate of her own or any one else's home? Yet what else is an uncontrolled temper?—Edith H. Fowler in London Mail.

MARRY NOT A MAN--

Who never dresses up or cares how he looks except when he goes to see some lady.

Who thinks that a comfortable home and plenty to eat and wear should satisfy any woman.

Who thinks that the woman who gets him for a husband will be lucky beyond the rest of her sex.

Who bosses his sisters and does not think it necessary to show them the same consideration as other girls.

Who boasts to his men friends of his conquests among the fair sex and thinks that no woman can resist him.

Who does not regard marriage as a partnership in which there must be mutual concessions, but would be likely to think he owned his wife.

Who would like to humiliate his wife by making her beg for every dollar she desires for herself and tell what she is going to do with it.—Success.

Afternoon Tea.

Afternoon tea is becoming more and more a regular custom in this country now that we are learning the gentle art of idleness. A few suggestions of things that I have found decidedly appreciated at this function may not be amiss. Homemade bread cut in very thin slices, buttered and laid in square piles on a bread and butter plate is always relished with a good cup of tea. Currant loaf, served daintily in the same way, is very popular. In making it, take two small cups of the sponge out of the general baking and place in a different pan. Take one-half cup of butter—a small cup—a half cup of sugar, a whole cupful of currants (or raisins if preferred), one egg, and stir all together. Then mix enough flour to make a dough and set it in two bread tins to rise. When risen sufficiently, put into the oven and bake a half hour.—Brown Book.

Tooth Powder.

An excellent tooth powder that is inexpensive, pure and efficient may be easily made by any one. Mix two ounces of pulverised borax with four ounces of precipitated chalk; add one ounce each of powdered myrrh and pulverised orris. Sift through fine bolting cloth, and it is ready for use. Tooth powder bottles with adjustable covers, such as shop powder is put up in, may be saved and filled with this home-made product.

"FROG TOWN," NOT KEENE.

The Village Visited by Millions of Them.

We have been advised from the village of Keene that they are thinking of changing their name to "Frog Town." During the last week the place has been visited by millions of small frogs, and they have been so numerous on the sidewalks that pedestrians have been compelled to walk on the road to avoid them. Every year the town is visited by a large number of these small animals, but this year the number has been considerably increased and some people have attempted to convey some of them across the lake.

These small frogs make excellent bait for fishing and an enterprising man might make money if he took a few bags of them to Stoney Lake, as they sell for a cent apiece there. It would be a great relief to Keene residents if they would, as the frogs are certainly a nuisance.

ST. ANDREW'S PICNIC

Held at Idyl Wyld Yesterday—Rain Did Not Mar the Day.

The annual Sunday School picnic of of St. Andrew's church took place yesterday per Str. City of Peterborough and Sovereign, to Idyl Wyld. About 325 were on the trip and all enjoyed themselves immensely, notwithstanding the heavy downpour of rain shortly after they arrived at Idyl Wyld. They reached their destination at 12 o'clock and proceeded to have dinner. After the rain was over the following sports were run off, Messrs. Gerard, G. McBain and Robt. Rae having charge of them:

Boys, 12 and under—1, Allan Wade; 2, Norman Patterson.

Girls, 12 and over—Annie Girven, G. Botsford.

Boys, 14 and under—Ernie Thornton, Allan Wade.

Girls, 14 and under—E. Kemp, Annie Girven.

Boys, 16 and under—A. Wade, S. Wade.

Biscuit contest—Girls, Maggie Reid and Lillie Lafferty. Boys, Robbie Langford, Norman Lang.

3-legged race—Stanley Wade and Norman Lang, Charlie Thornton and Allan Wade.

Girls, 16 and under—Mabel Rae, Maggie Reid.

Wheelbarrow—Norman Lang, S. Wade; 2nd, W. Byers, and N. Patterson.

Willing Workers' race — Maggie Reid, Mabel Rae.

Straw hats, the race—F. Richardson, H. Rosborough, Arthur Vanevery.

Young ladies' race—Mamie Menzies, Olive Kyle.

Boys' best race—W. Byers, O. Brand

Obstacle race—Stanley Wade, Allan Wade.

Consolation race, girls — Miss Mathers.

A start was made for home about half-past four and the sail up the river was magnificent, the air being cool after the hot day and the bright moonlight night making the trip very enjoyable. Tea was served on the boat. The wharf was reached shortly after 8 o'clock and everyone pronounced the picnic to be a good success.

THE Y.M.C.A. CAMP ON SANDY POINT

A PLEASANT TIME AS THE END DRAWS NEAR.

A League Game Goes to the Indians —A Trial and a Severe Judge—A Bonfire and Concert.

Y.M.C.A. Camp,
Sandy Point,
July 18, 1904.

We are this morning coming close to the last word you will receive from us while in the camp this year. The day is another delightful camp day. The pleasant time enjoyed by all make the time seem all too short; a good spirit is in possession of the whole camp, and a whole month would no doubt be much enjoyed at such a suitable place as Sandy Point. Our last letter brought us up till Thursday morning last. In the afternoon the second league match was played, "Red Feathers" vs. "Cordelias." It was a good, lively game, umpire G. Hutchinson having a sharp time to keep track of all the fast runs. The "Indian fellows" were the winners by 15 to 5. Three rousing good cheers were given at the close of the game for the umpire for his straight services.

"Skinny Cats," they think the're going to win,
Let them boast and put up all their tin;
We will bet all the "mellon" we have in view
We'll beat those "skinnies" by thirty-one to two.

The evening brought forward one of the most enjoyable features of the programme arranged for the camp. Sir Max Dobbin, arrayed in fancy spectacles and gown and seated in the place of honor was a very "suggestive" judge. Experience in his line added greatly to the beautiful deep voice so appropriate. The prisoner was Maguire, and was charged with "indecent exposure" according to the chibin. Crown Attorney Robinson made a strong case, but the "whiskers" were able defended by Hutchinson, jr. The judge decided that the prisoner was guilty and gave him a severe sentence.

On Friday evening a grand bonfire illuminatd the whole water front. On the stage between the tents and the fire a concert was carried out. The chairman, Clifford Milligan, filled the position well. Ed. Eyers' selection on the mouth organ was loudly applauded. A fine representation of a Sandwich Island cannibal then challenged Mr. Jackson (a minstrel) to a duel, which soon followed. This performance was very mirth-provoking. Both make-ups did well.

"Yankee" gave a recitation, and was dressed as a sailor. Willie English followed with another recitation. The small boys do the camp credit. A humorous selection by Mr. Aplin was also much enjoyed. Credit is due Mr. Robinson, the editor of the official "Camp Jollier," for the edition presented to the audience. Most everyone caught something, from the cook to the walking boss.

In a farewell address to Mr. Aplin, our leader expressed how much all enjoyed his visit to the camp, and wished him every success in his new field of labor. Mr. Aplin replied to these expressions, saying he would always remember the Peterborough boys, and trusted they would under all circumstances "quit themselves like men." The pleasant evening was brought to a close with a hymn and prayer.

Friday was visitors' day and brought Mr. and Mrs. Madill, Miss Dobbin and Mr. Jack Macdonald. The day was very pleasantly spent at the camp. "He also serves who only stands and waits," and that was the case with most of the camp so far as the much looked for "chute" was concerned. All day Saturday one could hear the cry, "Is the chute ready." "When will it be?"

Mr. Hutchinson and Sandy were the users of two old hatchets, and the dullest handsaw that could be found in Peterborough, and by long, and some say patient efforts, it gradually came to pass that the "chute" was ready. "It won't work and I won't go," was the cry, but the tune was quite changed when Stan and Chippy landed in the water with a great splash. This "Chute" is a new feature at our camp, and is likely to be a permanent one. Many of the boys knew nothing about what it was like, and have not a very good idea now. One thing that they seem satisfied with is that, although it is a very homely structure, it is perfectly safe. Next season with better tools and more expert workmen, the construction may be somewhat more rapid. On Saturday Mr. Arthur W. Bell and Mr. Roy Webster, of Toronto, with the Harriers, composed of Messrs. W. D. Campbell, Ross Dobbin, W. Richardson and Mr. P. G. Might joined the camp.

Sunday as usual was a nice quiet day. Mr. Might led the morning Bible class. Mr. Bell conducted the service at eleven. After a good five-course dinner, of which the visitors seemed to be in good condition to partake together with the rest of us, it was very nice to be spread out on a good soft spot in the breeze. An informal talk by Mr. Beall on Japan was quite interesting to us all, and at almost ten o'clock we repaired to the tents. Mr. Campbell supplied each section with a box of A 1 chocolates, and as the boys go into everything with a good will, so they did for the chocolates. How are we faring? Why people are exceedingly good to us, and when we come home we are going to be able to prove it by their condition.

The Board then adjourned for two weeks.

NEW DEAN APPOINTED.

At the District Meeting Held in Norwood.

A meeting of Rural Deanery of Northumberland, comprising the Counties of Northumberland and Peterborough, was held in Norwood on Monday and Tuesday. Service was held in Christ Church on Monday, with sermon by Rev. J. C. Davidson. There was a good attendance at the meeting, which was chiefly convened for the election of a Rural Dean, in succession to Rev. G. Warren, of Lakefield, whose term of office had expired. A ballot was taken, on which the Rev. J. C. Davidson was elected and his name will be submitted to the Bishop for appointment. Rev. E. W. Pickford, of Norwood, was elected Secretary in succession to Rev. W. R. Armitage.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the retiring Rural Dean.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES.

Held Last Night in Murray-st. Church.

The McMaster University Evangelistic Band was again greeted with a good audience in the Murray street Baptist church. The Band conducted an open air service on the corner of George and Brock streets previous to the service in the church. They also went to the Wm. Hamilton Co's foundry at noon yesterday and held a brief service for the men. The quartette sang twice, and Mr. A. L. Nuddleton addressed the men. This meeting was very much appreciated by the employees. Last evening the service took its usual form being even briefer than the one on Sunday night. The students do not believe in long, tiresome services and endeavor to introduce as much variety of word and song as the time will permit. The singing of the quartette was particularly good. They sang "The Beautiful Country" and "Let Him In." Mr. McDonald singing as solos "His power can make you what you ought to be," Mr. McDonald sang in good voice with guitar accompaniment. Mr. D. Buchanan spoke briefly on "False refuges" followed by Mr. J. A. Nilts, whose theme was "God's wages in contrast to the wages of Satan." Mr. W. A. Cameron then brought the service to a close, making an urgent appeal to the unconverted to heed the words which they had heard. There was a brief after meeting, for which the majority of the congregation remained.

Apparently the Band has now the sympathy of the Christian people of Peterborough. They will conduct services every night at the Murray st. church, beginning promptly at 8 o'clock.

The services will continue through Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of next week.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING.

Two Men Named Ward Upset in Sturgeon Lake.

Monday night about 12 o'clock when the cottagers at Graham's landing, Sturgeon Point, were wrapped in slumber, Mrs. Robt. Kennedy was awakened by cries of distress in the direction of the lake. She at once aroused her husband, and he in turn awakened Mr. A. D. Kitchener, occupying the adjoining cottage. Without waiting to dress, and clad only in pajamas, the two men hurried to the shore, launched a boat and headed in the direction of the cries, which were repeated at intervals.

When they had rowed out about 30 rods into the lake a dark object loomed up ahead, which proved to be an overturned canoe, with a man and a boy clinging to the sides. The rescuers first lent aid to the boy, who was greatly exhausted, and their boat being small, they decided to take the lad to shore and make a second trip, but the man left clinging to the canoe saved further trouble by swimming to land after them. When he endeavored to find his sea legs it became plain that his rolling gait was the result of his having a cargo of liquor aboard, and this no doubt accounted for the upset.

The man was James Ward of Kelly's Point, on the north side of the lake, opposite McConnell's Island. He and his son had paddled up to Fenelon Falls that afternoon, and were returning when the mishap occured. They were taken care of at the cottage of Mr. Kennedy until morning, and have reason to bless the watchfulness of Mrs. Kennedy, and the prompt action of their rescuers.—Lindsay Post.

THE PORT HOPE CUT AGAIN

New York Approval of the Trent Waterway—Port Hope Obstruction.

The Port Hope Guide gives some extracts from a letter by Mr. Henry B. Herbert, chairman of the Erie Canal Association of Greater New York, on the subject of the Trent Waterway:—

Mr. Herbert writes:—"After reading your paper, I really do not understand why your people do not push this improvement. Five millions of dollars is no great sum for the Dominion Government to raise for this purpose, especially as you state it would open one thousand miles of inland shore line. We had a great fight getting through the Erie Canal enlargement for one thousand ton barges. However, we won out after many defeats and discouragements caused by indifference of our legislators and railroad influence."

The Guide complains that the Port Hope Canal Association did not receive invitations for the formal opening of the hydraulic lift lock. The invitations, which were necessarily limited in number, were sent to those who are interested in this great national work, or whose interest it was hoped to arouse. It was not likely that invitations would be extended to gentlemen who for selfish local motives are opposing the completion of the Trent Canal, and who have already delayed operations for four years by their obstruction.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1904.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Brevities.

—A large number went up to Burleigh today on the steamer Stoney Lake on the C.M.B.A. excursion.

—Lindsay Post: Rev. J. C. Davidson of Peterborough will take the services in St. John's, Dunsford, on Sunday next.

—The Str. Stoney Lake was unable to get below the C.P.R. bridge this morning, and the excursionists had to drive to the lift lock.

—Nearly one hundred people from Peterborough joined the excursion party to St. Anne de Beaupre yesterday. Tickets are good to return until the 28th inst.

—The Maccabees are making arrangements for their excursion to Midland on Aug. 18th, Civic Holiday. The return fare will be $1.25 and tickets will be good for two days.

—A union prayer and praise service will be held in St. Andrew's church this evening. Rev. J. G. Potter will deliver a short address on "The world's gain through universal peace"

—The Str. City of Peterborough will leave the town wharf at eight o'clock to-morrow morning. The railway bridge has been fixed and no trouble will be experienced in getting to the locks, as the Str. Stoney Lake encountered to-day.

—The young man Winn, who was injured in the explosion at Peters' & Cain's mill at Mink Lake, near Haliburton, some ten days ago, died on Saturday from his injuries. This makes the second death that has occurred through this unfortunate accident.

—If you happen to have any old calendars or love letters, why just write your personal and church items for publication upon the blank side, it takes something more than this warm weather to make the printers swear.

—On Thursday next the Calcutt line of steamers will be further apart than they were ever before. The City of Peterborough expects to take an excursion to Burleigh via the lift lock, and the Water Lily will go to Heeley's Falls with a private excursion, thus the boats will be about one hundred miles apart.

Come with the Band to Lakefield via T.V.C., lift lock and Str. City of Peterborough on Saturday, July 23rd. The boat leaves the wharf at 1.30 p m sharp. Tickets 50 cents. 4d

BOWLING.

The tournament in Toronto starts with the 8th or 15th of Aug., and as Peterborough is to be represented there, it is time that rinks that propose to go should announce their intention. It has been suggested that a competition between them would be advantageous.

Millbrook, smarting under their recent defeat, are anxious for a return match. Peterborough, if they wish to hold their own, must send strong rinks.

The following games were played last night:

LACROSSE.

Negotiations were concluded yesterday afternoon between the executives of the Capital and Tecumseh clubs for the playing of a series of home and home exhibition games, the first to take place in Toronto on Saturday next, and the return game in Ottawa on the following Saturday. No doubt the meeting of the C.L.A. leaders and the Capitals, one of the strongest, if not the strongest team in the N.A.L.U., will prove of interest equally as great as that aroused by the Minto Cup matches. If Capital can beat Tecumseh, it will be a pretty safe betting proposition that they can also trim Shamrock later on.—Ottawa Citizen.

Referee Hubert Jack, of Brantford, in his report to the C.L.A. of the game between the St. Catharines and the Tecumseh teams on Saturday, makes it very plain that the home team was wholly and entirely to blame for the trouble in the last quarter. He points out that at the time of the row he blew his whistle to stop the play, the score then being 4 to 3 in favor of the Tecumsehs. A goal was subsequently scored by St. Kitts, but, reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Mr. Jack states that he did not allow the goal. He makes some severe strictures in regard to the conduct of the spectators.

The C.L.A. Executive will meet tomorrow night to consider several postponed games.

FOOTBALL.

Secretary W. R. Hoover, of the Locust Hill "Clippers" has sent the following challenge to the Toronto Scots, champions of Ontario:— "As the senior Scots are football champions of Ontario, we, the Locust Hill Clippers, will give them twenty-five dollars for their expenses, to play us a match in Markham."

BASEBALL.

Baltimore rubbed it in yesterday by defeating Toronto 18 to 4.

We were invaded to-day by a juvenile baseball club, in all their paraphernalia, etc., and enquiring if we would publish about a baseball game this afternoon between the "Little Petes" and the "Maple Leafs," on Simcoe-st. The former were successful in defeating the latter by the score of 14—9. A sensational catch was a running one made by Meagher, of the Maple Leafs, who made a hard one. Following were the batteries of the two teams:—Little Petes—Phelan and White; Maple Leafs, Donoghue and Meagher.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1904.

THE MODERN BABY.

They say that I must not be rocked
Because my brain might addle!
If I could speak they would be shocked;
I'd call that fiddle-faddle.
And yet, of course, they ought to know—
Still I can't help but wonder
If some one rocked them years ago,
When folks were apt to blunder.

They stand around me, looking wise,
And say they must not pet me;
A gentle pat to soothe my cries
They claim would further fret me.
My raising must conform to law
Down to each jot and tittle.
Did people hold them off with awe
When they were bald and little?

They say that bouncing me is sure
To make me very nervous;
That children's frames cannot endure
Such sadly thoughtless service.
Yet these phlegmatic scientists,
Ere they began to toddle,
Were bounced until their chubby fists
Played tattoos on the noddle.

When I stretch out my willing arms,
Inviting them to frolic,
They rise in wondering alarms
And talk of croup and colic.
It's hard to be a baby now;
They will not pet nor jump us,
And when I sleep my peaceful brow
Must lie straight with the compass.

When I grow up, of course I'll be
A triumph scientific;
But really it seems to me
My hard luck is terrific.
If I could only speak my mind—
But then they would not thank me,
One unbanned custom they would find—
They still think they may spank me!

The Busy Bees.

"Did you attend your grandmother's funeral?"

"Er—no. They postponed it. But I gotter rain check."

He Rung Up the Tip.

Here is the prize hard luck story, as anybody will admit who remembers how infrequently the tipping habit is indulged in on street cars. It was a Broadway conductor who made the confession, having been led to do so by the casual remark of one of the passengers that "we are all creatures of habit."

"Yes," he said, "that's so. I was on the down trip the other morning when a nice man got on board and handed me a ten cent piece for fare. I started to hand him back a nickel change when, with a wave of his hand, he said: 'Oh, just keep that for luck. Buy yourself a cigar.' Gee! What creatures of habit we are! Before I realized what I was doing I had rung up two fares instead of one."

And something very like a salt tear trickled down the conductor's nose.

Plumbers' Plans.

Mr. Housekeep—Are you the man from Mr. Sodder's to fix the water pipes?

The Plumber—Yes, sir. An' he sez it'll cost you $50.

Mr. Housekeep — What! Why, he hasn't seen the job. He doesn't know how much I want done.

The Plumber—Mebbe not. But he told me how much to do.

Slightly Disappointed.

"That was a brilliant defense you made of that criminal. You deserve credit for his acquittal."

"Well," answered the young lawyer, "I worked hard. But it wasn't as much of a victory as I might have wished for. Since the case was tried I have secured information that leads me to believe that he was actually innocent."

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

"I will go," she said simply.

The two crawled under the hay, and Charka lay down on the boat as if asleep.

Everything happened as Alma had supposed. The ball had been deprived of its most brilliant lights. With Alma and Delinikoff gone, it grew dull. A half hour passed, and Colonel Jurnieff got uneasy.

"Where are your beautiful niece and Delinikoff?" asked the governor.

"The prince said they were going to find a secluded spot and talk things over. I asked Alma, and she consented to the announcement of their betrothal, but said the prince had not asked her to be his wife. I sent him to her, and they came to an agreement. But they wanted to be alone to talk. I do not know what keeps them."

"It is not so easy to leave off a conversation with a girl like Alma. It is almost time for the supper. I hope they will not forget."

The governor showed his anxiety as the time for him to take the highest of his guests to supper arrived.

"I am filled with misgivings, your excellency," said Jurnieff. "There is something wrong."

"Wrong! What can be wrong?"

"Something, I know not what. The girl bewitched us all tonight. I had never seen her so gay, so reckless. She acted as if she had drunk too much wine, and she seldom drinks any, and now, when she is not here, with her beauty and her wit to ensnare me, I recall how she hated the prince. She never said so, but she refused to marry him. She was in love with an American."

"Where is the American?"

"He is in our prison. He is implicated in the abduction of Koura Biartelkis."

"And you think—what do you think? Speak, man!"

"I cannot think. I am going to the prison to see what has happened."

He called for his carriage. It was gone. He took the nearest one—one in which a Chinese mandarin had come to the ball—and hurried to the prison. He dashed to the living apartments. Marie was asleep. He roared for her, and, trembling in every limb, she came to him.

"Has my niece returned from the ball?"

"She did return, colonel. I went to her, but she dismissed me and told me to go to bed."

Jurnieff ran to Alma's rooms. On the floor he saw her long brown tresses.

"What devilry is here tonight?" he gasped.

He dashed to the prison. The captain of the guard started when he saw the pallor of the colonel's face.

"Has any one visited the prison tonight?"

"Yes; the inspector general."

"What! Do you mean Prince Delinikoff?"

"Yes, my colonel. He had with him also an orderly."

"Was my niece here?"

"I did not see the young lady."

"What did the inspector general do?"

"He and his orderly went into the dungeons where the prisoners for Siberia are kept. They soon came back, as the orderly was not well. The inspector general said they would go out in the air a short time and return. They did not return."

"Open that door to the dungeons!"

The captain took down the bunch of keys. He trembled and turned white.

"What is the matter?" commanded Jurnieff.

"The key is gone."

Jurnieff swayed. He no longer thought of promotion, but how to save himself from disgrace.

"The door must be broken in. Go for the locksmith."

The locksmith was roused from his sleep and soon had the door open. Jurnieff rushed in and began opening the cells. In one he found Delinikoff, sleeping as if drunk. He dragged him out to the light.

"Drugged!" he exclaimed. "The girl has tricked us all! Where is the American?"

His cell was opened. It was empty.

"Fire the alarm gun! They are still in Tiflis! The guards will find them! Get out every man! Have the garrison turned loose! I must go and report to the governor."

In ten minutes the ball was over. Chinese mandarins and Persian princes were hustled off and chattered together in bewilderment. Every Russian at the ball was sent out to hunt the fugitive, with orders to bring him back dead or alive.

CHAPTER XII.

THE SEARCH FOR THE FUGITIVES—THE HAYBOAT STARTS.

CHARKA of Ashkar pretended to waken from a deep slumber as four soldiers, led by a subordinate officer, came rushing down the wharf.

"Ho, there, on board this hayboat!" shouted the officer.

"Masters, I am here," said Charka, rubbing his eyes and blinking in the light of the lanterns they carried. "What has happened?"

"A prisoner of the czar has escaped! Assisted by a woman who is a traitor, he escaped from the prison at Tiflis tonight and must be, with his companion, somewhere in the city."

"Well, am I the prisoner?"

"No, you pig."

"Am I, then, the woman?"

"Curses upon you!"

"Why am I awakened with these shouts? I am a peaceful man from Ashkar, trying to sell my hay."

"Oh, your hay!" shouted one of the soldiers, with a laugh. "With the business of finding a prisoner of state on our minds, we must think of your hay!" As he spoke he thrust his bayonet deep into the hay.

"By the gods," exclaimed another, "that is an idea! This man is from Astrakhan and would no doubt assist the American to escape."

"Shut your mouth, fool!" said the officer. "There is no American. It was a Russian who escaped."

"Pardon! I forgot. But the Astrakhans do not love the czar."

"How much you love the czar!" replied Charka. "It is fear, not loyalty, that makes you curse me and stab my hay."

"By heaven, we will stab you! What did you come to Tiflis for?"

"To sell my hay. It has been purchased, but not yet paid for."

"Insolent pig! And do you think we want hay from you?"

"It is for beasts of a higher class I keep my hay," said Charka calmly.

A volley of curses answered him and a bayonet pricked his leg.

"Charge the hay!" said the officer. "They may be hiding in it."

"Burn the hay!" laughed a soldier. "That will settle it."

"Burn it if you dare! I have something in my pocket."

"A pistol, which you would use on the soldiers of the czar?"

"No; a passport to safety signed by the governor."

"Do not burn his hay!" shouted the officer as one of the soldiers made a light by twisting a wisp of the hay into the flame of the lantern. "We are after prisoners. We do not wish to run against the passport."

The soldiers were crawling over the hay, jamming their bayonets deep into it. The officer was slashing it with his saber.

"Dogs of Muscovites! When I get my money, I will not stay in this place!"

"What is that?" demanded the officer, turning on Charka. "You call us dogs—we who are your masters?"

"You should tell the mollah that. He would be pleased."

"Are you a follower of the mollah?"

"Who else? It is so written. Charka of Ashkar was never false to the faith."

"Then leave Tiflis. The governor's passport will save you from harm, but in the name of the czar I command you to depart at once. There will then be no chance of your doing mischief. We know the fugitives are not with you now. But if they came you would give them shelter."

"I say truly I would do so if they came."

"Loosen your boat from its moorings and take yourself to the Caspian."

"But my hay is already sold."

"It is robbing no one. There is plenty of hay, and you say the payment has not been made. Go, or I will forget the passport."

With assumed reluctance Charka went to the door of his box, into which two soldiers had gone to investigate, and came out with two sleepy Astrakhans.

"Behold the loving acts of the czar, our master," said Charka to his men. "We have sold our hay, but before payment is made we are commanded to go to the Caspian."

"It will destroy the hay. There will be no profit from the fair," said one.

"Profit! You want profits from a fair and yet follow the mollah against the czar?" returned one of the soldiers.

Charka made a sign. The men at once began releasing the boat, amid the shouts and cries of soldiers and disturbed boatmen all along the river. Hundreds of soldiers flocked along the wharfs, invaded boats, routing out men and women that they might inspect the most secret places.

Charka, grumbling and with much make believe anger, slowly got under way. The soldiers laughed as the hayboat began slowly to descend the stream. The boat was a most crude affair. Its only means of propulsion was a great lateen sail, useless on this quiet night. So the men resorted to long poles, and the big boat crawled along the bank.

The search throughout Tiflis went on. Generals and colonels, many of them informed for the first time that the abductor of Koura Biartelkis was an American, joined in the hunt. Officers in the brilliant uniforms they had worn at the ball rushed with those in working garb and searched bazaars, coffee houses and churches. There was not a square foot of ground in Tiflis that was not searched nor a building that was not entered.

Mystified, baffled and enraged, Jurnieff raved and cursed as he paced the prison corridor. But while he raved, and soldiers searched, Charka and his boat continued slowly down the river. By daylight Charka had made twenty miles and tied up at the rotting wharf of a small town. Leaving his men in charge, he went ashore to buy food. He returned with a sufficient supply for the day, and the boat went on. A little steam launch containing soldiers came puffing up behind him.

"Who are you?" demanded the officer. "Why do you leave Tiflis with a load of hay? The markets are there."

"There are no markets for me," said Charka, with a sad wail. "Many days

"I took the precaution to bring my purse."

have I spent on the journey. Many nights I lay and thought of my profits. At last, when I reached Tiflis, there came a merchant who owned five camels. He purchased the hay and promised to come and take it away and pay me for it. But, alas, the soldiers of the czar came in the night and drove me away! I am Charka of Ashkar. They said that because I follow the mollah I am not fit to sell hay to camels."

"Enjoy yourself, fanatic. Go ask the mollah to buy your hay. He has many camels."

"Aye, and men and guns," mattered Charka as the launch aped on.

"Have you seen two escaped prisoners?" came back a voice.

"I have seen many men. No one informed me he was an escaped prisoner."

"One was a woman."

"Then let a woman hunt. It is the only way."

A curse for his insolence came floating back. The launch continued down the river.

In the little box of a house Charka prepared a meal. Before he or his men partook of anything he called to the refugees.

"It is safe," he said. "The launch is out of sight, and we are passing swamp lands where there are no villages or farms. We shall meet no one. Come from under and eat. It may be some time before you reach a place of safety."

Harvey was the first to appear, and then the shining boots of Alma came wriggling from under the hay. They looked into each other's eyes and laughed. It was so good to be free. They went into the little house and ate the meal Charka had prepared.

"Charka, you have done well," said Alma. "I took the precaution to bring my purse. In it you will find enough to pay you—for your hay."

Charka took the purse and opened it. The shining gold brought a gleam to his eyes.

"Let them ask again," he said. "You have kept your word with Charka. No Muscovite dog shall take you from this boat while I am alive."

"Good Charka!" said Alma. "It is so good to find a faithful friend."

CHAPTER XIII.

THE STORM ON THE CASPIAN.

TWO days and two nights they continued thus, traveling constantly. Two of the men did the poling while the third man slept. At times, under the cover of favoring darkness, Harvey would emerge from his hiding place, and while Alma kept watch for pursuing Russians irons assisted with the boat to give one of the hardworking Astrakhans a rest. On the third day they saw a boat overhauling them.

"We must keep well under cover till that boat has passed us," said Harvey. "What do you make it out to be, Charka?"

It was a long, low vessel, without masts, with high bow and stern. It was propelled by four rowers, two on each side, and a fifth man sat in the stern with a paddle to steer.

"We have nothing to fear from that," said Charka. "That is a Turkish cayik. Some rich merchant perhaps from Constantinople has brought his pleasure boat all the way to the fair. Think of carrying a boat across land!"

"That may be so or not," said Harvey. "A boat might be built at Tiflis after the Turkish model. It is safer for us to be out of sight."

The long boat came on rapidly, and Harvey and Alma again crawled under the hay.

Charka grumbled enviously as he saw the four rowers bending to their task. The Turkish cayik seemed more anxious to avoid the hayboat than Charka was to avoid the cayik. It steered to the opposite side of the river, the efforts of the rowers were doubled, and at a burst of speed it went by.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1904.

REQUESTED TO RETURN

Message From the British War Office to Lord Dundonald.

Arnold Forster, Secretary For War, Says His Lordship May Be Heard in His Own Defence—Meanwhile He Must Not Take Any Further Part in Political Controversies—Does Lloyd-George Represent Sir Wilfrid?

London, July 20.—(C. A. P.)—Lloyd-George, M.P. (Liberal), introducing the debate in the House of Commons, contended that Lord Dundonald's conduct was such as could not be encouraged in the future. After his dismissal Lord Dundonald had practically initiated an agitation against the Canadian Government. It was a purely political agitation with Lord Dundonald as the centre of it. The case was similar to that of General Buller, but there was a double reason why it should not be permitted in the case of Canada. It was grossly unfair and mischievous that Lord Dundonald should be allowed to stir up strife and feud between the two races in Canada.

During his speech Mr. Lloyd-George quoted from The Toronto Globe's correspondence in The Standard as proof that the Toronto speech was purely a political agitation. There was nothing more dangerous and pernicious if Lord Dundonald went to Montreal, where all the material was ready for a conflagration, and set a match to the material. General Buller only made a speech at a luncheon to defend his own conduct, and was practically dismissed. Lord Dundonald, on the other hand, made violent speeches in a political propoganda, accusing the Government of corruption. Lord Dundonald should be reprimanded both for his speeches and general conduct.

Winston Churchill, along with whom rose Arnold-Forster, the latter giving way, amid a scene of considerable commotion, seconded the motion, declaring that no motion for adjournment had greater reason behind it. Though Lord Dundonald considered himself right in making his protest, he could have done so in a less harmful way. He ought to have been at once recalled by the British Government. No one could deny Lord Dundonald was being exploited by the Opposition for party purposes. He deprecated prominent intervention by military officers in the party politics of self-governing colonies, where the position of an Imperial officer should resemble that which he bears towards the Crown in England. He wanted the Government to make it clear that they were in no way associated with the action taken by Lord Dundonald.

Winston Churchill said that Lord Dundonald's utility as a militia officer absolutely terminated at the publication of the correspondence and his dismissal, when he should have been ordered home. Instead, however, he had gone on a triumphal tour in the provinces, making scathing remarks about Canadian ministers, who were ministers of the King.

Arnold-Forster, Secretary of State for War, welcomed Mr. Churchill as the spokesman of the Opposition. This debate was not calculated to contribute to the public advantage. (Hear, hear.) The one question was that of discipline, of which he was in charge, and the other of the advisability of this debate. He saw no advantage that could arise from this debate except to make bad blood between two great branches of the Empire. (Cheers and cries of "Oh, oh.") He asked did Lloyd-George speak as the representative of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. (Cries of "Oh.") No representation had been made by the Government of Canada, which was well able to take care of itself. (Opposition cheers.) The discussion would not tend to establish good feeling between the motherland and Canada. Lord Dundonald went to Canada as an officer of the Canadian Government, and no one imputed any misconduct to him other than want of judgment. Not being in agreement with the Canadian Government, the latter dismissed him at once. When he became an officer on half-pay he could stand as member of the Canadian Parliament and could not be deprived of the right to take an active part in public life. He believed it to be undesirable for any officer to take part in public controversies, and the War Office had informed Lord Dundonald that his conduct was undesirable and requested him to return, when he could be heard in his own defence. He had instructed Lord Dundonald to return home and not to take any further part in political controversies. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Arnold-Forster said Lloyd-George had spoken of the pain this controversy would cause Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who, as he truly said, was one of the staunchest friends of the Empire in the time of its great struggle. Did Lloyd-George speak as the agent or representative of Sir Wilfrid Laurier?

Lloyd-George: I spoke as a member of the House of Commons, with as good right as the right honorable gentleman. (Opposition cheers.)

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman (Liberal leader) said it was a grave piece of bad taste for Lord Dundonald to act as he did, but Mr. Arnold-Forster had taken the course the Opposition approved in recalling him home.

T. Healy (Irish Nationalist) found no fault with Lord Dundonald, who was only attacking the War Office, but why was Lord Dundonald not recalled sooner, instead of six weeks after his dismissal? When was the order to return home conveyed to the noble Lord?

Mr. Healy believed Dundonald had attacked the Government of Canada because it was French and Catholic. It was very useful to have the French Catholics on the side of the British Empire in the Boer war, but was there ever an officer of the Imperial army who made partisan statements outraging the feelings of the majority of the people of Canada? He would like to know why Lord Dundonald was permitted to remain while his speech was rankling in the French heart. When was the telegram of recall sent. Yesterday the right honorable gentleman's subordinate knew nothing about it.

Lloyd-George offered to withdraw his adjournment motion, but the Government side insisted on negativing it, and this was done without a division.

Dr. Goldwin Smith.

London, July 20.—Dr. Goldwin Smith, writing to The Manchester Guardian on the Dundonald affair, says the quarrel of Lord Dundonald with the Canadian Government is the last in a long series in the clash of opposite interests representing the Imperial need of armaments and the Canadian need of bread. He ridicules the necessity of providing defence fortifications along the frontier, adding that, to bid Canada arm against the States, you might as well bid Yorkshire arm against the rest of England.

Sir Henri Taschereau.

London, July 20.—Sir Henri Taschereau says he is indignant that political capital is being made of the Dundonald affair. The Times is loaded up by Ottawa Tory sources, and a few Scotsmen are at the back of the whole agitation. He cannot see how the British Government, if alive to its own interests, can fail to recall Lord Dundonald before the end of the week.

TASCHEREAU'S UTTERANCES

Government Awaits Fuller Reports of His Speech Before Giving a Full Reply

—House Proceedings.

Ottawa, July 20.—Sir Elzear Taschereau's alleged utterances in England concerning the Dundonald incident were brought to the notice of the Government by E. F. Clarke yesterday. Mr. Clarke said:

"I would like to ask the Government if the statement has been brought to their attention; if the statement has been authorized; if the Government approve of it, and if they will make some definite announcement as to the position of the Government, either now or at the sitting of the House to-morrow?"

The Minister of Finance, who was leading the House, replied that he could not now or to-morrow give a precise answer to the question.

Waits For Information.

"We cannot deny," he said, "that our attention has been called to the matter, but it wouldn't be wise for us to assume anything to the disadvantage of the distinguished chief justice of Canada on a mere cable report. I think before forming any opinion as to any utterance of Sir Elzear Taschereau, it would be wise for us to get fuller information. We have none at the present time upon the matter to which the hon. gentleman has drawn attention."

Col. Hughes Answered.

Col. Sam Hughes' statement made the other day in the House, to the effect that privates coming into the Ottawa camp for musketry training were made to do servants' work, drew from the Minister of Militia a long reply.

Lieut.-Col. Cartwright, director of the School of Musketry, had drawn up a report, which Sir Frederick read, to the effect that privates were not put at servants' work, but that men of the permanent force did fatigue duty, and it would be hardship to forbid them making a little extra as officers' servants.

Paid $600,000 For a Railway.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson brought down a resolution authorizing the purchase of the Canada Eastern Railway from Alexander Gibson at a cost of $600,000. The acquisition of this road will give the Intercolonial Railway direct connection with Fredericton, N.B. The Government has purchased with the railway the Fredericton and St. Mary's bridge, terms for the acquisition of which are set forth in the resolution.

Dog Fish in Commons.

Mr R. L. Borden by a question brought up the problem of the dogfish, the redoubtable enemy of the Nova Scotia fishing interests.

Hon. Mr. Prefontaine, in a brief statement, expressed the hope that works might be established which would render dogfish of some commercial value for fertilizers, for oil, and other things. In some parts of Europe the people had no objection to eating dogfish, but in Canada they were regarded as too coarse.

The House made some progress on the estimates of the Department and adjourned.

CYCLONE IN ESSEX.

Houses and Barns Unroofed and Barns Struck By Lightning.

Walkerville, July 20.—A cyclone swept over the county between Wolf's Hotel and Walkerville Monday afternoon. Trees were uprooted and broken and barns demolished. The barn of Joseph Balliergeon, a Sandwich East farmer, was struck by lightning. The structure burned, entailing a loss of $400.

The house of Ernest Langlois, another farmer, was unroofed by the storm, but fortunately the inmates escaped harm. Four Windsor young men who were in the boathouse owned by Alexander St. Louis, on the river front, had a thrilling time. The storm ripped the boathouse to pieces. The party was blown into the river, where they remained throughout the hailstorm.

Drowned at Sutton, Que.

Sutton, Quebec, July 20.—The sad news has just been received from Knowlton that Harold Baker, son of Martin Baker, of this place, had been drowned in Brook Lake yesterday afternoon.

Brothers Drowned.

Watertown, N. Y., July 20.—Willie and Clarence White, brothers, aged 10 and 13 respectively, were drowned yesterday in Mattoon Creek, near Gouveneur, while swimming.

Deadly Rioting in France.

Clusa, France, July 20.—During a riot of strikers here Monday several shots were fired, resulting in the killing of four persons and the wounding of twenty-five. The gendarmes, who attempted to disperse the rioters, were stoned.

Statement Untrue.

Montreal, July 20.—Judge Winchester has arrived in Montreal to wind up the Grand Trunk Pacific alien labor commission, and take up the enquiry into the recent flood of Italian pauper immigrants which invaded Montreal. Sir William Mulock wired Judge Winchester in the following terms: "Have been asked in the House whether the statement of Mr. Griffith is correct that Grand Trunk or Grand Trunk Pacific was furnished daily with verbatim copies of evidence taken by you in connection with present enquiry. What are the facts?" To this Judge Winchester replied: "No evidence whatever has been furnished any one in connection with enquiry. I have myself only received certain portions of it on which to found my interim reports. Griffith's statement untrue."

Wife's Body in Fire Ruins.

Halifax, July 20.—William S. Robinson, charged with the murder of his wife, Theresa Robinson, on the night of May 25th, at Burlington, N.S., was brought before Judge Townsend, Kentville, yesterday. Robinson's house was burned to the ground and the remains of Mrs. Robinson found in the debris mutilated. Robinson, who was first at the scene of the fire, did not attempt to rescue his wife, but went to a neighbor's some distance away, and gave the alarm.

Deaths From Heat.

New York, July 20.—The hot wave which struck the city Monday, bringing death and prostration, increased yesterday to the highest temperature of the year and added more victims to the list. Five deaths from heat occurred in Brooklyn between Monday and noon yesterday.

THE DUNDONALD RECEPTION.

Outraged and Misrepresented He Hits Back.

The reception to Lord Dundonald was even more cordial than was expected. It is seldom that a meeting in Toronto is characterized by such remarkable and sustained enthusiasm. Whatever may be the constitutional aspects of the controversy in which Lord Dundonald has been involved, there is no doubt that he is an object of genuine popular sympathy, and that his unceremonious dismissal by the Government is strongly resented. Imperial sentiment is deeply seated in Canada, and greatly roused in his behalf. It may be that there is a disposition among Conservatives to turn his dismissal to party account, and undoubtedly the bulk of the cheering thousands at the Massey Hall meeting were opponents of the Government.

* * * *

It is said by Liberal journals that Lord Dundonald took advantage of a non-partisan event in order to attack Ministers and excite feeling against the Administration. But surely it was natural, in view of the recent manifesto, that he should make just such a speech as he delivered. It was vain to think that the demonstration could be divested of party significance. For weeks Lord Dundonald has been attacked, and there seems no reason to doubt has been seriously misrepresented by the Liberal press and Liberal politicians, and he would be more than human—which he certainly is not—if he were content to leave the country without making his defence before the people. It was, in fact, to give him an opportunity to make his defence that the demonstration was organized, and that his defence should involve attack upon the Administration was inevitable. It was childish to think that the demonstration could assume any other character, or that it could be other than hostile to the Government. The Liberal press, by its unjustifiable clamor against a "militarism" which no one encourages, and by its arrogant treatment of Lord Dundonald when it was thought that he could be roughly ridden down, is greatly responsible for the feeling which found such vehement expression at the Massey Hall meeting.

* * * *

It is plain that his pride, his dignity, and his sense of decency have been outraged, and he is willing to take a full measure of revenge. But the policy which he recommends is neither militarist nor Imperialistic. It is rather one which should commend itself to sane-minded and patriotic Canadians, and which no Canadian Government careful of its duty to Canada and to the Empire can afford to reject. His speech reveals a keen comprehension of the spirit of Canadian institutions; there is nothing in his recommendations that savors of militarism, that involves excessive expenditures, or prescribes any duty for Canada beyond the defence of her own territories.

We do not pretend to say that this is the only issue, nor even the chief issue before the country, and it is a profound pity that the question should be complicated with bitter personal and party feelings. But the Government should have remembered that Lord Dundonald is no common man, that Canada has had no more devoted servant, and that to treat him like a message boy was a rash, discourteous and dangerous proceeding. The questions raised by Lord Dundonald's dismissal appeal powerfully to the prejudices and sentiments of certain elements of our population, and whatever may have been his errors of judgment, Ministers will not be guiltless if the spirit manifested at the Massey Hall meeting should increase in intensity and vehemence, and in the pending general election distract the country from from sane and just consideration of the general record and policy of the Administration.—Toronto News, Indep.

NURSERY RHYMES UP-TO-DATE.

The Doleful Lay of the Toothless Lady.

A lady who lived in Toronto,
With the dentifrice Rowland's Odonto
Washed her teeth night and day,
Till she washed them away,
And she could not tell where they had gone to.

But this lady, not easily beaten
By such a mishap, went to Eaton,
Who sold her a set
At twelve dollars nett
Which fitted and looked rather neat on.

Soon after she dropped in at Murray,
With a crowd, and in rather a hurry.
Her teeth fell on the floor,
And she saw them no more:
It was bargaind ay, all hurry-skurry.

Then she went to Rice Lewis & Co.,
For a set with spring fittings, so
As to hold them quite tight,
And painted snow white,
They really looked quite "comme il faut."

Then she took an electric street car
For her home, but she had not gone far,
When there came a great crash
And a general smash,
Her teeth left without saying ta-ta.

She indignantly wrote to Mackenzie
For damages, in a fine frenzy;
He was sorry, of course,
But that they'd no lack of force
He had to let the Mayor and his men see.

Reduced now to cereal feeding,
She business like bargained with Breadin
For his life-giving bread,
And I heard it was said
This and grape nuts was all she was needing.

But this lady of "Love" and "esprit"
Sans teeth was not quite fair to see,
Anaemic and pale,
She wore a thick veil,
And was never more named by "on dit."

SLANDERING DUNDONALD.

Calumnies Refuted and the Searchlight Turned On.

The magnificent demonstration in honor of Lord Dundonald, given in Toronto last night, ought to convince him that the people of Canada have no sympathy with the infamous campaign of slander against him, inaugurated by a section of the Canadian press. Not content with the petty revenge secured by his dismissal from the command of the Canadian militia; a number of the Government organs seem determined that Lord Dundonald shall be hounded out of the country in disgrace. He is being accused of "trying to over-ride the civil power"; of "being the emissary of the Imperial Government to dragoon the people of Canada"; of endeavoring "to create a spirit of militarism"; of "being hostile to the French-Canadians" of "seeking to bring about the building of a line of fortifications between Canada and the United States"; of "trying to provoke war between Canada and the United States."

Every word of these charges is a deliberate lie; which not even the sacred duty of defending Mr. Sydney Fisher can justify or even palliate.

Lord Dundonald's whole offending is that he refused to become accessory to the introduction of the spoils system into the administration of the militia. Nothing else has been proved against him; no attempt has been made to prove anything else against him.

While whining against the Dundonald question being made an issue in the coming election campaign; the Globe and other Government organs are maligning him daily. It is not desirable that the dismissal of Lord Dundonald should become a party issue; the defence of the country is altogether too serious a matter to become the sport of political partisans, but if the Government organs no not want this question to become an issue in the electoral campaign let them stop their blackguarding of a man whose only fault is that he is too honorable to lend himself to the service of the vile spoils system. Nothing that they can say, will make the slightest difference in the esteem in which Lord Dundonald is held by the people of Canada or by the people of the United Kingdom; but the campaign of slander is degrading to the Dominion. If it does not stop, the result will be to make the Dundonald question an issue in the elections—and much good it may do his orities.

We do not believe that there are many people in Canada, Liberal or Conservative, French-speaking, or English-speaking, who will sympathise with this persecution of a gallant and distinguished soldier, simply because he tried to do his duty to the people of Canada.

Those who believe that appointments to the militia are one of the perquisites of the responsible Minister from the district; that he should grant them to serve his party interests; or withhold them to gratify his personal spite; are entitled to their opinions; and should certainly ventilate them freely; but they can do all that without insulting and slandering Lord Dundonald.—Montreal Star.

A REAL GOOD CRY.

Let the Tears Flow and You Will Be All the Better For It.

"A real good cry," said the facial artist, "ought to be as refreshing to the face as it is soothing to the feelings. And it would be, if women just understood how to manage it. In the first place, they should not try to repress their tears. This is a nervous strain, and nervous strains are productive of wrinkles and that 'weary look' which adds years to a woman's age.

"Then crying and sniveling are going to rejuvenate us, madame," exclaimed the customer in astonishment as she turned the other cheek.

"Crying, yes; sniveling and moping, no," replied madame, proceeding with the patting and pinching, which were calculated to restore the lost roses of youth. "When from any cause the tear ducts fill, the tears should be allowed to flow gently and unrestrainedly over the face and fall into a handkerchief held beneath the chin to receive them. No attempt should be made to stop them halfway down or to mop them up as they leave the eyes, and, above all, they should never be sidetracked at the nose. The wiping and rubbing that result in swollen eyelids and red noses are not only unnecessary, but as positively injurious to the complexion as the other method is beneficial.

"You mustn't keep pumping up new tears by reminding yourself of all the mean things that made you cry at first. After the first tears have started just lie back and think over soothing things, all that is in your life that makes it full of sunshine and brightness it is spite of the present clouds. Don't work yourself up into a spasm of sobbing and shaking by being too sorry for yourself. Just get out your little 'hanky,' put it where I told you and let the refreshing shower come, gently and steadily as the spring rains fall. Roses will bloom in your cheeks and lips afterward instead of on your nose, and if there are violets in your eyes they will come out brighter and fresher than ever."

AN ARTISTIC MANTEL.

Good Results Obtained From an Old Mahogany Bed.

Here is an ornamental mantel made from an old mahogany bed. As will be seen from the illustration, the posts form a support for the lower shelf. The latter (unless part of the bed can be used, which is quite possible) must be of wood stained and polished to match the old wood, but it need not correspond with it in quality, as very little of it will show. Above the shelf the footboard of the bed is used, and very effective it is if the carving on it is handsome. It may of course be shortened to fit the mantelpiece and finished at each end with a neat wooden beading to match. Above the footboard is another shelf, narrower than the mantelshelf. The shelf above, when graced by large effective pots in earthenware or metal, china bowls, etc., and the lower one by smaller household gods, a clock and other odds and ends, present an appearance which few other mantelpieces attain, at a cost which, given the bedstead, certainly is less than half that of a modern handsome erection. Do not paint or enamel the wood. Oil it.

To Roast Coffee at Home.

It is some trouble to roast coffee in the house, but the result more than pays for the trouble. Buy the green coffee in any quantity, just so it is not too large, and roast it a pound at a time. One expert puts the beans in a common iron spider, with a tablespoonful of butter, and stirs over the fire until the coffee is quite hot. It is then put in a shallow baking pan in a hot oven and roasted to a dark chestnut brown, stirring well from time to time to prevent burning and also to allow the beans to brown evenly on all sides. The odor of the roasting coffee is delicious, and, by the way, acts as a clearing agent, rendering the atmosphere clean and fresh after the fragrance has disappeared. Never grind more coffee than is needed for a single brewing, as the bean loses strength after [illegible]

STRATHCONA REPORTS.

Good Opening in Great Britain For Canned Eggs.

London, July 20.—The annual report of Lord Strathcona has been received, and will form the weekly report of the Department of Trade and Commerce for Aug. 8. The High Commissioner forwards extracts from the returns of the British Board of Trade which indicate a very gratifying development in Canadian trade.

Speaking of the butter trade, the High Commissioner says that it is generally conceded that the standard and quality of Canadian butter have been improved and the refrigerator service has likewise been found of a more satisfactory character. There is an increasing demand for apples.

The High Commissioner reports there is a good opening for canned eggs in gallon tins, for which the baking and confectionery trade are waiting. Quite a trade, which is capable of great development, has sprung up during the last year in bottled fruits. The report also speaks very highly of the samples of Canadian tobacco which have been sent over and examined by experts in London, who made a decidedly favorable report.

BOY'S TRAGIC DEATH.

Striking Breech of Rifle Barrel the Gun Exploded and Ball Entered Forehead.

Winnipeg, July 20.—The mystery of the disappearance of Stewart, the nine-year-old son of Joseph Hughes of Ninette, who has been missing since Friday afternoon, was solved by finding his body in the woods about ¼ mile from Ninette. On Friday morning the boy and a companion some years older than himself, were out shooting in the woods, and returning about 2 p.m. separated near the schoolhouse.

After leaving his companion, the boy started through the woods, carrying an old .22 rifle, the barrel of which was found near a stone on which he had evidently been striking the breech of the barrel in an attempt to dislodge a jammed cartridge thereby causing it to explode. The ball had entered his forehead.

Jam and Glucose.

Ottawa, July 19—Mr. Thomas Macfarlane, chief analyst of the Inland Revenue Department has issued a bulletin of the result of an analytical test of 74 samples of "jams and jellies" collected in January and February last. Raspberry, strawberry, plum and peach jams were the chief articles tested. Of the 74 samples tested only 14 were reported genuine and five doubtful, and 55 were classed as adulterated. The department classes as adulterated all articles which contain foreign fruit or a large percentage of glucose. Of the eight samples tested from Toronto, five were classed as "adulterated" and three as "doubtful."

QUAKERS OF DISTINCTION.

Public Service by Members of the Society of Friends.

(London Chronicle).

The number of Quakers whose names are household words is amazing when it is remembered that there are less than 30,000 of the sect in the kingdom. Lord Lister, the inventor of antiseptic surgery, is a Quaker. So is Professor Thompson, the electrician. Sir Edward Fry, the famous ex-judge of the Appeal Court, and his brother, the M.P., are descended from the celebrated Elizabeth Fry. John Bright and W. E. Forster come inevitably to mind. Mechanics institutes were founded by Friend Dr. Birbek and Egyptian hieroglyphics first deciphered by Sir Henry Rawlinson, another Quaker.

But it is in trade and commerce that Quakers have made their most enduring mark. Hydraulic engineering was fathered by the brothers Tangye. George Stephenson and the first railway were financed by the Peases of Darlington, the misfortunes of whose firm grieved the whole North Country a year ago. Bradshaw, of the immortal railway Guide, was a Quaker, and so was Edmundson, who invented railway tickets. Practically all the cocoa and chocolate consumed in Britain is made by Quakers—the Frys, of Bristol; Cadbury, of Birmingham, and Rowntree, of York. The biscuit facories of Huntley and Palmer, and Peek and Frean are more Quaker enterprises. The original Bryant & May were both Quakers. Reckitt's blue, Christy's hats and Allen & Hanbury's drugs are likewise the wares of Friends. Quakers established the great breweries of Barclay & Parkins, Hanbury & Buxton, the Allens and the Walkers. Sir Samuel Cunard, founder of the famous shipping line, was a Quaker, and so were the originals of such banking firms Overend, Guerney & Co., Barclay, Bevan & Co., and Cave, Tugwell & Dimsdale.

THE CZAR VERY MUCH DISPLEASED

Over Seizure of the British in Red Sea.

STR. MALACCA AT PORT SAID

Immediate and Amicable Adjustment Within the Possibilities--Jap Steamer Sunk.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—The Associated Press has just been informed that Emperor Nicholas, in an interview with Count Lamsdorff, the Foreign Minister, expressed his displeasure at the turn events had taken, and at the possibility of complications with Great Britain, arising out of detention of British ships by the Russian volunteer fleet steamers in the Red Sea. This Pacific attitude, if the report be correct, will doubtless lead to an immediate and amicable adjustment.

Britain Protests.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—Sir Charles Hardinge, the British Ambassador to Russia, yesterday afternoon, in behalf of his Government, presented a strong protest to Russia against the seizure in the Red Sea and detention of the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Malacca, which was carrying 300 tons of British Government stores for the naval establishment at Hong Kong, each case of which was marked with the broad arrow, which is the Government stamp.

RED SEA AND VICINITY.

Detained at Port Said.

Port Said, July 21.—The crew and passengers of the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Malacca, seized by the Russian volunteer fleet steamer St. Petersburg, in the Red Sea, have been landed here. The ship is detained by the authorities, who are waiting instructions before taking further action.

Malacca's Crew Prisoners.

The captured Peninsular and Oriental steamer Malacca (bound for Libau on the Baltic) has arrived here manned by a Russian naval captain, four officers, forty-five sailors and firemen.

Members of the Malacca's crew were declared prisoners and no communication with the shore was permitted. An armed guard blocks the gangway of the vessel.

The British captain and passengers complain of the Russian treatment. The former carried his protests to such length that he was threatened with arrest unless he desisted.

The Malacca is declared to have no contraband articles for Japan. Her cargo of 3,000 tons contains 40 tons of explosives for Hong Kong.

Lansdowne Worthy Britain's Trust.

London, July 21.—"Lord Lansdowne," says The Daily Telegraph, voicing the views of the Government, "has faced the situation created by the abuse of the right of search in the only manner worthy of a British Minister compelled to defend the interests of British commerce and the honor of the flag, and acting with unhesitation, firmness and promptitude, will recall the strongest days of national policy, he has justified the trust of the country.

"While not one rash word should be said which could have the effect of increasing the tension of an anxious and dangerous interval, it would be futile to disguise the character or to minimize the risks of the situation which has arisen. We hope and believe that a solution of the difficulty may still be found in the withdrawal of Russia from its false position.

Certainly Obvious.

"It is obvious if the volunteers passed the Dardanelles as merchant vessels they cannot be allowed to scour the Red Sea as warships. The doors of the Black Sea must either be open or shut. If open to warships they must be so to all warships. If the Russian fleet is to be permitted to emerge in violation of treaty provisions, the British fleet must be allowed to enter upon these terms.

"It is no secret that we have not been unwilling to remove the existing veto of the Dardanelles and enable those straits to be traversed by the navies of all nations."

War With Russia Contemplated.

Every other London morning paper devotes its leading editorial to a similar view of the situation. War with Russia is openly contemplated by the most staid papers of the Empire, and a contingency much to be regretted, but nevertheless inevitable for the honor of the nation unless reparation be made for what is alleged to be a dire insult to the British flag.

More Volunteers For Red Sea.

London, July 21.—The correspondent at Odessa of The Standard, telegraphing under date of July 20, says another steamer of the volunteer fleet proceeded thence last night, to Svastopol for coal and armament, preparatory to leaving the Black Sea.

Two of the remaining five volunteer fleet steamers there will follow very shortly.

JAP STEAMER SUNK.

Vladivostock Squadron Appears Twenty-Five Miles From Hakodate.

Washington, D. C., July 21.—The Japanese Legation has received the following cablegram from the Foreign Office at Tokio: "At 9.30 a.m., July 20, the Vladivostock squadron fired on and sunk a Japanese steamboat of 318 tons, off the coast of Isoya, about 25 miles from Hakodate. All the crew were landed safely at Zoan."

Said Japan's Coast.

Tokio, July 21.—The Russian Vladivostock squadron, unaccompanied by torpedo boats, entered the Pacific Ocean yesterday at seven o'clock. Its destination is unknown, but it is suggested that it will ravish the east coast of Japan, and then either return to Vladivostock, escaping to the southward, or attempting to form a junction with the Port Arthur fleet.

Land Fight on July 18.

London, July 21.—The Standard's correspondent with the first Japanese army cabling under date of July 19, says: "Our right flank has been engaged since morning."

The correspondent of The Times with Gen. Kuroki's army, under date of July 19, confirms The Standard correspondent report that the right flank of the army had been fighting since dawn.

The China Mutual Steam Navigation Company's steamer Pakling is believed to have been seized in the Red Sea. The Pakling sailed from Middlesborough, England, June 18, and London, July 2, bound for Yokohama. She is a British-owned vessel.

Japs Lost Ten Guns.

Tatchekiao, July 19.—(Delayed in transmission.)—Sharp fighting was reported yesterday to the northwest, and it is stated that the Japanese lost 10 guns. Their forces were pushed back and their positions occupied as far as Salimatze. If this report be true, it indicates a heavy engagement.

Packers and Men Get Together and Agree to Arbitrate.

Chicago, Ill., July 21.—The strike of packing house employes, begun nine days ago, and which has demoralized the packing industry throughout the country, was settled here last night at a conference between representatives of the packers, the officials of Meat Cutters' Union and representatives of all the allied trades employed at the stock yards. The whole controversy will be submitted to a board of arbitration, both sides agreeing to abide by whatever decision this board may reach.

Pending the decision of the arbitration board, the men will be taken back to work as rapidly as possible by the packers, and it is agreed by the packers that all the old employes are to be reinstated within forty-five days from the date work is resumed. If any of the former employes are still unemployed at the expiration of that time, such persons are to have the privilege of submitting their cases to the arbitration board for settlement.

Kept Poor by Doctor's Bills.

Many a family is kept poor by doctors' bills when just as good and oftentimes better results could be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which sell at 25 cents a box of twenty-five doses. As one pill a day is the most frequent dose under any circumstances there is no treatment obtainable which costs so little, and at the same time none which brings about such excellent results in derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

COX CAN'T WAIT.

Under the above heading the Port Hope Guide has the following comical editorial:—

"There is a rumor that has been freely circulated in town to the effect that Senator Cox, or rather the Bank of Commerce, has secured an option upon all the water powers between Rice Lake and Trenton. If this is true we are up against a condition (and a serious one) not a theory.' We give the rumor for what it is worth. We think, however, that the Dominion Government has thrown into the way of Senator Cox all the 'casual advantages' absolutely necessary, and Cox should be made to wait. The Liberal electors will not eternally wink at the doings of any Government, and we feel called upon as a warm and ardent supporter of the Liberal cause to sound a word of warning to our friends to call a halt, and to shake themselves free from these political grafters and others that are hanging on with their eyebrows to every Government scheme that can be squeezed and skinned to their financial advantage."

We are not concerned to defend the methods by which Mr. Cox has become a millionaire, but knowing the facts with regard to this matter, we must correct our reckless contemporary. The Government have taken the sensible step if acquiring for the public the water powers that have not yet been utilized or developed, so as to save them from greedy speculators, who contemplated a blackmailing operation. The Guide is well aware of this, for it has made it a grievance against the Government Engineer, Mr. R. B. Rogers, that under instructions from the department he thus blocked the game of the would-be grafters. As for the water powers that are in operation, they are held at a high value by a number of independent owners, and we doubt very much if Mr. Cox has secured options on the whole of them, or indeed on any of them.

We do not remember having seen the Guide protesting against any of the casual advantages or political grafts of which it now asserts that Mr. Cox has been the recipient. To take an example in the past, we failed to notice the Guide condemning the notorious Crows Nest graft. To come to present matters, we missed the number of the Guide in which a protest was made (if it was made) against the share of Mr. Cox in planning with Sir Wilfrid Laurier the promoters' and political extension of the G.T.P. We have no recollection even of its objecting to the concealment from the House of a petition by Mr. Cox to Parliament for a charter and grants to the G.T.P. on the mendacious plea that it was a private letter to Sir Wilfrid, for whom your petitioners will ever pray." But now that it suspects Mr. Cox of a step that would thwart the schemes of its speculative friends, the adventurers who are trying to obstruct the opening of the Trent Waterway, it assails the Senator with the recklessness which it has manifested whenever it deals with this subject of the diversion of the canal to Port Hope.

The British papers and politicians that are attacking Lord Dundonald were pro-Boers of the South African war. They are the sympathisers with the Chinese boxers and the treaty-breaking people of Thibet. Against the soldiers of the Queen or King they take the same stand as Laurier did in the time of Riel. The Ministerialists should feel proud of their allies.

The Liberal Montreal Witness speaks to the point as follows:—

"We similarly deplore the cowardly disparagement of Lord Dundonald by newspapers in this province, which seem to be seeking government or popular favor by so doing. Translated and widely reproduced, these detractions have an effect the reverse of that looked for by the writers within the close preserves of their direct influence. Such abuse evokes anger as well as scorn among those who are not limited to one channel of information, and cannot but react against the party in whose interest it is supposed to be uttered."

In consequence of the persistent charge that Lord Dundonald made a bitter partizan speech at his Toronto reception, we have reperused it carefully. We failed to find a single word of party politics or a personal attack on any Minister. It was a plain straightforward statement of facts, or if they were not facts Sir Frederick Borden can prove any inaccuracy by producing the suppressed report. We challenge any Ministerial organ to quote the words which they consider objectionable as bitter or partisan.

Some Ministerialists journals are indignant with a Toronto audience for discourtesy in hissing Sir Wilfrid Laurier's name. They might begin by giving Sir Wilfrid some lessons in courtesy. Is he to be considered courteous when he called Lord Dundonald a foreigner and accused him of coming here to dragoon us, when he charged Mr. Borden with theft or receiving stolen goods, when ten times in one page of Hansard he called Mr. Barker a quibbler and a pettifogger, or when he told the Conservatives that they stunk and were a rotten hulk. He has repeatedly offended against courtesy and decency this session.

One of the barnacle press says Lord Dundonald never once referred to the real point at issue, namely, that he was guilty of insubordination in publicly criticizing and censuring his superior, Hon. Mr. Fisher, the Acting Minister of Militia." Mr. Fisher was not his superior in a military or any other sense, so there could be no insubordination. Mr. Fisher was not Acting Minister of Militia; even when he forged an alteration over Lord Dundonald's signature he did not venture to sign as Acting Minister, but only as the Minister's Attorney. And even if he had been Acting Minister then, it would have had no bearing on the fact that for months he had been corruptly and illegally interfering with the organization of the regiment. There was no need for Lord Dundonald to refer to insubordination when there was none, unless on the part of Mr. Fisher.

Men Restored to Vigor

Are you one of the thousands of men, young and old, who keep visiting people? Do you seem to be losing and losing your grip on yourself? Thousands know they are weak and forgetful, but neglect to take the right steps to restore their full vigor and strength. Are you one of them?

Nervousness is the beginning of their real symptoms, indicating weakness in the strong and well men who are far from it. Perhaps you are one of them. If it is worth your time to maintain your true condition of health, if you have any reason to doubt or suspect that you are not what you once

If you belong to either class mentioned above, do not be discouraged. Do not lose hope. Help is within your reach. You can be cured. Vim, vigor and vitality, health and happiness have been given to men who had been reduced to physical wrecks.

Be Honest With Yourself.

If you have been a victim to the follies and indiscretions of youth, committed errors in married life, if you doubt your strength, it is your duty—your duty to those you love and who love you—to at once, today, consult an honest, reliable, recognized physician—a specialist who has a record for CURING weak men. Do not go on suffering. Quack no quack. Tyers no patent "Cure All." No two cases are precisely alike. Every individual needs a treatment particularly suited to him. So where you can get the right treatment for your case.

Cure Yourself at Home.

If there is no experienced specialist near you, write at once to Dr. Goldberg, the noted specialist. He is the possessor of 17 diplomas and certificates which he received from medical colleges and state boards of medical examiners and he will send you his method free, to use in the privacy of your own home. It does not interfere with traveling, as it can be taken with convenience anywhere.

If you have stricture, premature trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emissions of parts, impotence, etc., or any complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney troubles, headache, backache, etc., write the doctor and he accepts your case for treatment it is equivalent to a cure, as he never accepts an incurable case for treatment, and remember you may

Pay When You Are Cured.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has decided to put his cash for money where he says he is sure, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor at once and confidentially lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as his booklet on the subject, containing the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him

Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room 177, Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free, in a plain sealed package.

FIRST STAGE OF KING'S

Three Canadians Make 98 Each and Will Be in Second Stage.

They Are Corp. McGregor, G.G.F.G., Sergt. Crowe of Guelph and Pte. Baynton, Toronto—Ninety-six With Scores of 96 Will Shoot For 54 Places in the Second Stage, So There May Be Others Yet—Bronze Medal Winner.

Bisley Camp, July 21.—In "His Majesty the King's Prize" match, at the 500 yards range, first stage, the Canadians made the following scores:

Pte. A. Baynton, 48th, 33; Capt. H. C. Blair, Truro, 30; Capt. J. Crowe, Guelph, 34; Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe, Guelph, 35; Col.-Sergt. W. H. Davidson, 1st P.W.F., 30; Capt. R. Dillon, Whitby, 32; Lce.-Sgt. W. G. Fowler, 12th, Toronto, 30; Color-Sergt. A. G. Gardner, Sherbrooke, 28; Sgt. W. Gould, Guelph, 29; Pte. J. G. Goudie, Quebec, 28; Corp. R. McGregor, G.G.F.G., 31; Maj. W. P. Moore, Georgetown, 31; Sgt. G. Mortimer, 10th, 31; Pte. J. Perry, D.C.O.R., Vancouver, 34; Pte. C. S. Scott, Ottawa, 28; Pte. Neil Smith, Stewart, 32; Pte. H. Tyers, 10th, 31; Pte. T. Westman, Ottawa, 27; Col.-Sgt. Will, 13th, 27; Col.-Sgt. W. H. Youhill, Winnipeg, 27; Staff-Sgt. Bayles, 32.

At 600 Yards.

There was poor scoring all along the line in the "King's Prize" match at 600 yards. The members of the Canadian team scored as follows:

Blair 28, Staff-Sgt. Crowe 30, Davidson 28, Dillon 21, Gardner 29, Mortimer 32, Scott 24, Youhill 24, Bayles 26, Will 18, Fowler 26, Gould 29, McGregor 34, Moore 29, Perry 29, Tyers 26, Westman 28.

Won Bronze Medal.

In the contest for the King's Prize the bronze medal was won by Sergt. Walker of the Northumberland Fusiliers, with a score of 101. Among the Canadians, Corp. McGregor, Sergt. Crowe and Pte. Baynton each scored 96; Pte. J. W. Smith 95, and Major Moore and Pte. Perry 94 each.

The bronze medal is awarded for the highest aggregate score in the first stage of the contest for the King's Prize.

There were three counts of 100, nine of 99, twelve of 98, and twenty of 97.

It will require scores of 96 over the three ranges, 200, 500 and 600 yards, to enable a competitor to get into the second stage of the "King's Match. The possible over the three ranges is 105.

Ninety-six competitors with scores of 92, over the three distances, will shoot for 54 place in the 300 who shoot in the second stage of the King's Prize.

Duke of Cambridge.

In the "Duke of Cambridge," ten shots at 900 yards, the Canadians put on the following scores:

Baynton 45, Blair 39, Capt. J. Crowe 35, Davidson 27, Dillon 39, Fowler 33, Gardner 42, Gould 42, Moore 43, Mortimer 31, Scott 35, Tyers 43, Westman 35, Will 27, Youhill 38, Goudie 31, Smith 43, Perry 41.

Corp. McGregor retired from the match.

Scores of 44 will probably get into the prize list.

The following take prizes: Baynton seventh, £4; Tyers 22nd, Moore 25th, Smith 26th, Bayles 30th, Gould 39th and Gardner 43rd, each get £2.

All Comers' Aggregate.

In the "All-Comers' Aggregate" Corp. McGregor of Ottawa, took 33rd place, winning £2. Staff-Sergt. Crowe was 56th, and also won £2.

The "All-Comers' Aggregate" includes the Alexandra, The Daily Graphic, Daily Telegraph and The Graphic. It covers the 200, 500 and 600 yard ranges.

Secretary of War.

With a score of 48, made by eight bulls and two inners, Private Perry of the Canadian team, won fourth prize of £6 in the Secretary of State for War competition, a ten-shot match at 900 yards. Bayles won the eighteenth prize, Tyers the twenty-first and Smith the twenty-third, each of £2, with scores of 46.

Range Prizes.

In this competition at 500 yards, Capt. Crowe is 20th, winning £1, Pte. J. Perry 37th, 4s. In the 600 yards competition, Staff-Sergt. Bayles is 4th and Staff-Sergt. Crowe fifth, each winning £1.

Martin's Cup.

In the "Martin's" Challenge Cup, a rapid fire competition at 200 yards, Sergt. W. Gould is the only Canadian who figures in the prize list. He took 110th place, winning £1.

Canadian Bag.

The winnings of the team to date have been about £62. Those who have entered individual matches have secured a total of about £50.

Trolley Killed Child.

Toronto, July 21.—As a result of injuries sustained by being knocked down by a street car, little Nellie, the three-year-old child of James Brown, 7 Gladstone avenue, died shortly before midnight. An inquest will probably be held.

Mr. Hammond Lee spent Sunday and Monday in Port Hope.

INDISCRETION CONDEMNED.

Globe Mourning in Sack-cloth and Ashes for Its Confessions.

In Lord Dundonald's confession that he resolved to "speak out, no matter what the consequences," the Toronto Globe finds cause sufficient to condemn his whole course. That resolution proves him to be utterly incompetent to hold a position of high responsibility, in the Globe's opinion. No man fit for important office would be guilty of "speaking out, no matter what the consequences." If he should be guilty of such indiscretion, the proper thing for him to do is to accept the "consequences" meekly, forever after hold his peace, repent in sackcloth and ashes.

And it must be admitted that the Globe is eminently qualified to pronounce condemnation upon Dundonald. Like him it has committed the unpardonable sin. Once it spoke out bravely and honestly against the sins of its own party; it said that the party was infested with barnacles that should be removed with an iron hand; it bewailed the canker of corruption which was eating into the vitals of its party, and demanded stern and drastic measures for the purification and regeneration of Liberalism in this province. It was a noble, inspiring utterance. The Herald said at the time that no greater example of moral courage had ever been given by a Canadian newspaper, and we hold to the opinion still. Truly, the Globe then resolved, like Dundonald, to "speak out, no matter what the consequences."

But, alas for the sequel! That "high, clear ringing note was the first and the last that was ever heard from the chief organ. On the subject upon which it resolved to "speak out, no matter what the consequences," it has ever since been as mute as the harp that once in Tara's halls the soul of music shed. For many months it has been suffering the "consequences"—bitterly repenting its indiscretion, and bringing forth fruits meet for repentance in the form of slavish subservience to party exigencies and equally slavish attacks upon the party enemies. It has earned the right to condemn indiscretion in others.

Although the Globe, in condemning Lord Dundonald's indiscreet frankness of speech, virtually admits that its own frank utterance was worthy of condemnation, we hardly think that the best minds in this country will endorse that opinion. There is such a thing as noble indiscretion which aims at getting the right thing done in the quickest way even if that way be irregular.—Hamilton Herald, Indep.

Ross Rifles Ready to Be Tested.

Ottawa, July 21.—Of the contract for 12,000 rifles which the Government has with the Ross Rifle Company, 400 have been received at the Marine Department. There are 4,000 ready to be tested at the Military Department shortly.

Arbitration Ordered.

Ottawa, July 21.—The Minister of Labor has ordered arbitration or investigation in the dispute between the Grand Trunk and its telegraphers. This is the first application of the compulsory arbitration act of last session.

A PRESENT FOR THE OLD FOLKS.

FOR THE STOMACH'S SAKE.

An eminent physician says, "human life should last five times the years it takes to mature"—thus if twenty-one is maturity we should live over a hundred years, but there are not many reach the century mark. A great deal more longevity would exist if the stomach did not get crippled and played out—That organ gets plenty of abuse, and is deserving of attention—It is the starting point of most ailments, and it needs the first attention when symptoms of sickness appear. If an elderly stomach can be kept working right, you may be sure of a ripe and contented old age, comparatively free from physical burdens. The great new discovery, ANTI-PILL, the Great System Treatment, has a grand effect in helping old and deranged stomachs. Any aged person who will address a Postal to Wilson-Fyle Co., Niagara Falls, Ont., will get a free trial bottle by return mail.

GOOD THINGS IN SEASON.

Refreshing Green Vegetables—Blue-fish—Strawberries.

Radishes and rhubarb are now in season in many of our gardens; beets and turnip tops, as well as young lettuce, are, or ought to be, available, thus giving us the green vegetables required at this season of the year.

In preparing radishes as a side dish leave on them about an inch of the stems, as this is said to make them more digestible. Heap on a dish and sprinkle with finely chopped ice. When added to a salad they should be thinly sliced, the scarlet edges adding a touch of dainty color to the dish.

Asparagus, as its season is comparatively short, ought to be served at least twice a week, especially as it has a direct and very beneficial effect upon the kidneys. Each stalk should be scraped with a dull knife, an inch of the dry lower end cut off, then tied in small bundles and boiled in salted water—from half to three-quarters of an hour's cooking will be needed. If it is to be served cold as a salad, it is then set aside. As a vegetable it requires a drawn butter sauce made wholly or in part with the pot liquor. It is also best to serve it on slices of toast dipped for an instant in some of the pot liquor before arranging on the platter.

Shad is slowly disappearing from market, and in its place comes blue-fish, one of the best salt water varieties for broiling and baking. In broiling this, or any large fish, the split halves are laid in a greased broiler, and the flesh side is given the longer cooking. After the first searing it is raised from the coals, that the flesh may be thoroughly cooked without burning. During the broiling it should be moistened several times with a little melted butter; season with salt, pepper, a little lemon juice and a drop or two of tabasco or worcestershire. For baking, the fish should be stuffed.

The illustration shows strawberry croquets. Each large berry has been dipped into beaten egg and rolled in fine stale sponge cake crumbs. This dipping and rolling are repeated; then the balls are plunged into smoking hot fat and quickly browned. When laid on a napkin, each croquet is pierced with a tiny ornamental skewer, and the dish is garnished with fresh berries.—Table Talk.

Is Mr. W. E. Talbot Who Was Cured of Piles by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. W. E. Talbot, of Talbot Bros., Tobacco Merchants, 362 George st., Peterboro, Ont., states:—"It is from a desire to help other sufferers that I offer a statement of my experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for Itching Piles. I was for a long time troubled with this unpleasant and torturing disease and though I tried very many treatments remained uncured until I came across Dr. Chase's Ointment. It was highly recommended to me, and I find that every word of praise is true. I can truthfully say that I am completely cured and knowing the misery that the ailment produces, I am anxious for others to know of the surprising virtues of Dr. Chase's Ointment."

His Awakening

By M. Louise Cummins

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

Lucy Grierson knocked at the door of her Cousin Royce's "den," holding a bundle of letters and papers which she had just taken from the maid.

In answer to a deep toned, muffled "Come in," she entered the snug bachelor room, with its rows of bookshelves, and stood for a moment contemplating the sleek, dark head and square shoulders bending over the desk.

He threw an impatient glance over one shoulder at the interruption, but swung around with clearing face when he saw who it was.

"Say, Luce," he said eagerly, "how's this for an idea? The hero is desperately in love with the heroine, who cares nothing for him. In his despair he remembers the old college professor who always helped him out of his dilemmas and forthwith goes to him for advice. The professor, who is an indefatigable microbe hunter and has been for years trying to discover the germ of love, thinks with glee that in this unusually bad case is his chance. After much research he finds the love germ and carries it carefully to his laboratory. But a sportive soph lets it loose among the 'co-eds,' with the disastrous result that every one begins promiscuously to fall in love with every one else. Of course the heroine gets inoculated and falls in love with the hero."

"And the professor himself becomes enamored of the laundress," she put in laughingly.

"Just so! I was working on his soliloquy prior to the advent of the love-lorn youth when you came in."

"And of course began at the end, as usual?"

"Y-yes. But the rest will come to me. Here's the last verse anybow:

"I have found the germ of health,
The germ of melancholia and paresis,
But my reputation's lost
If I can't, at any cost,
Describe the germ of love in my great thesis.

"How's that?'

"Great!"

She smiled encouragement with appreciative eyes and lips, but the light died from her face as he swung back to the desk, waving the paper hilariously above his head. She bit back a sigh between her teeth and, laying the bundle of mail beside him, turned away.

"Don't go." Royce was bending over his papers and did not look up.

"Won't it disturb you if I remain?"

"No; it will help me; it always does. I think you are my inspiration."

The blood flashed to her face so suddenly that she was thankful he did not look up and see it. She sank into a big leather chair before the open fire and took up a magazine. Speed, Royce's fox terrier, got up from the rug, stretched himself lazily and jumped upon her lap. The young man lifted his head and looked across at her sideways.

"What a picture you make!" he said meditatively.

The girl gave an unconcerned shrug to hide the suffocating beating of her heart in her throat. It was terrible to her, the suggestion of domesticity in their attitude, and to think it meant nothing to him beyond the fact that in the cosy setting of the "den" she made an artistic picture.

Royce was deep in his work again, scarcely conscious of the fact, when she rose and left the room in answer to a ring at the bell and the maid's knock. He heard the soft pitpat of her feet as she ran upstairs a few minutes later and then the clash of the front door.

Having finished the professor's soliloquy he rose and strode into the drawing room just in time to see Lucy being helped into a high dogcart by a fair faced individual in immaculate light overcoat and dogskin gloves. The horses pawed the air when the diminutive tiger left their heads and sprang into his place. Royce had a glimpse of Lucy's bright face as it was lifted to her companion's. How entirely in her element she looked! He turned away from the window, his foot tripping in a rug, which he kicked savagely back into place. "Confound those things that are always catching in people's feet!" Well, here was another day wasted. That stuff he had written was rot. He strode back into his room and tearing the sheets in two flung them into the waste paper basket. Then he threw himself wearily into the chair which the girl he called cousin, because he had known her all his life, though the tie between them was remote, had so lately occupied.

How pretty she had looked sitting there in the fire light! What could she see in that empty headed nonentity that she should care to go driving with him? Was she, after all, one of the girls to whom a well weighted pocket-book stood for any mental lack?

He recalled the evening before when after a hard day's work he had wandered into the drawing room where Lucy sat playing a sweet, illusive little melody of Chaminade's. Again the feeling of supreme content in being thus alone with her, with no words between them but the soft, tender chords, came over him. Suppose this tailor's block of a man should carry her off to a home of his own? Suppose she should be willing to go? He got up and paced through the rooms, his mind in a whirl of fear.

He met the girl in the hall when she returned, her face bright and glowing from her drive.

"Well, how goes it?" she asked cheerily.

"How goes what?" His eyes were fixed gloomily on her face. He grudged the fact that another man had been able to look at her for the past hour unrestrained.

"Why, the professor and his germ quest, of course."

"Oh, it's in the waste paper basket—the only fitting place for it."

She glanced up, surprised at the bitterness of his tone, and, moving swiftly away from him into the "den," stood bending over his desk.

Royce followed and, laying his hands firmly on her shoulders, turned her about until she faced him.

"Look here," he demanded, "what's the use of my making an imaginary professor look for a thing which I've found myself, or, rather, which has found me?"

She stared at him in open eyed bewilderment, backing slightly from what she saw in his face.

"And how am I going to stand it if that empty headed cad that you went driving with this afternoon gets what I want more than anything else in the world?" His voice was rasping in its anxiety.

There was no mistaking his meaning now. Lucy swayed a little with parted, breathless lips, putting out one hand to steady herself against the desk.

Royce's hold slipped from her shoulders to her arms and tightened there.

"Don't say you care for him, Luce," he pleaded.

The girl's throat ached with her longing to comfort him, but the words would not come.

"I am nothing without you," he went on. "Dear, forgive me that because you have always been in my life I did not realise what it would be to lose you. The vision of you as you sat in my chair this afternoon, so sweet, so womanly, so helpful—my inspiration, as I truly told you—will haunt me forever unless unless you will let it be like that for always, Luce."

The girl's face quivered with happiness. She made a little involuntary swaying movement toward him. Still holding her arm, as though he feared she might slip away from him, Royce drew her within his own.

Half an hour later he was writing again, but with his left hand closed upon the small white one which lay on the desk beside him. Now and then he paused to lift it to his lips.

"Royce," she said softly, after awhile, "I must tell you. You are away behind in progression. I discovered the love germ, or, rather, it discovered me, as you say, quite a year ago."

Royce flung down his pen and jumped up. And it was not her hand that he kissed then.

One Solution of It.

They had been engaged only fifteen years, but it seemed a long time to her, and she was growing restless.

"Darling," she said in gentlest accents, "our betrothal has been very sweet, has it not?"

"It has, it has indeed, my own."

"But it has been very long, don't you think?"

"Yes; it has been pretty middlin' long," he rejoined.

"I was thinking, dearest," she continued, playing with his watch and casting down her eyes, "that our betrothal is nearly old enough to go out and work for its living. Couldn't we have it learn a trade or get it a clerkship or put it out at interest or do something with it so that we might realize something on it? It has been hanging about home so long, burning gas and coal, and now it is nearly grown. It seems like a shame to have it doing nothing so long."

"What would you suggest?"

"We might get married."

"That's so. I never thought of that." They are going to be married within a month.

When the Body Loses Height.

The boy when born is about half an inch taller than the girl. This difference is maintained till near the age of thirteen, when, in England and America, the average girl is taller and heavier than the boy. This halting, so to speak, on the part of the male is speedily recovered, and he again outruns the female in size. At the period of full development the man's average height compared with the woman's average is as sixteen to fifteen. Both men and women maintain their maximum height till the age of fifty years, when they begin to grow shorter, until at ninety they have lost three inches. The reason for this dwindling is attributed to the sinking of the soft parts between the bones and to the stoop gradually acquired by old people.—London Leader.

NOT HIS DAY.

Break the news gently to father.
Oh, it will give him a pain.
He will have fits four-and-forty
When he comes in on the train.
Say, but he'll rage and cut capers!
Think of the things he will say
When he discovers that mother
Started to clean house today!

Thinking of rest and of comfort,
He will come home about six,
Storming hot dinner expecting
Mother, as ever, to fix.
When he meets up with cold victuals,
Hash made of any old thing,
And has to eat by his lonesome,
Think of the language he'll sling!

Once every spring, without warning,
Just when the weather is right
So that a man can enjoy it,
House cleaning comes as a blight,
And the old man of the household,
Who other times may cut ice,
Cannot come round and get edgeways
In one small word of advice.

Break the news gently to father,
Or let him see for himself,
When he, like old Mother Hubbard,
Finds not a bone on the shelf—
Only left overs, and maybe
Sections of breakfast food hay,
Then he'll discover that mother
Started to clean house today.

Fable of the Girl Who Wanted a Man's Privileges.

A Pert Drummer who made a Practice of going about the Country Breaking Hearts Met with a Simple Rustic Maiden, who was apparently Unacquainted with the Ways of the World, and began to Feed Fairy Tales into her Delicate Pink Ear.

As the Drummer had Met with a Likely Rumor that Afternoon, which had whispered to him that the Girl was Worth about Half a Million, he Began to use in Earnest the Arts which he had Acquired while Practicing on Other Girls.

After speaking of his Fine Family, Consisting of a Proud, Aristocratic Mother and a Father composed of Three Parts Money and One Part Amiability, he lowered his voice and Drifted around Toward the Point.

Sifted Out from among all of the High Sounding Words he had Ever Heard that Point seemed to be that She was the One Little Ray of Sunshine that was Needed to make his Life Complete.

"Mr. Dubbe," she said softly, looking up into his Face with Her large, Innocent Eyes, "it is Indeed Kind of You to Suggest Such a Thing, and if you can Accept the Conditions I see no Reason why we cannot be Engaged. I always Like to be Frank, so there will be no Hard Feelings Later On."

"Name Them," he said, with a Smile of Confidence. "No conditions that you would Impose could be Too Hard."

"Very well, then," she replied, Modestly Dropping her Eyes. "I am Engaged to three Drummers Already, and if you can Make Dates that do not Interfere with the Others I see no Reason why you Should not be the Fourth."

Foiled.

I met a most engaging man,
And I evolved a happy plan
To land him squarely at my feet,
It very clever was and neat.

My most bewitching gown I took
Down from its wonted closet hook
And donned it with a happy smile.
The cut was in the latest style.

I felt that I was sure to win,
But, just before I sallied in,
Appeared a widow, auburn haired,
And then my scheme most sadly fared.

She knocked my plans all left and right;
She never let him leave her sight,
And, while my fate I sadly moan,
The widow's finger wears a stone.

Would Keep Guessing.

"She is a conundrum to me. I cannot make her out."

"Going to give her up then?"

"Not unless I have to."

AN AGED VAG.

Recommitted to Jail for Another Term.

A most pitiful sight was that which the spectators at the Police Court witnessed this morning. Jas. Jenkinson, who has been in the jail for the past year as a vagrant, and who is apparently insane, appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble to be recommitted. The Magistrate remarked that it was really too bad, and that this county should be ashamed to send their poor to the common jail, where they cannot be attended as they should. The man was recommitted.

VERY PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Little Girl Cut Down by Mowing Machine.

The twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. Wm. Tucker, of Apsley, was brought to the Nicholls Hospital yesterday by Dr. Bell, having had her feet badly cut by a mowing machine. It seems that the child was standing in front of the mower, when the horses suddenly started, and the knives of the mower caught the girl's ankles, cutting deep into the flesh. Dr. Bell was hostily summoned and attended to the wounds, and decided to bring her to the Hospital, which was done yesterday. The injury is a very bad one, but hopes are entertained of saving the child's foot.

LATE THOS. STEVENSON.

Obsequies Held at Omemee Yesterday Under Orange Auspices.

The funeral of the late Thos. Stephenson, at Omemee yesterday, was very largely attended. Old friends from a distance swelling the ranks of mourners from the village and immediate vicinity. The funeral took place at 10 a.m. from Christ church, where services were held by Rev. Mr. Langfeldt, a former pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Totten, the present rector. The surplice choir was in attendance and rendered appropriate music.

The funeral was conducted under Orange auspices, the deceased having been an esteemed and prominent member of the order for many years. The pall-bearers were County Master J. W. Wallace, Past County Master, John Kelly, Wm. Adams, W. R. Cottingham, Col. Hughes and Thos. Roberts, Fenelon Falls, Co. Director of ceremonies.

EXCURSION TO BURLEIGH

Under C.M.B.A. Auspices Yesterday Very Successful.

The C.M.B.A. excursion to Burleigh yesterday was largely attended and everyone on board the commodious steamer "Stoney Lake" enjoyed the trip very much. Some delay was caused on starting, as the C. P. R. bridge would not work, and the excursionists had to proceed to the lift lock in rigs. This was the first excursion to pass up the canal to Lakefield, and it was quite a novelty. The boat made remarkably good time, getting to Lakefield in about two hours. The party reached Mount Julian, where they had dinner and spent a short time. A stop was also made at Burleigh. After enjoying a sail around the lake a start was made for home and the lift lock was reached about nine o'clock.

Everything passed off well, and the committee in charge were very energetic in attending to the excursionists who all agree that this trip is one of the prettiest and most unique around there.

DEAL AT HOME.

Some Hints for Those Who Run After Bargains Abroad.

There is no excuse for dealing away from home. Money should be spent in the locality in which it is made, otherwise the growth and success of the district is impaired. The conduct of those people who buy on credit in town and outwide for cash cannot be too strongly condemned. The merchants know what they have to contend with in outside competition, and consequently mark things down to the lowest possible prices, so that if they cannot obtain cash or its equivalent in value They suffer loss. Be loyal to your district. Assist the merchants so far as lies in your power to take advantage of every trade discount by giving him the cash with which to do so and you will find that every effort put forth in this way will redound to your own interests. It is true that the large departmental stores may be able to buy cheaper in larger quantities but this is offset by the cheaper rentals and cost of labor locally. You will also have the satisfaction of feeling that you are doing what you know is right.

It is a well known fact in some instances people have reached their credit limit in every store in the place and have then gone to neighboring towns, so that if there is any driving of business away, the credit system and not cash one will do it in the long run. It may not be possible to introduce a cash system at but I do not think we risk anything in giving the subject all publicity possible.—Monetary Times.

South Ward Needs.

To the Editor of the Review!

Sir,—It was pleasant reading lately to see the Rev. Father McColl interesting himself in a park or square for the South Ward. Do the people of Peterborough realize that south of Charlotte street there is neither park or square—all are away up north. Even squares would be a boon. Have we no statesmen in town who can see a city of 50,000 by the next generation, and what provision is being made for public lungs? Land now is available. Is all this thickly settled South Ward going to become but a wilderness of houses? And then public play grounds should be pre-empted for the future—otherwise in 25 or 50 years we shall have slums and a submerged tenth. Would that Peterborough had a Baron Haussmann, then she might become as beautiful as Paris. Again, do the people in the Central and Northern Wards realize what disgraceful terraces are being put up in this ward? These terraces, in a few years, will be hot-beds of fever, as no provision for sewer connection is being, or can be, made. To erect such shack terraces, cubby-holes, kennels, sardine boxes, as are going up this summer in town (and some in other summers) is nothing but a civic, a social crime. Why does the Town Council allow such reprehensible structures to be erected? Does no one care? Is not there a Building Inspector, and if not, why not? There is no demand for such houses—it is a case of Hoosun's choice. Greed is at the bottom of it all.

Apart from all these considerations, if the Canadian General Electric Co. were interested in getting the best results from their operatives such unsanitary tenements would never be permitted. We invite the Council, the Board of Trade, and the Board of Health, to come in a body and plan right things, not for the South Ward, but for Peterborough. For example, let them not fail to see these architectural abortions now going up, the rooms of which are so lilliputian you could scarcely sling a cat around in them. Why don't our leaders lead?

Since writing the foregoing, that episode of the newly-arrived emigrant, with wife and eight children, has been read by all of us with sympathetic interest. Such additions to our population are most welcome, but what is our Council doing to ensure the construction of roomy, warm, sanitary houses for such people, and for all the people? Again I insist on the Town Council inspecting these make believe houses, and especially to investigate the back premises, and then ask themselves, "Are we doing our whole duty in allowing such shameful structures to be put up?"

Sincerely yours,
A. W. BEALL.

IN KAWARTHA LAND.

An Appreciative Description of the District by a Sojourner.

The Globe has the following appreciative description by a visitor to Sturgeon Point:

On this point of land, just where the lake takes a turn towards the north some three score or four score families have their sestival habitations among the dark oaks that clothe the shore. And surely no fairer site could have been chosen for a summer settlement.

It is very heaven to sit there in the golden afternoon with the weary brow fanned by a cool breeze just strong enough to rustle the oak leaves and ripple the gleaming waters of the lake. And in that lake's blue depths are funny denizens — bass and maskinonge—of a size and strength that would have made the heart of good old Isaak Walton leap for joy, and impressed upon that piscatorial authority and enthusiast the necessity of securing stronger tackle than any he ever used in whipping the fair trout streams of Merrie England.

But to view this noble landscape from a proper vantage point we must wend our way along woodland path and country road for the distance of a parasang until we reach the summit of a lofty, specular hill, which we shall call the Mount of Vision. Then what a panorama lies spread beneath our eyes! For twenty miles in every direction we can gaze upon a lovely vision of hill and valley, field and forest, lake and stream.

In the foreground on the right are wide stretches of luguriant clover, with its fragrant perfume and "the murmur of innumerable bees" on the left a herd of sleek and well-fed kine, knee-deep in pasture. Beyond the road the man with the hoe is busy extirpating the occasional noxious weed or thistle from the rich green rows of the promising rutabaga crop. How vastly different this wielder of the speculum from the weird and sorrowful creation or interpretation of Edwan Markham. When resting from his easy toil he stands erect in stalwart manhood, his height four cubits, twice seven stone his weight, strong and hopeful as becomes the lord of such lands with the prospect of so beautiful a harvest.

In the near sunny distance the billowy wheat fields, lemon-tinted on their way from green to gold, rise and fall at the kiss of the summer zephyr, as if heaving beneath a fairy's bosom and resistant from the momentary pressure as she passes on her shining way.

Farther away to south and west are the sparkling waters of the lake, bearing on its bosom steam pleasure yacht, gasoline launch and white-winged sailboat. Yonder toils a tug putting loud protestations as she hauls her load of logs and lumber from the pretty, bustling village of Cataracta Fosse-onensis, as the learned man of our party insists upon calling it. Ten miles in the other direction, towards the eastern end of the lake, from amongst the islands and almost islands, comes the steamer that brought us hither, faring on the second of her bidurnal voyages to the town at which we embarked.

Then the eye rests upon the beautiful wooded southern shore, with many a rich green field studded with clumps of trees, deciduous or evergreen, sloping away beyond, a veritable home of modern peace.

High on the blue heaven cloudlet chases cloudlet across the sun's smiling face, while on the earth their shadowy phantasmagoria follow one another in rapid succession over the sunbathed surface of forest, lake and field.

As a glorious place simply to dwell in, this district is not so well known as it ought to be. It is doubtful whether of its kind there is a finer landscape in America. It has all the salubrity of atmosphere, all the sylvan beauty and picturesque charm of the Georgian Bay region and Muskoka, without the rocky ruggedness of the former or the dark brown water and faint suggestion of unfruitfulness of the latter.

The nearest approach in present and past, picturesque beauty, to this portion of the Kawartha country is some English landscape, for example, that which we feast our eyes upon looking northward from the White Horse Hill over the fair broad valley of the Upper Thames. But even that scene lacks the variety of lake forest and stream that characterizes this delightful region. We hear of one place and another spoken of as the Garden of Ontario, but this locality has charms unequalled all it seems. It is the park land par excellence, the paradesson of the Provance.

It needs only a better acquaintance with the soothing and healing influence of this happy valley to make it a Mecca for multitudes of men and women who would fain withdraw for a time from the dust and din of the city, from the brain-weariness and heart-weariness and the bodily exhaustion of the over-strenuous business or professional life, from the monotonous and unsatisfying round of the social treadmill, from "the passions and the cares that wither life and waste its little hour."

In washing woollens and flannels, Lever's Dry Soap (a powder) will be found very satisfactory. 2

FINAL WARNING

To Users of Water for Lawns—Will Be Prosecuted.

People using the waterworks are again reminded for the last time that water must only be used for lawns, etc., between the hours of 5 to 9 in the morning, and 5 to 9 in the evening, according to the Water Commissioners' by-law. A large number of the citizens continue to use the water nearly all day, and the commissioners intend to prosecute them in the Police Court if they do not desist.

Brevities.

—The Y.M.C.A. boys return home from camp to-day.

—The list of entries for the race meet will be published tomorrow.

—The str. Water Lily took an excursion of the Richard Hall employees and their friends to Hasly's Falls today.

—The Port Hope Canal Association is issuing a circular which is stuffed full of wilful misrepresentations and cooked figures.

—Mrs. J. M. Brooks wishes to thank the Lady Maccabees for flowers sent to her little son, Freddy during his recent illness.

—The top of the wheel house of the steamer City of Peterborough was removed yesterday to allow the boat to pass under the bridge at Lakefield.

—A discharged employe of a Brantford brewery put a quantity of soap in a vat of beer to get even with the boss. He was caught in the act and arrested.

—An Italian child, aged six months, died at 396 Sherbrooke st. last night. The funeral took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

—The excursion per str. City of Peterborough to Burleigh today was very late in starting, owing to some difficulty in swinging the C.P.R. bridge. Only a fair crowd was on board, and it was half-past nine before they left the lift lock.

—The funeral took place yesterday from her late residence of the late Mrs Geo. A. Moncrief, lot 3, con. 3, Smith, to Omemee cemetery, and it was largely attended, many from town being in the cortege.

—A very unique invitation was received this morning by Lt.-Col. J. W. Miller and officers of the 57th, from Major G. S. Rennie of Hamilton, hon. sec. of the Second Grand Army Corps picnic to be held in Hamilton on Saturday, Sept. 10th.

—The prizes at Douro picnic were drawn by the following persons, viz.: Mr. V. Eastwood of town drew the wheel on ticket No. 81; Miss M. Towns of Douro, was the lucky holder of ticket No. 551, and became the possessor of the scales, while Mrs. D. Conoy, of town, held No. 502, which drew the harness.

—During the last few weeks it has been a very noticeable fact, and one that speaks well for the town, that the police court has been almost devoid of drunks, and other cases. A walk around the streets soon convinces one that work is very plentiful, as no one seems to be idle, and everyone is on the hustle.

—On Tuesday while driving north on George-st., and when passing the C.P.R. tracks, a horse driven by Mr. Thomas Hooper, of Otonabee, became frightened and the whiffletree of the buggy broke. Mrs. Hooper was thrown out very heavily, but fortunately, she escaped with a few bruises. The horse was stopped by some people near by.

—Final arrangements are now completed for the 57th Regiment's annual trip on Labor Day. The committee of officers in charge have spared no pains in preparation for a good time and the trip this year will surpass all former ones. Barrie is noted as a hospitable town, and is one of the prettiest and best places that could have been selected.

—Work on the street railway is progressing favorably, and the men are busy re-laying new track on George-st., between Antrim and Smith-sts. A new iron bridge is being erected over the stream on Charlotte-st., near George-st. Cement abutments were built last week, and the iron work is now nearing completion.

—The Presbyterian Ladies' College at Toronto will commence the fall term in September under an entirely new management. The controlling interest in the stock of the college has been purchased from Mrs McIntyre, widow of the late Rev. Dr. McIntyre, who has been lady principle for some years, by Rev. A. G. Gregory B.A., and Mrs. Gregory. Under the new management, Rev. Mr. Gregory will be principal, and Mrs. Gregory lady principal.

—The need of police supervision is badly needed in Ward 5. We have often been informed of the bad behavior of the boys of that ward, but last night, while strolling around, we noticed groups of boys (nearly young men), standing and sitting on the street corners and making a dreadful row by their rough language and rude actions. Some ladies that passed a crowd standing on the corner were insulted by the coarse jests thrown at them by these boys.

A CORUNDUM MILL.

Fourteen Hundred Acres Have Been Secured in Raglan Township.

Plans and specifications for a one-hundred-ton corundum mill were accepted at the meeting of the directors of the Corundum Refiners, Limited, yesterday. The company has secured from the Government and by private purchase 1,400 acres of corundum land in Raglan Township, Renfrew County.

Among those present were the president, Mr. J. N. Scatcherd, the millionaire merchant, of Buffalo; W. B. Rankine, of the Niagara Falls Power Company; Edward Michel, C. Huntley, and J. C. Conway, of Buffalo; H. H. Dewart, K.C., and J. H. Jewell, of Toronto; James A. Roberts, of New York, and J. H. Tilden, and H. P. Coburn, of Hamilton.

Several tenders for the underwriting of the bonds of the company were received, and the tender of a syndicate headed by J. H. Jewell & Co., was accepted. The amount of the bonds is $250 000. Engineers are now at work on the property.

BOXING.

Art. Edmunds, the clever little wrestler and boxer, is making a hit in vaudeville at Hanlan's Point, Toronto, this week. He and his wife are doing a clever athletic turn, which includes bag punching. Edmunds will continue in vaudeville for the rest of the season.

LACROSSE.

The lacrosse match to-morrow evening at the Murray street grounds promises to be a fast one, as Millbrook puts up a stubborn fight.

BASEBALL.

Charlotte st. and All Saints play off the final game in the Guild league to-night. The former defeated the latter 12-0 in the game the other evening.

An interesting game of ball which was played last evening on the Nicholls Oval between the Inverlea Park Nine and the Nicholls Oval team, was a victory for the Nicholls Oval team by the score of 14—8. Mr. Jack Sheridan umpired. Following were the teams:—

Inverlea team—Roaring Bill Kelly, 1st; Hemlock Shaw, cf; Cucumber Togas, ss; Silk Worm Clegg, 2nd, Tonny Long, c; Bunny Pollock, lf; Lift Lock Newell, rf; Mike Belleghem, 3rd; Life Chip McCorry, p; Choppy Curtis, spare.

MASONS AT BROCKVILLE.

May Form Benevolent Society—Substantial Progress Being Made.

Brockville, Ont., July 20— When Grand Master Harding took the chair at the opening meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge more than one thousand delegates had registered their credentials with the committee and taken their seats. The Grand Master made happy replies to the addresses of welcome presented by Mayor Grash, on behalf of the corporation and citizens of Brockville and from the local Masonic lodges. He then proceeded with his annual address, giving an admirable review of the year's work. Touching on the benevolent funds, he said:—"I repeat my recommendation as to the formation of a fund of benevolence to be placed in the hands of trustees and forever devoted to that purpose. I also recommend the transfer of the asylum fund to the benevolent fund, and that the sum of $20,000 be placed to the credit of that fund and invested, and that the interest derived from the investment be applied in payment of four annuities of $2 each to four of the most needy of the unfortunate brethren of our list."

He pointed out that substantial progress had been made in the raising of the semi-centennial fund. There is now on deposit in the Canadian Bank of Commerce to the credit of this fund $5,019.22. Besides a number of lodges have amended their by-laws, increasing their yearly dues by $1 per year for three years, to pay the yearly quota of their members. The other reports have been already covered in the deliberations of the Board of General Purposes.

This board had a pretty lively session this morning. Brother Walker presented a report on debentures, constitution and laws. The latter decided that certain amendments preferred were constitutional. The report on the semi-centennial fund was amended on motion of Brother MacPherson who made it plain that the money was subscribed on condition that the full amount must be covered before a certain time, and would be refunded if the condition were not complied with.

Brother Hegler read the report on jurisprudence. To the question. Can a master who has served less than a year rank if the answer "no" was given. The burning question is the change of name, dropping the word Canada, and it was discussed pretty warmly, and it now looks as if it would be laid over. Objection was taken to the manner in which the amendment was offered, as not being strictly according to the constitution. Many prominent brethren such as William McPherson, Brother Gibson and Brother Malone took strong ground against the proposal. The division of the district is also meeting with strong objections by some of the lodges.

The newest in Sundaes are "Creme de Menthe" and "Maraschino Cherries." Try them and see how delicious they are. On sale only at T. H. HOOPER S.

A SPHYGMOGRAPH.

How to Make an Instrument For Taking Pulse Autographs.

Physicians have always devoted a great deal of attention to the study of the pulse because its force, rapidity and regularity or irregularity tell a great deal about the patient's condition.

An experienced doctor can read the pulse pretty well by merely pressing his finger on the patient's wrist, but something more than this is needed for a thorough study of the pulse. For this purpose an instrument has been invented by the aid of which the pulse is made to leave a record of its vibrations on a strip of paper so that they can be studied at leisure and compared with other pulse tracings made in the same way.

This instrument is very delicate, complicated and expensive, and it is called by the ugly name of sphygmograph.

You can make pulse tracings at the cost of little labor and materials not worth 2 cents, which you can find in the house. These materials are nothing but a good sized cork, a little stick like a match stick, a shoe button, a card, a quill toothpick or quill pen and two pins.

In the top of the cork (C) cut a square groove or furrow a little wider and deeper than the shoe button. Whittle down one end of the stick (A) and fit the eye of the shoe button on it. Place this end of the stick in the groove (B) and thrust a pin through the stick and the cork on both sides so that the stick can move on the pin, like a pump handle.

THE PULSE WRITING.

Cut a long, thin sliver of quill (D), sharpen one end to a fine point and fasten the other end to the free end of the stick with glue or sealing wax.

Cut a broader strip of quill (E), something longer than the cork. Pin one end of it to the bottom of the cork and bend it so that you can insert the other end into the groove under the bottom.

Blacken a card in a candle flame. Now you are ready to take your friends' pulse autographs. The "patient" rests his or her wrist on the cork so that the button presses the spot where the pulse is felt. Hold the card upright on its edge and draw it along slowly and steadily, keeping it in contact with the point of the quill. The point will trace on the blackened card a white wavy line, which is the record of the pulse beats, greatly magnified, because the pulse acts on the short arm of the match and quill lever and the record is written by the long arm.

The bent quill under the button acts as a spring and raises the button each time it is pushed down by a throb of the pulse.

These pulse tracings vary with the age and health of the person making them and are therefore, as I said, a sort of autographs.—New York Mail.

Monkeys' Antics.

Monkeys have a repertory of pastimes to while away their days in captivity as changeable as a continuous show. They are wonders in developing ways and means for mischief as well as for entertainment. They are past masters in the art of stealing and are as restless as the waves of the sea. They are almost as sensitive as a flower and wither in drafts as easily. But they take a cheerful view of life and cut up all kinds of didos from morning until night. Their lives they try to make one round of pleasure, as if they appreciated their shortness.

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

'Copyright, 1903, by F. R. Toombs

At night they were within sight of the village of Salain. Though it was a dark night, Charka, who had the lives of his passengers in mind, forbade them coming from under the hay.

"The steamboat of the Muscovites has not yet returned up the river," he said. "It is lying at Salain to watch the boats that go out upon the Caspian."

This was too much for the inquisitiveness of Harvey. He crawled to the edge of the hay to observe what was going on.

"Charka," he said, "that Turkish boat is up to something. I notice the Russian is going to intercept it. There's business of some kind going on. Get nearer, that we may hear the conversation."

As they came opposite the lights of the town they saw the Russian boat shoot out from the land and in the radius of the strong electric light in her bow saw the cayik evidently trying to escape.

"They are after the Turk! We are in for it, too!" wailed Charka.

"Keep a cool head, Charka," said Harvey. "Remember, a precious life depends upon your shrewdness."

"I know."

"Stop where you are!" came a voice from the Russian. "We will inspect you."

Knowing the uselessness of refusing, Charka made his way toward the launch, which had now steamed up alongside the cayik.

"It is true, most excellent sirs," a Turkish voice from the cayik was saying. "I am an Osmanli. It is also true that I am Hafix Effendi, who once acted as merchant in those goods the men of Georgia and Circassia had to sell. I stole nothing, but when a father wished to place his beautiful daughter in the house of a wealthy prince I carried on the negotiations. But that is all done. Even the other day a girl was stolen, but it was an American, not an Osmanli, who stole her."

"Yes, and we want that American now!" growled the officer in command. "What have you in those sacks?"

"Nothing, excellent sir, but some of the goods I took to the fair and which I did not sell. I shall return to Astrabad and thence to Constantinople by way of the caravan."

"Go on," said the officer, and the cayik shot away.

"Now, you," said the officer to Charka. "Hello! It is that slow old hayboat. Well, my friend, where are you going?"

"I, too, my master, am going to Astrabad," said Charka.

"Does every one who goes to the fair at Tiflis go from there to Astrabad?"

"Not all, excellent captain; but at Astrabad there are many caravans gathering, and I can sell my hay. The camels need it. To ascend the Volga to the big fair at Nijni Novgorod would take too long."

"Go on. There will be a fine mingling of races at Astrabad."

"No finer than at Tiflis," said Charka as the hayboat slowly drew away. "The scum of the earth and the cream were at Tiflis."

The launch turned back to the wharf where it had been lying.

Charka felt that he was safe, and as there was a slight breeze he raised his sail. He had but one thing more to fear, he reasoned, and that was a Russian gunboat. Boatloads of hay were not infrequent on the Caspian, and he felt assured that it would not be difficult to hoodwink the captain of the gunboat.

Under sail the boat made better progress and was soon out on the Caspian, where in the inky darkness nothing could be seen. The slight wind that had promised so well soon died away, and the boat, now in deep water where the poles were useless, was almost helpless. Its big lateen sails flapped against the rude masts, and the men grumbled. This was not getting to Astrabad, and they had had enough of watching over the lives of a Muscovite woman and a man from what they considered another world. The boat got into a current that carried it out farther and farther, and Harvey, feeling secure in the darkness, called to Alma to come out from her hiding place. They sat together in the little deckhouse waiting for the breeze that must surely come sooner or later.

"By this time they are well in pursuit," said Alma, with a shudder. "It is death to be taken now."

"It would have been death at any time, my darling. We must be cheerful. I wish we had a cayik instead of this old hayboat."

"The cayik is faster, dear M. Irons, but would it be as safe? I fear that a storm is coming. In that little boat I would be afraid."

"I'd take my chances in that as soon as in this old hulk, and there would be the additional advantage of getting somewhere before the storm came."

"Ah, M. Irons, it is a long way across the Caspian."

"I am aware of that, Alma. I've been long enough trying to make the trip. Even now I am a good many days from my windmills."

"I fear you will never see them again, dear M. Irons."

"Not see my windmills again? Why, I'll sell them at the big fair at Nijni Novgorod. Surest thing in the world, my darling. We'll take our wedding trip out of my commissions. But don't call me M. Irons. Call me Harvey. That is my name, as yours is Alma."

"But we do not—it is not like Russian girls."

"You are a Russian girl no longer, dear. As soon as we get to a place where there is an American missionary who can perform the ceremony, or an American consulate, you will be my American wife, and the Russian guns can thunder all they please. Hello! What's up now?"

Suddenly the delayed wind had come in squalls. It whistled through the ropes, and one snapped. Charka could be heard outside cursing and bawling out orders to his men. Harvey went to the door and tried to see in the darkness. The boat began to move rapidly through the water and careened to one side. A flash of lightning showed him the three men hard at work trying to control the sails.

"The storm you feared has come, little girl, but do not be afraid. I'll go outside and see what I can do to help."

"Can I be of use?" he asked, raising his voice to a shout.

"Use! Yes, you can be of use!" bawled Charka. "Help me and my men."

Charka's voice showed his agitation. His men were working like beavers to unite the rope that had parted. Harvey assisted, and soon the sail was belying out before the steadily growing wind.

"Now!" cried Charka exultingly as the old boat gathered speed. "Now the Turk's cayik would not be so fast!"

But his jubilation came too soon. A sudden gust of wind tore the rope he was holding from his hand, and one that had been fastened to a pin at the side of the boat snapped with a report like that of a pistol. It cracked two or three times in the air and then wound itself around Charka's neck. A smothered curse came from him as he struggled with the rope. As Harvey stepped forward to assist him the sail gave an extra pull, and Charka was dragged over the side of the boat into the sea. A cry came from him as he sank, and his men muttered their prayers as they stood shivering, realizing the uselessness of trying to aid him.

"Stand there like idiots!" shouted Harvey. "You've got a small boat. Get it into the water and save Charka!"

"It cannot be done!" cried one. "He is already left far behind."

"Get out the boat, and I will go with you to rescue him."

"No, not you! You are the one who brought this upon us. Many times have we sailed upon the Caspian, but never before did this thing happen to us. It serves us right for taking an unbeliever and a Muscovite woman on the boat. That was our curse."

"Nonsense! Get out the boat."

The two consulted a moment, speaking so low that Harvey could not hear.

"We will go to rescue Charka," said the one who had done the talking. "But you cannot go. You would bring us another curse."

Harvey went into the cabin to get a lantern. With the aid of this he watched the two men get the small boat off.

"Look well for him. He was a good man," said Harvey.

"He was," came the answer as the boat moved off. "We shall not return. We will not remain on a boat with a Muscovite woman and an unbeliever. We do not wish to kill, so we leave."

Harvey stood aghast. Alone he could not handle the sails. He shouted to them to come back, but they paid no attention to him. He returned to Alma.

"The fools have left us! Charka was thrown overboard by a broken rope, and I told them to go in the small boat to rescue them. They took the boat, preferring that in the storm to remaining on this boat with us. They say, my darling, we have brought a curse upon them."

The wind howled. The boat shivered as it was driven along at increasing speed. The timbers surely would not hold together long.

"My darling! What a terrible experience for you!" said Harvey, taking her in his arms. "It is impossible to control the boat. The only thing I can do is to try to cut away the sails."

"Dear Harvey, I will help you."

But they had nothing save the sword of the inspector general of prisons with which to work. With this they hacked at a few ropes they could reach, but the sails were held by ropes that had wound themselves around the masts. One mast broke and fell to the deck. It was beyond the power of both to move it. The speed of the boat seemed to be none the less for the loss of that mast. The rain now came down in torrents. The boat rocked and rolled and the waves swept completely over it.

"We cannot remain here," said Harvey. "We must climb up on the hay."

They soon had a perch in the hay, which they kept by clinging to the cords that bound it to keep it in place. One of Harvey's arms was around the girl. They rushed along hour after hour, each moment fearing that the boat would sink or turn over. Suddenly there was a loud crash. The remaining mast broke and went plunging into the sea. The boat lurched frightfully, and it now seemed impossible for it to live in the foaming waters much longer.

"Darling one!" cried Alma. "My dearest sweetheart! Kiss me! Tell me once again that you love me, and with your strong arm around me I am content to die."

He kissed her passionately.

"It is hard, my beautiful darling, to die when liberty is almost ours! But I see no hope. The boat is filled and must surely sink. If this be God's will, let us not cry out against it. Kiss me again. God grant that this may not be our last farewell!"

CHAPTER XIV.

THE LOVERS ARE SEPARATED.

THE cessation of the storm found the old hayboat still afloat, but the two lovers on top of the hay were in a precarious condition. The wind and rain had chilled Alma, and she snuggled close to Harvey for warmth.

"My darling!" he said as he hugged her close. "This is indeed a terrible experience for you. Rather would I have remained in the prison at Tiflis than subject you to such peril."

"Dear one, they would have killed you, and that would have killed me. Is it not better for us to die together, if we must die?"

"Yes, it is better; but, since the old hulk and its load of hay have survived the worst of the storm, we may yet run across a boat that will pick us up."

"Let us hope so."

They spoke little as they huddled together on the hay. Each was straining to hear the faintest sound that might come from over the water.

"Hark!" said Harvey. "Dearest, did you not hear something?"

"I fancied—I hoped—I heard a shout. Can it be that Russian boats are out after us so soon, and in that storm?"

"The Russians would not be shouting. I fancy it is some one in distress. Perhaps the Turks in that cayik are shouting for help."

Illustrious Stammerers.

Æsop, Virgil and Demosthenes are generally known to have been stammerers, but how many others suffering from the like infirmity occupy an honorable place in the historical gallery?

The first of these whom we can recall is the prophet Moses. He, according to tradition, was a stammerer whose powers of speech were so limited that his brother Aaron always accompanied him, being specially commissioned to speak in his name and stead.

"I am not eloquent," protested Moses, "neither heretofore nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant, but I am of slow speech and of a slow tongue."

Claudius Michael II., emperor of the east; Mohammed-el-Basser, king of Spain during the Moorish domination, and Eric, king of Sweden, stammered pitiably.

Among the eighteen rulers of the name of Louis who have reigned in France we find only one, Louis le Begue, although he was by no means the only French sovereign who stammered.

Fate of Two Gossips.

Mrs. Frog went out one day
For a little walk;
Met a neighbor on the way
Who was fond of talk.

So they stopped and croaked and croaked,
Both their tongues let loose.
Oh, the naughty things they said,
All of Mrs. Goose!

Little Mrs. Brownie Frog
Called her vain and shy.
Mrs. Goosie, listening near,
Winked a merry eye.

To their conversation she Listened, nothing loath.
Then, to stop their idle tongues,
Forthwith ate them both.

RECALL OF DUNDONALD

Canadian Commoners Roughly Handle British Radicals.

Preston, Lemieux, Taschereau Employed to Influence British Government Against Lord Dundonald—Opposition Declares Incident Has Been Made Political to Protect Hon. Mr. Fisher—Liberal Party United to Discredit Late G.O.C.

Ottawa, July 21.—Revived by the debate in the British Parliament, the dismissal of Lord Dundonald and His Lordship's conduct since his retirement from office were made the subject of another bitterly contested battle in the House yesterday. R. L. Borden brought on the discussion by calling in question the utterances of Sir Elzear Taschereau and the Hon. Rodolph Lemieux. The bold warning of the two gentlemen, that unless Lord Dundonald was recalled a bitter feeling would be aroused in Canada against the Imperial authorities struck Mr. Borden as strangely ill-suited to a member of the Government and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with slight reservations, defended his colleague and Sir Elzear Taschereau.

Col. Sam Hughes displayed keen resentment of the action of the British Government in recalling Lord Dundonald, and soon the controversy became general. The merits and demerits of Lord Dundonald as a general officer commanding, his quarrel with Hon. Sydney Fisher and the final rupture of his relations with the Dominion Government were argued all over again. On His Lordship's conduct since his dismissal, centred the really bitter part of the debate. The Liberals did not fail to make use of the argument that in recalling Lord Dundonald the British Government admitted that he was playing an improper part in Canadian politics. It was a source of considerable solace to them that the British Government and the British Parliament had "sat on" Lord Dundonald so unceremoniously.

English Radicals Scored.

The names of Arnold-Forster, Lloyd George, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Winston Churchill were referred to by Liberal speakers with a tender regard for the sound sense and clear judgment of the men who realized that the general officer commanding was doing mischief to the fabric of the Empire. Two at least of these suddenly exalted heroes were roughly handled by members of the Opposition. Lloyd-George, it was pointed out, was a pro-Boer, and Winston Churchill, according to Sam Hughes, was a soldier glorified by the mere incident of being brought out of captivity. The Liberals argued that Lord Dundonald was being exploited by the Conservative party for political advantage. This charge the Opposition vigorously denied and insisted that the question had been deliberately made political in order to afford protection to Hon. Sydney Fisher. Some bitter remarks were passed on the conduct of Lord Dundonald, his speech in Massey Hall, Toronto, coming in for the heavy part of the criticism.

Frank Oliver, the degenerate independent of Alberta, went so far as to refer to Lord Dundonald as a "party hack." Cries of "Shame!" did not restrain him. He formally committed Lord Dundonald to the ranks of the Conservative party and wished the party much joy of him.

Adam Bell of Pictou showed how Preston, Lemieux and Taschereau had been employed to influence the British Government and British public opinion against Lord Dundonald. "To the last joint in the tail," he said, "the Liberal party has set itself to the work of throwing discredit on this man."

Thompson Veers Around.

Col. Thompson, who a year ago declared the rural militia of Canada to be "the skeleton of a skeleton," evidently thought that these words lent weight to Lord Dundonald's statement that our militia is wretchedly ineffective. Acting on this shrewd suspicion, he assured the House yesterday that, thanks to the mighty efforts of the Minister of Militia, strength had succeeded weakness in our armaments, and the ghost of the Canadian militia walked no more. Incidentally Col. Thompson suggested that Col. Sam Hughes was a "lip loyalty" patriot.

The words proved to be singularly ill-chosen, for they gave Dr. Sproule an opening, and he took advantage of it in brilliant style. Col. Thompson was confronted with the embarrassing bit of history, that though he was a dress parade hero at the Queen's Jubilee, and again at the Coronation, he was "under the bed" when Sam Hughes was on the field of battle in South Africa.

Grocers See Government.

Ottawa, July 21.—A deputation of leading wholesale grocers of Canada, together with representatives of the American Tobacco Company, waited upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Mr. Fielding and Hon. Mr. Brodeur yesterday afternoon to protest against the proposed legislation prohibiting any tobacco manufacturer making an exclusive contract with a wholesale merchant for the handling of his goods. There were about thirty-five in the deputation, the majority being members of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier promised to take their representations into consideration, reminding them at the same time that certain tobacco manufacturers had waited upon them and had pointed out that the present conditions were detrimental to their interests. They had set out that under the exclusive contract system they had no chance to exist, as it gave a monopoly of the business to one or two manufacturers.

The Bill a Fraud.

Ottawa, July 21.—"The bill on the face of it is a fraud." In these strong words Senator Wilson expressed his opinion of the bill to amend the Insurance Act, discussion upon which was renewed in bitter earnest when the Upper House met yesterday afternoon. The point still at issue is whether the bill shall be passed in advance of the report of the committee that investigated the affairs of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.

The discussion continued till midnight, when Senator McMullen's amendment deferring consideration of a bill till the report of the investigating committee was received was lost on a vote of 21 to 21. The Speaker gave the casting vote against the amendment.

On a vote of 26 to 16 the amendments to the bill recommended by the banking committee were carried.

The fight will be renewed to-day on the third reading.

DUNDONALD NOT REPRIMANDED.

Opposition May Impeach Sir Elzear Taschereau For His Political Speech.

Ottawa, July 21.—Lord Dundonald had many newspaper callers yesterday. To all of them he gave the same polite but firm answer. He would make no statement regarding the cable communication from the Imperial authorities, nor would he discuss any feature of his differences with the Dominion Government. This much is known, however, that Lord Dundonald will not leave Canada till July 29, Tuesday, which he fixed some time ago for his sailing. He will carry out the engagement he has made with the places desiring to honor him, and he will speak freely if the occasion demands it.

Lord Dundonald is not at all displeased with the communication which he has received from the Imperial authorities. He has not been ordered to return to England. He has not been enjoined to silence while he is in this country. He is an officer on the active list of the British army on half pay, and the War Office has no power to dictate to him what he shall and shall not do in his capacity as a citizen of Canada or a citizen of England. This was admitted by Arnold-Forster in his official announcement in the Imperial Parliament.

What the Imperial authorities did do was to make certain representations to Lord Dundonald suggesting his early return to England and a discontinuance of public speeches. The communication is friendly in tone and cannot be construed to be an order or a reprimand. How Lord Dundonald will respect it remains to be seen.

It is very generally stated here that both Sir Elzear Taschereau and Hon. Rodolph Lemieux were prompted by the Dominion Government to do their utmost to bring about Lord Dundonald's immediate recall. The utterances of Sir Elzear Taschereau have awakened strong resentment in the Opposition. It is noted that the remarks of the Chief Justice were of a marked political bias, and already the Opposition is considering the advisability of bringing in a resolution of censure or possibly an impeachment.

ONLY REMEDY NEW TARIFF SYSTEM.

Chamberlain Commissioner Reports on Iron and Steel Decline.

London, July 21.—The report of Joseph Chamberlain's tariff commission on the iron and steel trades arrives at the conclusion that the decline of the British iron and steel industry is due to the fact that the manufacturers of America and Germany have secured control of the home markets by means of high tariffs and an organized system regulating their export trade; that they are in a position to dump their surplus products on the British and other markets, irrespective of cost, and that the dumping could not be carried on except for the British system of free imports. The committee expresses the opinion that the situation can only be remedied by a system of tariffs arranged as follows:

(1.) A general tariff consisting of a low scale of duties for foreign countries admitting British wares on fair terms.

(2.) A preferential tariff, lower than the general tariff for the colonies, giving adequate preference to British manufacturers and framed to secure freer trade within the British Empire.

(3.) A maximum tariff consisting of comparatively higher duties, but subject to reduction by negotiation to the level of the general tariff.

Mrs. Maybrick Free.

Truro, Cornwall, Eng., July 21.—Mrs. Florence Maybrick is free.

Her imprisonment was terminated after more than fourteen years of her life in Aylesbury Prison, before the arched doorway of the white convent of the Sisterhood of the Epiphany, in this little town, with the black-robed sisters softly uttering their blessings and good wishes for her future.

She boarded a train and started on her journey to France, and will not go to America until her presence there is considered imperatively necessary.

Twenty Hurt in a Wreck.

New York, July 21.—Twenty persons were injured in a crash between a work car and a trolley car of the New York and Long Island Traction Company, near Hempstead, L. I., yesterday. The trolley car was filled with members of the St. George Episcopal Church of Hempstead, who were going on a picnic excursion. Many of the passengers were badly cut and bruised.

His Life For Others.

Winnipeg, July 21.—Tuesday evening seven men were bathing in the Morris River, when two drifted over the dam. A young fellow, J. Casswell, an expert swimmer, dived in to help them. The former two got safely to shore, but Casswell got caught in the whirlpool and was too exhausted to get out again. He sank after five minutes.

Will Close Saturday.

Hespeler, July 21.—The Canada Woolen Mills will close their works on Saturday.

Disagreeable Appendages.

"Hasn't he got his coat-of-arms yet? Why, he told me he was going to look up his ancestry the first chance he got"—

"Well, I believe he got a chance to look up his family tree and he saw some things hanging to the branches that discouraged further research."

Her Worst Fear.

Willie—Oh, mamma, that cook pa sent has red hair, scars all over her face, a breath that smells like whisky. She looks awful mad and says she wants to see you.

Mrs. Slimson—Oh, dear, I'm afraid she isn't going to stay!

LIEUT.-COL. PONTON'S CASE.

The Family Record of a Good Officer —Lord Dundonald Fair.

The reference made by Lord Dundonald in his Toronto address to the treatment received by Lieut.-Col. Ponton, of Belleville, at the hands of the minister of militia is of interest for several reasons. Lieut.-Col. William Nesbitt Ponton, M.A., is the same gentleman, who, a few weeks ago, contributed a very able address on the subject of Newfoundland, before the Canadian club of this city. He represents one of the oldest families of Belleville, and is a worthy type of a very worthy strain of the Scottish soldier, his grandfather, Surgeon Mungo Ponton, M.D., having come to Canada in medical charge of a Highland regiment in the early part of the last century. Major William Hamilton Ponton, the late registrar of the county of Hastings, and known as one of the most courteous of courtly men, is an uncle. Lieut.-Col. Archibald Pongon, an officer in the "incorporated militia" in the early forties, and who, in 1863, raised and commanded the 15th regiment, or Argyll Light Infantry, of Belleville, being another uncle. Lieut.-Col. W. N. Ponton, the officer referred to by Lord Dundonald, after a service in the university company of the Queen's Own rifles, joined the regiment previously raised by his uncle, and after a long service therein commanded the same for a period of years, during which he exhibited a degree of zeal, energy and enthusiasm in military matters much beyond that of the average officer. The honorary colonelcy of the Fifteenth regiment is held by the present Duke of Argyll, better known to Canadians as the Marquis of Lorne, and who, it is known, takes a deep interest in the Canadian corps with which his name is identified. It will thus be seen that Lieut.-Col. Ponton has some Scottish surroundings, besides which he possesses a personal forces of character that it might not be wise to assail. Hence the calling off of their dogs by the Dominion war office can be understood. A knowledge of the incident of Col. Ponton's treatment was heretofore confined to the locality of Belleville. Now, however, that Lord Dundonald has thrown on the searchlight of truth and proclaimed the facts of the case as they occurred, he has added one more instance of his nobility of character, and for which, not only the militia, but all loyal and patriotic citizens of the Dominion will devoutly thank him.—Ottawa Citizen.

A FOSTER MOTHER.

Pedigreed Pups Succored and Adopted by a Maltese Cat.

New York, July 20—As a cat the oig Maltese was a failure, but as the foster mother of five orphaned blue ribbon puppies she has more than atoned for other shortcomings. A homeless ne'er-do-well wanderer, the cat was picked up on the street and taken in disgrace to the pound, where seven kittens were born.

Three weeks ago Nettle, a registered bat eared French bull, valued at $800, gave birth to five puppies and two days later died. Mrs. G. H. Fahnstock, owner of the dogs, who lives at No. 483 EastEightstreet, Brooklyn, was in a quandry to know what to do to preserve the life of the orphans. She sought advice from Mrs. I. N. Dodge, and a discarded baby bottle was resurrected. It was tried on the dogs, and they took to it kindly enough, but the appetites of the five led the two women such a busy existence for two days that it was decided that other provision must be made.

The dog pound, in Malbone street, was visited and the situation was explained to the superintendent.

He remembered the big Maltese, and it was at his suggestion that the experiment was tried. All of the seven kittens had died except two, and it was determined to substitute the five puppies for the missing kittens for which the mother grieved. The Maltese was sent to the Fahnstock home.

The motherless puppies, thoroughly hungry, were at once turned over to the big cat, and the joyous purring welcome she gave to the orphans brought joy to Mrs. Fahnstock and Mrs. Dodge. The cat manifested her happiness in many ways, and for more than two weeks she has nursed and cared for her strange charges with perfect devotion. Entirely content, the puppies are thriving under her tender care, and undoubtedly will live to be exhibited at kennel club shows.

DUNDONALD'S DEFENCE.

They Would Destroy His Reputation But Met Their Match.

Lord Dundonald addressed 500 people in Massey Hall on Friday evening. His speech is applauded by his friends, the friends of the Government call it bitter. It seems to have stirred the enthusiasm of the crowd to a high pitch. It was the speech of a man who feels that he has been wronged and who is bent on setting himself right. The Government and its supporters have gone so far in an effort to destroy his reputation that he seems determined to have it out with them. It was the speech of a fighter, but no a blundering fighter either; but one who knows how to select his weapons and use them to good advantage.

Of course it is open to the supporters of the Government to say that the speech was not in good taste. The meeting it may be argued, was intended as a tribute of respect to an excellent soldier, in which all citizens might participate without distinction of party. Lord Dundonald turned it into an occasion for a vigorous attack on the Government. This may be argued with some force; but if the speaker of the evening violated the canons of good taste, it must not be forgotten that his provocation was great. He had been attacked by the government and its supporters; his veracity had been impeached; his ability as a soldier called in question, and he had a right to defend himself. The peculiarities of the situation made it impossible that he could defend himself without attacking the Government. And, after all, it is not a question of etiquette that is before the people; it is a question of facts. What are the facts?

The charge that he sought to dragoon the people of Canada into submitting to the burden of an imperial system unsuited to the country he frankly says: "I have no," he said, "even suggested in any report I have submitted or statement I have made to the Canadian government, that any contribution in men or money should be made by Canada to the Imperial Government. I know full well, however, that should war unhappily arise Britain could count upon the loyalty of the Canadians in the same manner and to the same extent that was so ungrudgingly manifested before. All that I have advocated in Canada is that Canada should place herself in a position to hold her own." Elsewhere he said: "During my term of office I have endeavored to the best of my ability to build up an efficient force of citizen soldiery, to place the defences of Canada in a condition as effective as the resources of the country would permit. In all this I have proceeded in a constitutional manner, fully recognizing the will of the people as expressed through their constitutional representatives." He always believed, he said, in taking the people into his confidence, letting them know what was to be done, and allowing them to be the judges. This is Lord Dundonald's strong card. He appealed directly to the people. In doing so he gave offence to the government; he violated some red tape rule; some empty formality; but he was guilty of no offence against the people, or the principles of popular government in a country where it is boasted that the people exercise the right to rule themselves, he thought it no great wrong to take the people into his confidence in a matter which he considered of vital importance to them. He was in the position of a servant who looked to stand upon ceremony when he saw, or thought he saw, his master's house in danger.

The mistake that the Government and its supporters have made is that they have gone too far. They were no doubt that he should be punished for a breach of etiquette by being deprived of his command. They seemed to be afraid to trust to the merits of their own case; they pursued their victim with persistency and bitterness. They were not content with his removal; they sought to destroy him. Evidently they started after the wrong man. Lord Dundonald rests on the rule of imperial dictation out east for him. He takes his stand as a citizen appealing to fellow-citizens, willing to trust them with his case and abide by their verdict. It is impossible that under such circumstances he could appeal to the public in vain. If he is able to justify his conduct he is entitled to the opportunity, even though etiquette and red-tape should suffer.—Woodstock Express, Tuesday.

Those Pretty Raffia Hats.

Why don't you make a raffia hat to replace the one that was spoiled on the day of the opening of the lift lock? They are easily and quickly made, and are light and durable. The most popular colors are black, brown, red and the natural shade—a light champagne color. Directions for making these pretty hats may be found in the July Delineator, and the raffia is on sale at the Review office, the only place in town where it may be procured. 2d

OUR WOODLAND WEALTH.

Scientific and Systematic Forestry Needed.

The report on forestry and colonization which was submitted to the Ontario Government near the close of the recent session contains some valuable suggestions for the preservation of the timber wealth of the Province. It is estimated that there are one hundred and sixty-four million acres of forestry land yet to dispose of. With proper fire regulations and aggregate system of re-afforestation the timber supply would be made an inexhaustible asset.

Wood and forest contributed over one-fourth of the receipts of the Province for the years 1901-02, or a sum amounting to $1,234,0.2. The forest is not only valuable as a revenue producer, but also because it affords employment, in winter to a large portion of the rural population. The greatest enemy to the forest is not the settler's axe or the lumberman's operations, but the forest fire.

The proportion of forests destroyed by fire is estimated at all the way from fifty to eighty per cent. The forests of the Province were visited this spring. The fire regulations of the Government have minimized the danger to some extent, but the danger still remains as long as there is carelessness on the part of the settler, the lumberman or the hunter. The report in dealing with subject recommends that it be prohibited to make fires within the forest limits from May 1 to Oct. 1, and that in the event of a dry spring the close season should commence April 1; also that the present system of fire ranging should be perfected and extended throughout the entire Province.

Among other suggestions is one for the establishment of a system of nurseries for carrying and systematic reafforesting the burnt districts, vacant lands and waste places. Spruce and pine, in particular, grow very rapidly. Other suggestions include the withdrawal from settlement of lands not fit for farming purposes, and the abolition of the practice of selling isolated lots in the midst of timber limits, which increase the risk of fire.—Canadian Trade Review.

SIGHT TO THE BLIND.

A Canadian Inventor Curing the Blind by Massage.

A Paris despatch to the London Leader says:—

There is an active-brained little Canadian professor named Charles Dion, the director of the Institut Ophthalmaque, in the Rue de Rennes, who is attracting some attention in Paris as the inventor of an instrument for massaging the eyes.

I happen to know he has cured several cases of myopia, or short sight, and in half a dozen cases he has enabled patients who were perfectly blind to see well enough, not to read, but at least to walk.

The apparatus consists of two tubes with polished glasses, which are fixed on the closed eyelids, the operator regulating the pressure by a dynamometer. What happens through thus massaging a myope is the restoration of circulation in the eye. That is the simple feature of the Dion process. I have seen scores of letters M. Dion has received from delighted patients.

Before 1860, when a boy of 13, he made a tricycle, which his father kept as a curiosity for 20 years. He was a collaborator with Edison in the seventies. In 1867 he had invented in Montreal the first telephone fire alarm. In a perfected form that alarm is still used in the Banque de France. He had a share in the discovery of the phonograph.

I have seen a document belonging to M. Dion, dated March 11, 1886. It is his French patent for "a new system of wireless telegraphy," and foreshadows, and in some measure anticipates, the discovery of Marconi.

For the last ten years he has devoted himself to perfecting his appliance for regulating defective sight. He tells me he is shortly going over to London, where he hopes to demonstrate the value of his apparatus in one of the eye hospitals.

PARTY ON THE INTERCOLONIAL.

Impudent Avowal That it is Being Made a Political Machine.

The admission of the Minister of Railways, that appointments are made to the staff of the Intercolonial Railway upon a purely partisan basis, defended as it was by Sir William Mulock, Mr. Fielding and Mr. Sifton, is equivalent to a declaration that the road is conducted on a party machine. In Parliament it is boldly asserted that no Conservative need apply for a position on the Government railway. The application of that principle to ordinary clerkships in the departments would be indefensible. How much more serious is it when a highly specialized industry like a railway is used to reward party workers. All the coveted positions on a railway must be filled by experts. A private company seeks the best trained men for the various places. The Government of the Dominion puts party before experience. A policy of this kind must work disastrously in two respects. The men employed remember that they secured their positions in return for party services, not because of their special fitness for the work. To hold their places they must have some knowledge of the duties, but for promotion and for favors they know they must depend upon their labors for the party. That is the inevitable tendency. It is human nature. The employees are not concerned to render especial service to the road, but actively to support their patron member. Thus the enthusiasm of the staff in their work is weakened. This leads to the employment of more men than is required. Operating expenses increase, yet this result: where surplus is looked for it be shown. And when it is exposed the system is defended.

It is not too harsh a term to describe the practice as a breach of trust. The Ministers are appointed to administer the public estate for the people. They confessedly manage it with an eye to their own interests as leaders of a political party. The principle is boldly laid down as one that the Government intends to apply in the future as in the past. The debate in which this happened will in all probability rise up to confound the Ministers who took part in it.

We repeat our conviction that a railway, with a revenue of six and a half million dollars can be made to pay. It is a paramount duty of a Government to administer it with that end in view. But to accomplish that purpose it must not be continued as a donkey engine to a political party, but be treated as a serious and important business enterprise that demands from the Cabinet the greatest and most sympathetic consideration.—Toronto News and p

Irish Cattle Hunt.

Such a hunt as would have delighted the heart of Fenimore Cooper's daughtiest heroes has just concluded within three miles of the centre of Belfast city, a herd of wild cattle being exterminated on the slopes of Cave Hill, which frowns majestically over Belfast Lough.

Some years ago Mr. Stafford McLean, a farmer, put some polled cattle on the hill, and a young bull reverted to savagery and induced some members of the herd to follow his lead.

In the course of time they multiplied, and the younger members were wilder than the old. They broke hedges and fences, and foraged anywhere and everywhere.

Mr. McLean was held responsible for their depredations. Claim followed claim for fences broken and haycocks demolished, until the farmer, in despair invited everyone to join in a grand hunt and put a stop once and for all to their work.

Men climbed the hill armed with every class of weapon to be found in the district, pistols, old blunderbusses, sticks, fowling-pieces and knives, and a sprinkling of modern rifles. They warily stalked their prey, but the animals were quick, leaping hedges and ditches in a manner which no hunter could equal.

One or two men got within range, but their small shot whistled off the animals' hides like hail on a pavement.

The hunt on the first night was a failure, but the men came better prepared, and, as a result, most of the animals have been accounted for, and there is not likely to be another such hunt in Ireland for some time to come.

A GREAT MOVE IS RUMORED

Japs Break Through Russian Lines.

ARE MARCHING ON MUKDEN

Russians Telegraph That Japanese Have Punctured Their Lines--Russia Will Likely Back Down.

Liaoyang, July 22.—News was received from Tatchekiao Wednesday that the Japanese had broken through the Russian left flank between Lieut.-Gen. Count Keller's position and that of Gen. Rennenkampff and that they were marching on Mukden. The rumors to this effect are persistent, but there is no official confirmation of them.

Sensational News.

St. Petersburg, July 22.—The most sensational piece of news from the front is the Associated Press despatch from Liaoyang, dated July 21, reporting a persistent rumor that the Japanese have broken through the Russian left wing between the respective positions of Lieut.-General Keller and Gen. Rennenkampff and are marching upon Mukden. The report received from Gen. Kuropatkin bearing the same date, says that there has been no change of importance in the situation, and a close study of the dates shows that the rumor probably refers to the Japanese advance against Gen. Rennenkampff on the northern Samaitza-Liaoyang road, when they drove the Russians back as far as Houtsiatze, twenty-six miles east of Liaoyang. A later despatch to the Associated Press shows that Gen. Hershelmann commanded this detachment of Gen. Rennenkampff's cavalry, and that he turned and took the offensive, subsequently compelling the Japanese to retire in the direction of Sikyan.

Fight Near Mukden.

London, July 22.—A Russian correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Mukden, under date of July 19, says: "A fierce fight has been raging during the past two days and it still continues. The Japanese, who are in superior strength, attacked with great coolness. The Russians are contesting the ground splendidly. The Japanese flanking movements to the east are the real cause of our retirement. Heavy loss have been sustained. The Japanese artillery has again shown its superiority."

The scene of the fighting is not mentioned by the correspondent.

According to a special despatch from Moscow the Russky Listok of that city confirms the Associated Press report from Liaoyang that the Japanese have broken through the Russian left flank and are marching on to Mukden.

Must Explode Mines.

Tientsin, July 22.—Lloyd's agent at Newchwang telegraphs that nearly every steamer arriving reports seeing mines, and that navigation will practically cease unless steps are taken to explode the mines.

Flying Squadron.

Tokio, July 22.—A fisherman reports that the Vladivostock squadron was off Miyako yesterday, going in a southeasterly direction at a speed of 10 knots. If this course and speed is maintained the squadron will be off Yokohama late today. The eastern coast of Japan is shrouded in fog. Shipping has been suspended, awaiting the location of the Russian fleet.

RUSSIA WILL BACK DOWN.

Scare Has Passed—Will Hag to Accept Without Question Britain's Assurances re. the Malacca.

St. Petersburg, July 22.—The scare Wednesday over the Malacca incident has given way to a calmer and more rational view. The feeling in high official circles is that the case will be speedily and satisfactorily adjusted. The main difficulty is the excited state of public feeling in the two countries, but the Russian Government, under the direct inspiration of the Emperor, who is personally anxious to avoid grounds for a quarrel, is apparently ready to meet Great Britain in the most friendly spirit.

While not admitting the Russian captain seized the Malacca without some warrant, Russia will accept without question Great Britain's assurance that the war munitions on board the vessel were Government stores, bound for the naval station at Hong Kong and order the immediate release of the ship. At the same time she will maintain her right to stop vessels believed to have contraband of war on board and detain them if the manifests are not plain, as required by international law.

Whether Russia will agree to discuss the war status of the Red Sea cruisers is not plain, but if Great Britain insists seriously she may offer to refer this and other collateral questions to The Hague Tribunal.

Has the Habit.

Tientsin, July 22.—A letter was received here yesterday from Newchwang, saying that the commander of a Russian torpedo boat had reported that while in the Gulf of Pechili he had accidentally torpedoed a British steamer. It is surmised here that the vessel referred to is the Hipsiang, now five days overdue from Newchwang. The Hipsiang belongs to the Indo-China Navigation Company. It is reported here that a heavy bombardment off Port Arthur occurred Wednesday, and heavy gun firing was heard at Newchwang the same day.

THE POLICY OF INSULT.

Sir Frederick Borden and his hireling defenders are now endeavoring to break the force of Lord Dundonald's exposure of the fact that there are not rifles for our militia nor ammunition for the rifles, by statements that he is making arrangements, now nearly complete, for supplying both deficiencies, the negotiations having been in progress for some time. If this is all true, and this action on the part of the Minister of Militia has not been hurried by the stir caused by the general's disclosures, we have another instance of the studied insults that have been heaped upon Lord Dundonald, when it was found that he would not be a party to using the militia for the purposes of political corruption. Though the Minister has dishonestly hidden the report of the General from Parliament, it is admitted that in it there was a representation that the militia was unarmed. By the defence put forth on behalf of Sir Frederick by his organs it appears that he proceeded to supply this deficiency by prolonged negotiations, without consultation with the General Commanding, and without the common courtesy of letting him know what was being done. For two years Lord Dundonald was left in the uncomfortable position of being in command of a force which in case of need could not have taken the field for want of arms, ammunition or transport, and with the fact hidden from him that any steps were being taken to repair the deficiency. And this dirty trick was played in the teeth of the fact that Lord Dundonald was the expert employed by the Dominion to advise in such matters and that the Minister was bound by statute to call upon him for such advice. Evidently it was intended for an insult, such as was likely to drive the general to resign a position which the Minister thus told him he was unfit to fill.

This illegal and disreputable ignoring of the military expert having charge of such matters was in much the same line as the conspiracy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier with the railway grafters to adopt the political end of the G.T.P. without even the knowledge of the Minister of Railways. The end was secured of forcing the resignation of Mr. Blair, because it was known that he would not be a party to the plot. And it required $10,000 paid yearly to purchase his silent acquiescence.

The new Liberals care nothing for their legal restrictions, nor for the rules of constitutional government. All they value is the means of carrying on the corruption which keeps them in office.

It is a pity that Chief Justice Taschereau should join other judges in discrediting the Bench by acting as an unscrupulous and dishonest political partizan.

The new Liberals send their criminals, their Prestons and Jacksons, to misrepresent Canada in Great Britain. These agents spread falsehoods about the Dominion in England, and about British public opinion in Canada.

Mr. Fisher had no more right to forge an alteration in a recommendation over Lord Dundonald's signature, that he would have to change $100 to $1000 in a cheque signed by the General.

In the House of Commons at Westminster Lord Dundonald was accused of stirring up racial strife. It was Sir Frederick Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier who engaged in this diabolical work, and their criminal agents mendaciously transfer the blame to Lord Dundonald.

The Globe thinks that Lord Dundonald's complaint of the militia not being armed is answered by a statement of the undeniable truth that some Canadian volunteers fought bravely and effectively in South Africa. These gallant men had rifles and ammunition, or they would have been of little service. The General wished all our militia to be similarly prepared if needed.

The Globe objects to Sir Wilfrid Laurier being held responsible for the recall of Lord Dundonald. Considering that his agents procured that recall by their demands and their slanders, he is certainly responsible. He joined in the work of slandering the General by the deliberate falsehood that he was guilty of dragooning, knowing well that it was Mr. Fisher who was doing the dragooning.

THE RACE QUESTION.

Sir Frederick Borden's Rascally and Malicious Innuendo.

There is everything to deprecate in the discussion forced upon the House of Commons by Mr. Lloyd-George, pro-Boer radical; Mr. Winston Churchill, free trade and independent Conservative, and Mr. Timothy Healey, Irish Nationalist. It is scarcely to be avoided that persons at the distance at which they are should take very exaggerated views of the situation, and their utterances could only tend to exaggerate it still further. If there is any race question in the episode it is largely due to the innuendoes of Sir Frederick Borden, for which we do not believe there was any sort of foundation. There is nothing so easily appealed to as race feeling, whether French or Scotch, and when the appeal is made to the prejudice of any man or cause nothing is more ignoble. Mr. Arnold Forster's question as to whether Mr. Lloyd-George represented Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not, we presume, intended as an insinuation against the Canadian Government. Probably those that heard it understood very well that it was simply a taunt at the inconsistency of the quondam denouncer of South African contingents in view of the new brief to which he seemed now to be pleading.—Montreal Witness.

Kept Poor by Doctor's Bills.

Many a family is kept poor by doctors' bills when just as good and oftentimes better results could be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which sell at 25 cents a box of twenty-five doses. As one pill a day is the most frequent dose under any circumstances there is no treatment obtainable which costs so little, and at the same time none which brings about such excellent results in derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

SLANDERS BELIEVED.

British House of Commons Deceived by Grit Officials and Organs.

The debate in the Imperial House of Commons last night is interesting to Canadians owing chiefly to the remarkable ignorance of Canadian conditions which was betrayed by several of the speakers. Mr. Lloyd-George shuddered to think of the "conflagration" that might ensue if Dundonald were to visit Montreal. Winston Churchill described Dundonald as "going on a triumphal tour throughout the provinces." Timothy Healey said that there was no doubt that Dundonald had attacked the Canadian Government because it is French and Catholic." Lloyd-George said that Dundonald should not be allowed to stir up strife "between the two races in Canada," and Mr. Healey demanded to know why Dundonald was allowed to remain in Canada "while his speech was rankling in the French heart."

How such ideas got into the minds of these British statesmen it is easy to guess. Mr. Lloyd-George gave the Toronto Globe as his authority. But the notion that Lord Dundonald has been fomenting an agitation against the French in Canada must have come from eminent French-Canadians who are now in London—Sir Henri Taschereau, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and Hon. Mr. Lemieux, Solicitor-General. These gentlemen have been freely uttering their opinions, "and no doubt they are accepted in Britain as trustworthy authorities on the political situation in Canada. To what extent Sir Henri Taschereau can be trusted as an interpreter of Canadian sentiment is made oclear by his public statement that the whole Dundonald agitation is merely the work of "a few Scotchmen."—Hamilton Herald, Indep.

DRAGOONING LORD DUNDONALD

The Ministers in Craven Fear of His Exposures.

It may be possible to dragoon Lord Dundonald into silence and to dragoon him out of Canada; but it is not possible to dragoon the whole people of Canada into silence; and if all the people who approve of his conduct are dragooned out of the country there will be a greater exodus than Sir Richard Cartwright ever dreamed of in his worst nightmares.

There seems to be a fatuous determination on the part of the Dominion Government and its friends to force the Dundonald question into a party issue. The unfairness, the meanness, the cowardice of making false statements about Lord Dundonald, and then trying to gag him with red-tape, will be resented by every man in the country with any sense of decency. The deliberate lie invented by a member of the Dominion Government (Sir Frederick Borden) that Lord Dundonald was hostile to the French-Canadians has been repeated and exaggerated in the British House of Commons. If Lord Dundonald is not to be permitted to repel this foul slander, there are some hundreds of thousands of Canadians who will feel it their duty to deny it on his behalf. Self-respecting Canadians owe it to themselves, no less than to Lord Dundonald, to put an end to the campaign of slander against him. If the man is not allowed to defend himself, if he is to be deprived of the most elementary right of British and Canadian citizenship the people of Canada are bound in honor to see that he gets justice.—Montreal Star.

SAD DROWNING AT MINDEN.

Percy Smith, Lay Reader at Minden There, the Victim.

Toronto, July 22.—Percy Smith, formerly of Toronto, but for the last two years lay reader at the Minden Mission, Haliburton County, was drowned while bathing there on Wednesday. In a letter received by T. P. Wood, 91 Olive avenue, yesterday, it is said that in company with Rev. Mr. Fenning, the rector in charge, Mr. Smith went in bathing about noon in the river close by the clergy house, there being only a lawn and roadway separating. They had been in the water only a few minutes when he was seized with cramps. Mr. Fenning made desperate attempts at rescue, but neither were expert swimmers. Mr. Smith sank in 17 feet of water, but although the body was recovered in 7 minutes, all efforts to restore life were in vain. Mr. Fenning stated in the letter that there was a very strong under current.

Mr. Smith came from England about ten years ago, his parents residing in London. For some time he was lay helper at St. Cyprian's Church here, and some two years ago was appointed lay reader at Minden, where two clergymen and two lay readers administer to the spiritual welfare of a parish of 1,000 square miles.

It was his intention to enter the ministry, and but for his untimely death he would have been a candidate at the next year's examinations for deaconate. He was well-known in Bracondale, and in the northwestern part of the city, and in cricketing circles, having been for several years captain of St. Cyprian's Club. He was 35 years of age.

Took Paris Green.

Barrie, July 22.—James Keenan, superintendent of the Barrie Waterworks Department, committed suicide Wednesday afternoon by taking Paris Green. Some months ago he lost his left hand through blood poisoning, and the commissioners had recently advertised for a new superintendent.

Wolf Kills Shepherdess.

Madrid, July 22.—A young shepherdess was killed by a wolf at Cabrera, in the Province of Leon, yesterday. The animal then attacked another shepherdess, when a youth, who was armed with a razor, came to her rescue. He attacked the wolf and killed it, but was dangerously injured. A public subscription has been opened in recognition of his heroism.

Victim of Elevator.

Ottawa, July 22.—Dr. William McPhee, dentist, is dead, as the result of an elevator accident yesterday afternoon. He was in the elevator at the Bank street chambers and attempted to get out at the wrong door with disastrous results.

MASONS ELECT OFFICERS.

Next Meeting of the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A.M., to Be Held at Hamilton.

Brockville, July 22.—Grand Lodge officers of the Masons were elected yesterday. The next session of the Grand Lodge will be held in Hamilton. The following officers were elected by the Grand Lodge of Canada, A., F. & A. M.

Grand master, Benjamin Allen of Toronto.

Deputy grand master, J. H. Burritt, K.C., Pembroke.

Grand senior warden, William H. Harrison, Brockville.

Grand treasurer, E. T. Malone, K. C., Toronto.

Grand secretary, H. Murray of Hamilton.

Board of general purpose, W. D. McPherson, Lieut.-Col. Hegler, J. S. Dewar, F. Guest, F. J. Skinner.

Grand chaplain, Rev. Baynes-Reed.

The committee on credentials of representatives of the Grand Lodge reports 381 warranted lodges on the rolls; of these 190 are represented by their duly qualified officers, 131 represented by proxy, 14 are not represented by proxy but have past masters present, and 46 are not represented at all. The total vote was 1,431, and about 900 brethren represent the vote cast.

THIBETANS RETIRED FIGHTING.

Baffled Advancing British Soldiers From Neighboring Cliffs.

Gyangtse, Thibet, July 22.—The British mission to Thibet, under command of Col. Younghusband, on July 18, forced a passage of the ice-clad Karola, the highest pass on the road to Lhassa.

A stubborn defence was expected, but the Thibetans retired early in the engagement, sniping the advancing British soldiers from the neighboring cliffs. The British are now ninety-two miles from Lhassa.

Pensions For Railway Men.

Ottawa, July 22.—(Globe Special.)—After careful consideration and enquiry, Hon. Mr. Emmerson, Minister of Railways, has completed a scheme for establishing a pension system in connection with the Government railways. He intends to introduce a measure, and, if possible, press it through the House at this session for that purpose. The proposal is to make the pension fund available for all the operating staff of the Government railways, who will be required to contribute to the fund, the Government also contributing a certain proportion.

Band concert to-night.

NO QUESTION OF RACE.

Tarte's View of Dundonald Matter—Tried to Improve Militia.

Montreal, July 22.—Mr. Tarte, in an article in La Patrie, denounces the statements made on the Dundonald matter in the British House of Commons. When and in what, asks Mr. Tarte, did Lord Dundonald ever cause offence to the French-Canadians? On the contrary, Lord Dundonald is very popular with the French-Canadian militiamen. He has always acted towards them with the greatest possible liberty, and no one is able to charge him with a single act of injustice.

The debate which has just taken place in the British Parliament once more reveals the fact that a profound ignorance exists in England touching the affairs of this country. The English Government, in inviting Lord Dundonald to return home, has acted in the spirit which dictated our suggestions. It goes without saying, however, that if Lord Dundonald formed the resolution to retire from the British army, it would be his absolute right to enter the political arena in Canada and become a candidate for the House of Commons. Was it not supreme folly to say, as did Mr. Lloyd-George, that Lord Dundonald's conduct was of a nature to create a conflict between the two races of our country? Why a conflict between the two races? There is no question of race in this matter, and those who seek to create a contrary impression are either interested agitators or are guided by complete ignorance of the situation. But whatever may be the details of this regrettable incident, the public men of Great Britain who are making a race question of the Dundonald matter must be told that they are falling in the most vulgar error. The French-Canadians, like fellow citizens of English origin have a powerful interest in seeing our militia organization maintained on a wide and liberal basis. Lord Dundonald tried to attain this end, but he met with difficulties and interference which he believed dangerous and unjust. He denounced them publicly, and in this he erred, but to infer from this that Lord Dundonald is the enemy of the French-Canadians and the enemy of the Government because the leader of that Government is a Catholic, and a French-Canadian, is simply monstrous.

Italians Brought to Canada.

Montreal, July 22.—Judge Winchester began his investigation yesterday into the charges against parties for enticing Italians to Canada. The evidence showed that Italian labor agents had a great deal to do with the influx of their compatriots into Canada. There are 4,000 of them in the city, half of whom came here from the United States and half from Northern Italy.

Arrested For Perjury.

North Bay, July 22.—John Bidgood is under arrest for perjury in connection with the enquiry now under way into the charges of license irregularities in the district. At the opening of the trial last week, Bidgood swore that all the letters received by him from Dr. Henderson had been burned. Subsequently, it is alleged, that he showed some of these letters. His arrest for perjury then followed, under instructions issued by Crown Attorney Browning.

English Cherry Pie.

One cupful of lard and butter mixed, two cupfuls of flour and a teaspoonful of salt. Work the shortening into the flour with a knife, mix with sufficient ice water to hold together, handling as little as possible. Line the sides of a deep earthen baking dish, fill two-thirds full with stoned cherries, add two cupfuls of sugar and place a small cup inverted in the center of the dish. Cover with a thick top crust, no bottom crust being used. Spread over the crust a liberal coating of lard or butter before placing in the oven. When done raise the crust carefully and remove the cup, allowing the contents to flow through the pie. The juice never boils over when confined in this manner, as is too frequently the case with fruit pies.—Exchange.

Automobile Superstition.

The automobile is such a modern institution that it is hardly possible to imagine superstition being already connected with it. Among modern car drivers in England, however, there is a curious survival of an old bit of folklore. In many cars is suspended a perforated stone, usually a sea rolled flint with a natural bore. This stone is supposed to act as a protective amulet. To be efficacious in warding off evil the hole must be naturally or, as some people maintain, supernaturally formed, not artificially bored. Belief in this stone's power is widespread. It is supposed to confer safety on the fastest traveling motor car, and there is many a speedy driver who in his heart ascribes his immunity from accident to the strange power of the perforated pebble.

House of Commons Debates.

Old members of the house of commons are usually of the opinion that the debates, compared with twenty or thirty years ago, are now more businesslike and less oratorical than they were. Some welcome the change and, rejoicing in the greater efficiency of the house as a governing assembly, praise the conversational style of speaking now so much in vogue as less stilted than the old. Others, regretting the loss of the picturesque, distressed that the house should be less attractive as a show, condemn the new manner as more slipshod. There is agreement that the average member takes less trouble with the form and phrasing of his speeches.—London Spectator.

HEART PAINS AND INDIGESTION

Which Were Thoroughly Cured by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Mr. J. Law, 247 Hunter street, Peterborough, and who is employed with the Peter Hamilton Co., states: "For a long time I was troubled with severe splitting headaches and suffered a great deal with pains in the region of my heart, caused no doubt by indigestion. I procured a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and began this treatment. Since using this preparation for some time I can say that I feel quite different, and my health is very much improved. My digestion is good, and the headaches and pains about the heart have not troubled me at all of late. I can sincerely recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a thorough cure for nervous dyspepsia and its accompanying symptoms."

En Route

By Nellie Crevey Gilmore

Copyright, 1904, by J. B. Mitchell

"Good gracious!" cried Dolly, getting to her feet, with very pink cheeks. "I wonder"—

Sanford lifted his hat with one hand and simultaneously held out the other.

"I'm afraid you don't quite remember me, Miss Kensington," he began.

"Remember you? Remember you, Billy? Why, it's only three years since—oh, do say that you have but just come out; that you did not really see"—

"Certainly not," returned he promptly. "After the rain the deck is fearfully slippery. As a matter of fact, I have just succeeded in picking myself up from it."

Dolly laughed softly and plunged five rose tipped fingers through a tumbled heap of sun blond hair.

"You haven't changed at all," she remarked, slipping deftly into the most convenient chair.

Sanford regarded her closely for the space of half a minute, a light that was not unfamiliar there leaping swiftly to his eyes.

"No," he said, quite grave; "not the least bit—not in any respect."

Dolly's lashes, long, blue black, flickered momentarily over the smoke colored eyes. "Not really?" she questioned in a musing tone.

"And you, Dolly," he pursued, alert, tentative—"you have not changed either, I presume?" He took the camp stool opposite her.

A minute's pause, broken only by the rush and swirl of water against the sides of the ship.

Presently Dolly glanced up. "I have not changed, Billy," she replied. Her voice was low, sweet, easy. Her gaze slipped dreamily out to the limitless expanse of quivering, jeweled water.

For some time both were silent, studying the truculent breakers with retrospective eyes.

"And by that I am to infer that you will never"—

"I'm afraid I never shall," responded she.

Sanford smiled, a trifle enigmatically, and looked down at his strong, sea tanned hands.

"Still in the quest of the ideal, I see," he observed after a little, his keen gray eyes shifting transiently along the deck rail.

"So to speak," acquiesced Dolly, following his gaze.

"One might just as well chase rainbows," grumbled Sanford, digging clumsily into his pocket for a cigar. "May I?" he inquired politely.

Dolly nodded, catching her full lower lip under a curved row of milk colored teeth. "To judge by your remark," she commented, with a sudden inflection of ire, "one would think that I was—am—a—that"—

"Not at all," corrected he emphatically. "Very brilliant persons frequently foster illusions. It is an infallible sign of a theosophic mind, though commonly speaking"— He broke off lamely.

"Ye-es?"

"Well, a mistake, I should say."

"People learn by mistakes."

"But scarcely ever profit by them. Experience generally comes too late for—the train."

"I have somewhat modified my ideas," conceded Dolly after a pause.

"As to"—

"Ideals, of course."

"And may I ask—you would not mind telling me whether you are any nearer the—whether you have really"— He looked at her helplessly, a shadow of dwindling hope across his face.

"Not an iota nearer," she cut in, with some abruptness.

Sanford smoked complacently for several seconds. The sun dropped steadily in the west, casting a weird copper glow over the thin, keen, expressive face. Dolly watched him furtively for a little, her gaze gradually shifting to the great plunging emerald columns of sea water, scattering sheets of opal spray and filling the air with salt fragrance.

"What takes you to New York, William?" she asked after awhile, with a sudden assumption of casual interest.

Sanford did not at once reply. A queer little smile developed about the corners of his mouth as he looked at her half averted profile.

A long silence ensued. When Dolly looked toward him again, there were tear traces in her eyes. She held out her hand.

"Let me congratulate you, won't you?" Her voice was studiedly low to hide its meaning. "Who is the—the lucky girl, Billy?"

"The woman I love," he replied sententiously, drawing her fingers into both his hands and holding them close.

Dolly flushed, snatching them away sharply.

"Don't!" she cried. "It's—it's mean of you!"

"By the way, Dolly," asked Sanford, "what are you going to New York for?"

She regarded him narrowly for an instant through contracted lids.

"Why, I'm going to be married, too," she returned, with a wee laugh. "And it's—a—a sort of disgrace, Billy," she hurried on. "I've half a mind to tell you the truth about it."

"Do."

"The man—I—well, it's some one I've been writing to for a long time. I live there now, you know, but I've been away all summer. He—he lives in the south—New Orleans. Perhaps you know him—Ford, Jack Ford, is his name."

"Oh!"

"You do know him, then?"

"I've heard of him," said he circumspectly.

"He's my ideal," explained Dolly, with a charming blush.

"He certainly isn't the sort of fellow you would have married—once."

"How do you know that? You said you had merely heard of him."

"Your requirements were pretty ironclad."

"I told you, did I not, that I had modified them?"

Sanford stared at her quizzically for a moment. "You also told me that you never would; that there was no one"—

"I've changed my mind," snapped Dolly. "That's the prerogative of wise men—and women."

Sanford rose slowly from his chair and stood for a second at the back of hers, looking down at the silk rumple of sun blond hair.

"You haven't exactly set the day yet, dear," he ventured mildly.

"And, pray, how do you know that, Mr. Sanford?"

"At least I have received no letter." He bent his head to the mutinous rose face, then lifted it suddenly.

"What is your ideal, Dolly?" he asked curiously.

"A man who is a real man," said she softly, "one who would do anything, all things, in the great round world to win the girl he loves—who would even go so far as to get some other person to write his letters, forgetting to disguise his little tricks of expression—who"—

"At least," he broke in, "I didn't use a typewriter, an old one with the p and q all out of alignment, just such a one as we used to practice upon ten years ago. Remember when we studied shorthand together that"— "I don't remember a thing about it," interrupted Dolly, two pink roses slipping softly into her cheeks. "I never even think about those—Do stop, Billy! I'm sure I hear the last call for supper."

The Habit of Scandal.

Old Mrs. Etheridge had loved gossip all her life, but, although her ears were always ready for it, she schooled her tongue to disapproval.

Nobody minded what she said, for, although she might shake her head and utter her customary mild reproof, her eyes never failed to express interest and a desire for more information.

The one phrase which rose to her lips when the tale was ended had become so habitual that toward the close of her life she occasionally employed it involuntarily.

"Have you heard about Edward?" asked one of the family connection, moving her chair close to the old lady's rocker and leaning over confidentially.

Grandmother Etheridge shook her head and put her hand to her ear.

"They say," announced the relative in strident tones, "that he's making a splendid name for himself, and has been offered a salary of $15,000 by another firm and that he is just as clever as he can be, has hosts of friends there in Chicago and deserves them all!"

The light of pride and joy shone in the old lady's eyes, but custom was too strong for her tongue.

"You shouldn't repeat it, dear," she quavered. "There's a wrong story somewhere!"

A Fairly Intelligent Dog.

They were talking of the sagacity of dogs.

"My Irish setter saved me a curtain lecture by posting a letter for me the other day," said Longbow, going the last speaker "one better."

The others tried to look as though they believed him.

"Fact," he continued. "Wife gave me a letter to post at breakfast; told me it was very important; warned me not to put it in my coat pocket—calls my pocket her dead letter office. Well, I didn't. I left it on the hall stand; remembered it when I got to my office; called up the maid; told her to send Major to the telephone. 'Hello, Maje!' I said. 'Get the letter off the hall stand and give it to the postman.' Maje recognised my voice, barked comprehension of the message, took the letter in his mouth and went and stood by the nearest letter box until the postman came to collect the mail; wife got an answer that night and never suspected I'd forgotten to post it."

Tender and True.

Squire Benson was often consulted in cases of family difficulty resulting from the storm and stress of time or temper, and he derived a good deal of amusement from the tales told in his little office.

"Is it true that you threw something at Mike that caused the swelling over his eye?" the squire asked a little wiry Irishwoman who appeared sobbing at his door one day half an hour after her husband had departed.

"Yis, I did," said the little woman, catching her breath. "but I niver wint to hurt him, an' he knows it well. We'd just come home from me cousin's weddin', an' I was feelin' kind of soft to Mike, an' I axed him if he loved me as much as he did the day we was married, an'—an' he was so slow answerin' me that I up wid the mop an' flung it at him, Squire Benson, for if we poor women don't have love our hearts just breaks inside of us!"

CHARACTER MAKING.

The Home the Genuine Life School of Moral Training.

Character is catching—provided one who has it to give can get close enough to the one who is to take it. The reason the school cannot do the whole or the chief part of moral training is that even in the best schools and with the best teachers the children have to be handled so largely in masses and at arm's length. In the home the parent lives close to the individual child all the time, and whatever the parent has in the way of character to give the child is pretty sure to take without knowing when or how or even being aware of what is going on, until days, weeks, months, perhaps years after, he breaks out with just such feelings, tones, tempers, looks, words and deeds as he had been catching all the while.

The child learns his moral principles by induction from concrete cases in his own experience and observation. A principle that does not rest on some such case makes about as much impression on a child as a drop of water on a duck's back. The example of the parent is the most potent moral influence over the character and conduct of the child. The kindness, the justice, the temperance, the purity, the charity, the patience, the courage, the foresight, the wisdom, that the child sees exemplified in the life of the father and mother he will tend to incorporate into his own life.

Of course the opposite qualities are equally contagious — unkindness, uncharitableness, impatience, foolishness and the like. What shall the parent do who not infrequently is guilty of these odious things and gets detected in them by the child's discerning eyes? There is only one thing to do.

A great many people confess their sins in a lump to God on Sunday who cannot bring themselves to frankly acknowledge a fault to their own children as soon as they recognize it has been committed. The most sympathetic influence over a child can be gained on no less searching terms.

An obvious corollary from all this is the fearful blunder which busy and preoccupied parents make who turn their children over to governesses and servants at the most impressionable period of their lives and never get near enough to the child's life to influence him one way or the other.

The wonder is that children brought up in that way do not turn out bad more often than they do. Their salvation is due to the fact that the governess and servants are often in all moral essentials much the superior of the parents who are capable of turning their children's training over to anybody but themselves.—Dr. William De Witt Hyde in Good Housekeeping.

The top may be decorated in any desired manner with marking letters or small embroidered flowers. Figured organdie or dimity may be used to fashion the sachet if preferred, and narrow lace may be put on the edge.

The Picturesque Style.

The woman who affects the picturesque style nowadays has a large range of choice. The mode of hairdressing renders the large hat a most suitable adjunct to the gown made after those worn in the time of Louis XIV. The scarf is one of those little additions to dress which a woman can don with great significance, giving an added grace to her movements and to her toilet. Some very pretty ones are being made of tulle bordered with a ruche, in which nestle small artificial flowers, such as lilies or minute roses.

COBOURG HERE TO-MORROW

Will Play the Locals in a League Game.

The baseball match to-morrow afternoon at the Murray st. grounds between Cobourg and the locals promises to be the best of the season. Cobourg are the champions of last year and have always put up good ball, and the ball enthusiasts of town will witness a hard struggle to-morrow afternoon. The local line-up will likely be changed somewhat from the last league games, and it has been rumored that McDonald and Grady will be seen on the team. McDonald played well in the game with the T.A.A. the other day, and never missed a chance to place the ball in the outfield. Grady always bats, and fields nicely.

LINDSAY AGAIN BEATEN

By Bowmanville in Lindsay Yesterday.

Well, who would have thought it! Lindsay beaten on their own grounds! 'Tis sad, but true. Yesterday the Bowmanville team defeated them by the score of 3—1, and we are anxiously waiting for to-night's Post to see whether it was the umpire's fault or the spectators. Perhaps they did not cheer enough—they didn't get a chance, or perhaps the umpire's decisions were rotten. Some day Lindsay will begin to realize that they can't play any game besides ping-pong. Our readers will remember the big kick made by the Post when Lindsay were beaten here on July 1st, and no doubt will be amused to hear a repetition of the wail of the Post again.

The game was a fast one and the fielding was excellent, very few errors being made. The teams were as follows:—

Lindsay—McGill, 1b; Workman, 2b; Miller, ss; Cinnamon, c; McLaughlin, p; Menzies, 3b; Mark, rf; Hooper, cf; Stalker, lf.

Bowmanville—Williams, 1b; Wilcox, 2b; Morris, ss; Wicks, c; Hooper, p; Osborne, 3b; Eddick, rf; Martyn, lf.

THE Y.M.C.A. CAMP ON SANDY POINT

REGRETS AT THE BREAKING UP OF A HAPPY MEETING.

Exciting Ride on Chute—A Long Swim—The View From Eagle Mount—Successful Sports—Good Results.

Y. M. C. A. Camp,
Sandy Point,
July, '04.

Monday morning found every person early on the go. Our visitors mentioned in last letter were quite anxious to try what fine sport it is going down our "chute." The ride is quite exciting the first time, enough so to rouse the desire for its further use. Our baseball league came to destruction on account of broken balls and none to supply their places. This we much regret as there was deep interest in the games and good playing done.

The day was very hot indeed and most of the camp put in a good quiet time. A few days of this sort are very good thrown in with the days so busily filled. A party including Mr. Beal rowed over to Eagle Mount and were much pleased with the "great view" we have heard so much about. It is really splendid. It would be well if views such as can be got from that point were before the general public more than they are.

Just before tea time two of the senior boys were rowed over to the other side of the lake bent on swimming across. They made the trip accompanied by a boat, in case either should get into difficulty. The evening programme was postponed until Tuesday. Whenever there is a lull it is very well filled with a good stiff pillow fight and as our tents are back farther than formerly there is special opportunity on the front grounds for all that is wanted in this line.

The most of Tuesday was put in preparing for the field sports which came on after three o'clock. The boys took an active interest in all the fun, all doing very well. One very conspicuous personage in a somewhat foreign garb kept all alive with his performances, while the different races, etc., were coming on. Enclosed are the winners of the different races:

60 yard dash, jun.—M. Dobbin, W. English.
Stand broad jump, sen.—S. Fife, Roy Webster.
Hop, step and jump, jun.—M. Dobbin, Stan. Madill.
100 yard dash, sen.—T. Brightman, A. Emerson.
Shot put, sen.—A. Emerson, S. Fife.
Stand broad jump, jun.—M. Dobbin, S. Madill.
Hop, step and jump, sen.—W. Harper, T. Brightman.
Three-legged race, jun. — Wallace and Herb, Mike and Stan.
Boot race, sen. —Roy Webster, Geo. Martin.
Race, Duffy and Kranzlein—Draw.
Run broad jump, jun.—H. Johnston, M. Dobbin.
Pole jump, sen.—W. Harper, S. Fife.
Wheelbarrow race — Wallace and Herb, Mike and Stan.
Run broad jump, sen.—S. Fife, W. Harper.
Skin snake race, teams — Fife's team, Thornton's team.
Wheelbarrow race, sen.—P. Wallace and Brightman, Emerson and Fife.
Pick-a-back, open.—Emerson and Dobbin, Hutchinson and Madill.
Tug of war—Pull Hards, Let Flys.

Ghost dance and taffy pull was the evening engagement, and it took a long time to fill it. Three good cheers for the cook could be heard miles away. When plates for taffy were called for the "minstrel band" kept up very good music the greater part of the evening. Wednesday found most of the camp out boating or berry picking, rambling 'round generally. Another party views Stony Lake from Eagle Rock. A general rush is made for a last trip on the chute before it is pulled down. By kindness of Mr. Ayott we are allowed to store all the lumber on his property, where we are satisfied as to its safety until our arrival next year.

We are now on board the S.S. Majestic, all feeling somewhat of a longing for the spot where we have enjoyed ourselves so much. There is somewhat of a sad feature about the camp break up. In all probability all those who have spent such a pleasant time together will not meet here in such a company again. In many respects our leader says this camp has been more pleasing to him than previous ones, an excellent spirit being made manifest by each individual. Our lessons on "The Manly Jesus" were very helpful to us. Quite a number volunteered to take a deeper interest in the work of Him who though now ascended to the sky still lends to earth a brother's eye and still rumbles in the skies his groans and agonies and cries. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Heb. 4. 15.

In closing our letter we wish to thank all who were so thoughtful of the boys and gave such "good things," among whom were Mrs. Geo. Martin, Mrs. Bobt. Nail, Mrs. Dobbin, Mr. P. G. Magbt, Mr. John McDonald, Mrs. R. E. Harding, Mr. W. D. Campbell.

Sincerely yours,
SIMEON E.

POLICE COURT.

Two Drunks Taken in Yesterday—Another Case Dismissed.

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock a man named Larome was brought before Police Magistrate Dumble, charged with stealing some hay. The case was dismissed, Larome paying the costs.

This morning Alex. McDonald appeared before His Worship, charged with being found drunk yesterday. As he had not fully recovered from his bliss yesterday, the Magistrate remanded him for a week. He claims to come from Glengarry, and that he works for the Dixon Co.

Another man, Geo. Harris, was also taken in yesterday afternoon, and was fined $2 by the Magistrate.

Alex. Turner was charged with having on his property some lager beer, that had been stolen from Mr. A. Elliott a short time ago. As there was no evidence that the young man was guilty, the Magistrate dismissed the case. Mr. R. M. Denmatoun appeared for the defence, and Mr. R. E. Wood for the prosecution.

PUSH THE TRENT CANAL.

No Fresh Contracts Let by Present Administration.

The Orillia Packet has the following timely and sensible remark on the completion of the Trent Canal:—

If the Government is in earnest in its professed desire to have the Trent Valley Canal pushed to an early completion why does it not let the contracts for the section between here and the Georgian Bay? Both ends of the canal must be opened before it can serve the purpose for which it is being built, but even to have the northern end open would greatly increase its local usefulness between here and Hastings. While waiting to make up their minds between the Trenton and Port Hope routes, the Government can prove their sincerity by letting the contracts for the work along the Severn, which is estimated to cost only a million and a half. Delay is only likely to involve them in another time-wasting dispute as to routes, which it is in the interests of the country to avoid by adopting the route chosen by the engineers, without regard to political considerations. As the record stands at present not a contract has been let on the canal since the Liberals came into power in 1896. This hardly bears out the Government's claim that they are pushing work on the canals with much more energy than their predecessors.

EXCURSION YESTERDAY.

Had Slight Delays But the Trip Greatly Enjoyed.

The first excursion by steamer through the Trent Canal line to Lakefield and Burleigh Falls was run yesterday by the City of Peterborough and was very successful, the steamer leaving the town wharf at eight o'clock a.m. The route lay through the the stretch of canal between the Little Lake and Nassau, and afforded the excursionists the novel experience of of being elevated by the hydraulic lift lock. So successfully was this accomplished that those on board the steamer were not aware they were going up until attention was called to the movement of the immense pontoon by seeing the rest of the structure apparently sinking into the earth. In fact, those who were engaged in the cabins did not know that the vessel was being locked until after the upper reach had been gained.

The sail along the upper reach, and up to Nassau, and on through the several stretches between the locks was a thoroughly enjoyable one, and presented the beauties of the river route in a charming manner. One or two delays occurred, owing to the pilots not being familiar with the course to be followed, and several of the buoys indicating the navigable channel being missing. These should be re-planted without delay. The several lockmasters were on hand, and lockages were quickly made, though by the groaning and grunting emitted by the lock gates, so long without oil, a gallon or so of oil would not be out of place if applied directly. Most favorable comment was made on the permanent character of the works, and completeness with which all details had been finished up.

A short stop was made at Lakefield to take on a pilot familiar with the Stony Lake waters, and the run was made to Burleigh, where dinner was had at the Darey House, well served and promptly eaten. The return trip was very pleasant, to sail through the canal by moonlight being very much enjoyed. The staff of the steamer and those managing the excursion were most assidious for the comfort and convenience of the excursionists, all of which helped to make the trip a very delightful one. The lift lock was reached at 9.30 p. m. and from there the party walked to town, the lock not being operated after dark.

Brevities.

—Three young men from town had an upset in Chemong lake Wednesday night, but they only sustained a wetting.

There will be Free Methodist meetings on the Sabbath at 11 a.m., and 7 p.m., at 139 Simcoe street, over Brown's flour and feed store. All are cordially invited. 2d

—Mr. James H. Burritt, of Pembroke, who is well known in Peterborough, has been elected Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, A.F. and A.M.

—The C.O.O.F., of Lindsay, are running an excursion to Cobourg on Thursday, July 28th, and the fare is only 85 cents return from Peterborough. The Lindsay baseball team will play in Cobourg on that date.

—The Advisory Board of Engineers for the construction of the new Erie canal, the $101,000,000 scheme, are expected here this evening to visit the Trent Valley canal. Mr. Edward A. Bond is chairman of the Board.

—Nearly every night wheels are found along the streets and taken care of by the police. Last night was no exception to the rule, and one was found standing on George st., about two o'clock this morning. People should be more careful about leaving their wheels lying around at such hours.

—Last Sunday a couple of young men of town went for a sail in a canoe, and they were not dressed for a ducking, but they received a good one. They left their sail up and attempted to go under the railway bridge, which was too low, and the canoe was capsized.

Come with the Band to Lakefield via T.V.C., lift lock and Str. City of Peterborough on Saturday, July 23rd. The boat leaves the wharf at 1.30 p m sharp. Tickets 50 cents. 4d

Mrs. G. B. Cullen, of Columbia, Penn, who has been visiting at the residence of Mr. W. O'Brien for some time, leaves this afternoon on the 5.10 C.P.R. train for Toronto, where she will visit for a few days before returning home.

Miss Muriel Crothers, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Crothers, who wrote on the entrance examinations at Belleville, was successful in heading the list of candidates with a total of 778 marks out of a possible 1,100. Miss Muriel is to be congratulated on her success.

Among the thirteen teachers who have been awarded scholarships for the Macdonald Institute at Guelph, are included Miss Mary Eyres, of our Public School staff, daughter of Mr. William Eyres. Miss R. M. Finlay of Lindsay, has also taught here for some years. There are two successful applicants from Cobourg, Mrs. E. B. Palmer and Miss Sarah Aylmer and Mr. Chas. H. Fenton, of Grafton.

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

CHARLOTTE-ST. WINNERS.

Defeated All Saints' and Win the League Trophy.

One of the most exciting games in the Guild League was the one played last night between All Saints' and Charlotte street. These two teams met a few nights ago, and Charlotte street was the successful team by the score of 8—1, but Charlotte street wins the round by seven runs and thus lands the Guild League trophy.

We congratulate the team on their well-earned success, as they have had to compete with some excellent teams. St. Andrew's, the winners of last year, were very eager to win this year and did their best. George street and St. Paul's both played good ball, and All Saints' stayed until the finish.

This league has been very successful in awakening the interest in baseball in Peterborough, and many young men have shown wonderful development in this particular sport, while the games have also been very interesting to watch. The scores in the games have nearly always been close, and the friendly rivalry that has existed between the teams has tended to make this league very popular.

While the league trophy is won by the Charlotte street team, the runners-up, All Saints', get the Examiner trophy, which is a very pretty one, as we have described in these columns before, and while we have congratulated the Charlotte street team, we also wish to extend the same compliment to All Saints', and wish them every success in winning the league trophy next year.

LACROSSE.

The T.A.S. will line up nearly the same as in their game with Hastings. Gorham will not be able to play on account of an injured ankle, but Judge will likely replace him. The game promises to be an interesting one, as the T.A.S. do not intend to lay down to Millbrook. The game is called for 6.30.

JAS. J. RUTHERFORD, Manager.

Cressman's clerks defeated the grocers by the score of 8 to 6 last night, and an innings to spare. Mr. Hulf umpired. Following were the teams:

Cressman's—B. Gillespie, A. Gillespie c, F. Cressman 1b, T. Boyd 2b, B. Bell 3b, H. Cressman ss, B. Harper field.

Grocers—T. Cunningham p, Nan Belleghem c, S. Oke 1b, B. Togus 2b, Thompson 3b, G. Bullard ss, Harrison field.

Cressman's want to play a return game soon and would like to play Muir's.

This is Catcher Jim McGuire's twenty-first year behind the bat, and he is still as good as ever. McGuire in his career has participated in 1,519 championship games as a catcher. He has been pulled into many others as a pinch batter. The records show that he has had 8,990 chances.

His general fielding average for the 21 years is .892, and his general batting average .271.

The most remarkable feature, perhaps, of McGuire's career is that he has never been fined, put out of a game or disciplined in any way. The placid, easy-going, hard working, and thoroughly conscientious McGuire always plays good ball, but never kicks.

For 21 years this player has kept an even temper in the face of the bad decisions of umpires, good, bad, indifferent and "rotten," in fierce and exciting battles of the diamond, amid scenes that threw spectators into theroes of frenzy, and would drive the most level-headed of fans into the nutty villa had they been physically capable of standing such a strain for a decade.

TENNIS.

Owing to the arduous duties connected with the presidency of the Athletic Tennis Club, Dr. Wightman has been forced to resign, and Mr. Fred. Hall, the vice-president, was elected to his place. Mr. Will Cavanah has been elected vice-president to succeed Mr. Hall.

DR. ITCHIOKA.

Japanese Inventor of the New Explosive, Named Shimose Powder, Is All-in-All, a Very Brainy Man.

The Androssan and Saltcoats Herald, from the columns of which the accompanying picture is taken, says of Dr. Itchioka, the inventor of the Shimose powder, which is being used with such deadly effect by the Japanese forces: Just when military experts were beginning to marvel at the efficacy of the new explosive which Japanese forces are using and startling experts in modern warfare, the name of the inventor was divulged, and an interesting connection between the present Oriental struggle and the County of Ayr was at once established. For Dr. Itchioka spent some years in Ayrshire—at Ardeer, to be precise, where he carried on his investigations at Nobel's great explosive factory.

It is not likely that many of us who saw the dapper little Jap going about amongst us dreamed that he was destined to make an important contribution to the chemistry of military explosives, and that his name and fame would be flashed over all the world. To be sure, those who worked with him knew that he was carefully developing an idea of his own, but he was reticent, even secretive, man when it pleased him so to be, and he said little about his investigations. Probably there was no branch of chemistry with which he was not familiar, and his ability as an analyst was indubitable. For about a month Dr. Itchioka resided in Ardrossan. Some who came often into contact with him then relate how he used ominously to remark that, if ever the Russians came to be at war with Japan, he "would give them smoke." Perhaps that was but an idle brag, but it is more than likely that the doctor had already in his mind some deadly idea, and it is certain that he knew what he came to Ayrshire for. "Take him for all in all," he was a very brainy person. As a chess player he was practically unapproachable, and it is said of him that he could see several moves farther ahead than any of his British antagonists. He was a stoic moreover. There was never a sign of exultation or of disappointment on his face however the game progressed—not a sign, except the merest twitch of an eyelid. This characteristic stolidity displayed itself too in his conversation. He could always talk intelligently on all subjects, and his English was as nearly as possible immaculate; but there were times when he resolutely kept his counsel to himself, especially if the topic were war.

The doctor's assistant was not ostensibly a scholar in English, though a good many people held the belief that his knowledge of the language was much more profound than, for some reason or other, he cared to pretend. He, too, knew all about the making of explosives, and his interest in the business was more than casual.

So far nobody here is able to say what exactly the Shimose powder is, but it is safe to surmise that it is only a modification of one or other of the known explosive compounds. The range of research in the chemistry of explosives is too limited to admit of any startling novelty being produced. By and by, somebody will, no doubt, be able to procure an analysable quantity of the stuff, and then we shall know all about it. Meanwhile, it is interesting to know that a man who has put a prominent finger in the eastern pie has sojourned in our midst, unknown to the majority of his neighbors, for well-nigh a couple of years.

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

Copyright, 1903, by F. R. Toombs

With clasped hands they waited through the dark hours of the early morning. Dawn began streaking the east. Harvey strained his eyes to pierce the scarcely perceptible light. Not more than 200 feet from them was a long, low hull that seemed at rest. The hum of voices could be heard as the wind and rolling current carried them nearer.

"We are saved!" cried Alma, and she wept on his breast.

"Ho, there!" shouted Harvey at the top of his voice. "Whoever you are, help us!"

"What is the voice that speaks out of the darkness?" came a shout. "In the name of Allah tell us!"

Then above the other voice there rose cries of "Allah! Allah, Ill Allah! Mohma Mohammed Resoul Ullah!"

"Mohammedans, and most likely Turks," said Harvey. "Yet that does not sound like a Turkish voice. But any port in a storm."

As the dawn increased and the old hay barge floated nearer the other boat Harvey could distinguish dark forms lined up along the deck rail. He seemed to recognize that long, low, black hull. A rope was thrown to him, and he caught it after several attempts. Those on board the vessel drew the hayboat toward it.

"Who are you?" came a voice in a jargon that Harvey happily understood.

"We are castaways on a wreck," he answered, trying to produce a combination of tongues that these men could understand. He had been long enough in the east to know that when one crossed a frontier he did not at once leave the language of one country behind him and find a totally distinct tongue of another in use. The people who trade across a frontier borrow from each other enough to combine their dialects and produce a sufficiently intelligible language for intercourse, and as one recedes from the frontier the borrowed words from the other country are gradually lost until the tongue of the natives is in use. Thus it was that, no matter with whom he came in contact, Irons could make himself understood.

"We will take you!" came the voice, and the hayboat was drawn close to the other. Powerful arms were outreached to them, and Irons, stiff and sore from the experience of the night, gathered his strength to pass Alma over.

"A soldier of the hated czar!" yelled one on board, scanning the uniform of the inspector general of prisons, which Alma still wore. "One of our enemies!"

A sharp cry escaped Alma, and Harvey sang out:

"Have a care how you use that woman! That is my wife! She wears that uniform only to escape!"

As he spoke he tried to leap to the other vessel, but a long spear stopped him.

"Remain where you are till we understand this thing!" said one who

"Remain where you are!"

seemed to be an officer. "If you attempt to come on this ship before you are wanted, you will be killed."

"What is it you wish to understand?"

Another and another spear appeared until a regular wall of lance points barred him from the vessel.

"Remain where you are!"

The terrified Alma was taken, with polite attentions, to a comfortable cabin, fitted up in oriental luxury. Here she saw, weeping upon a divan, the beautiful daughter of the murdered Biartelkis.

"Koura!" exclaimed Alma, throwing her arms around the girl. But Koura, thinking that she was being embraced by a man, repulsed Alma.

"Koura, do you not know me? I am Alma Jurnieff!"

"Alma Jurnieff! Am I, then, rescued again by Russians?"

"No, my poor girl; I am as unlucky as you. My American sweetheart, who was accused of abducting you the first time and was thrown into prison at Tiflis to be sent to Siberia or killed, escaped with my assistance. I wore the uniform of the inspector general of prisons, and by acting a part I succeeded in getting him out. We escaped from Tiflis while the alarm guns were being fired. The soldiers even came upon the boat where we were hiding under the hay. A storm overtook us. The captain of the boat was swept overboard, and the other men deserted in a small boat, thinking the American was the cause of the storm. M. Irons and I, left alone, have just been rescued by the men on this boat. At least, I am here, but M. Irons is held on the hayboat. They thought, as you did, that I was a Russian officer."

"I know you are not now," said Koura, putting her arm around Alma. "I recognize your voice and face. Let them know that M. Irons is a friend."

"How shall I address them? Do you know them well? When did you come?"

"But a short time ago. I know now that the American had nothing to do with my abduction. Of course you know that my father has not been found, and I had no home. I was lodging with my uncle, Dimitri Biartelkis, and one night as I was closing his house I was seized, hurried into a drosky and taken to the river, where I was put into a Turkish cayik."

"You passed us," cried Alma, "but we did not suspect that you were there."

"You could not. Even the soldiers that came—I thought they were looking for me, but they must have been looking for you—were deceived. I was thrust into a sack and placed under several other sacks of meal and grain, and they did not find me. Oh, this is terrible! But M. Irons will protect and defend us."

"Will he?" demanded a short, swarthy officer of the ameer's boat as he turned Alma rudely around. "Let me look at you. You have cut your hair if you are a woman. But you must be a woman, you are so beautiful. Since we have had so much trouble with your accursed Muscovite officers, and have had to take the bride of our noble prince twice, we will recompense ourselves by taking you also. Keep each other in good cheer, for in a short time the officers of our glorious ameer will dance at the wedding of his son, the prince. I will have the American, as you call him, thrust aside."

Reaching the deck, he gave commands to raise the anchor and set sail.

"We have accomplished that for which we came and more," he said. "The supposed officer is, as that fellow said, a woman and a beautiful one."

"What is that?" asked the heavy voice of an officer who seemed half drunk as he came up to where the group stood with their spears leveled at Harvey's breast.

"I report, Karakai, that we have accomplished more than our mission. We received from Hafis Effendi and Mizik the beautiful daughter of the merchant Biartelkis, whom they assure us is the loveliest young woman in the world and a fitting bride for our noble prince. Now comes this load of hay on which two cried for rescue. One is this man you see, of a race called Americans. The other is clad in a Russian uniform, but proves to be a lovely young woman, as lovely as the other. She is on board. I have ordered the ship to sail. Have I done right?"

"Yes. But let me see this last one."

He went to the cabin and gazed with delight upon the white and agitated face of Alma.

"You are a prize indeed," he said. "We will keep you. In obeying the orders of the ameer and taking to Bokhara a bride for the prince we receive nothing but good words for duty done, while Hafis Effendi gets the money. But with you we can do as we please. You are lovely enough to sell to a prince and line our purses with gold."

"Have mercy! Have mercy!" cried Alma, falling on her knees and holding up her clasped hands in supplication. "Have mercy on my friend who is still on the hay! Save his life, set him free and do with me what you will!"

Karakai looked a moment into her upturned, tearful face. Then, with a grin, he went on deck.

"Push that hayboat off!" he shouted. "Let the infidel die or escape as he may. Push him off!"

"In God's name do not separate me from my wife!" shouted Harvey desperately.

"Your wife!" repeated Karakai, with a laugh. "She does not say so. She says you are but a friend. She has found another friend on the ship, one who is as beautiful as herself, the daughter of Biartelkis, the merchant of Tiflis. They will get along together, and at Bokhara they will become the brides of princes. But you! We cannot make money by taking you, and you might prove troublesome. The storm is past. You have plenty of fodder and will not starve. Hay is good. All beasts eat hay."

With a shout of laughter the men shoved away with their spears, and as the wind filled the sails of the long black sloop Harvey, enraged and filled with alarm for Alma, was floating alone on the Caspian on a boat filled with water, the load of hay settling deeper and deeper in the sea.

CHAPTER XV.

FOUR GENTLEMEN OF WEALTH.

THE situation of Harvey Irons on the hayboat was critical in the extreme; but, great as was his danger, he regarded it as nothing compared to the danger that threatened Alma. He was almost exhausted from hunger, cold and grief. The boat slowly drifted in a southern direction, making toward the eastern side of the Caspian. It drifted out of the ordinary course of navigation, and he watched in vain for a passing vessel. He watched as long as possible the course of the ameer's sloop and reasoned that it was making for the nearest Bokharan port. Night came on, with no rescuing vessel in sight. Hour after hour he drifted, hoping almost against hope, ever thinking of Alma and of a way to help her. About midnight it seemed to him that the rocking motion of the boat had ceased; that it had become stationary.

"Here is a pretty mess!" he exclaimed. "I wonder if this old hulk has run aground. The Caspian is shallow, but I did not think a boat like this could run aground in the middle of it."

An examination in the dark was not easy. Harvey slid down the pile of hay, groping about with one hand while he clung for safety with the other. He fancied he saw a faint light glimmering some distance from him, but it disappeared as suddenly as it had come. He saw the light again, a quick passing from one point to another, but showing for a moment only.

"Now, that light is not on a vessel," Harvey reasoned. "It is a lantern carried around by a person who is walking on land. If I drifted aground here, certainly there cannot be water enough at that place to float any kind of vessel. I've probably drifted on the shore of some island. Is it a hospitable island, or will I be worse off in the clutches of the inhabitants than where I am? The wind may drive me off again before morning and a vessel pick me up. But would the vessel be any safer than this island? And how can I investigate without attracting attention?"

Soon there was another gleam of light such as might come through an open door from a light within. A man was standing between Harvey and the light. He seemed to be looking toward the hayboat, but soon disappeared into the same place from which came the mysterious light.

"It is an island," said Harvey. "I am now resting on a shoal, and the water cannot be very deep between this and the island. I'll swim ashore and risk it."

He removed some of his clothing, made a bundle of it and slid off into the water. To his surprise he could stand on bottom. Carefully he felt his way. For a short distance the water grew more shallow. Then it got deeper, and he was forced to swim. After a short swim he again felt the ground under his feet, and he waded on to dry land. The shore was sandy.

He moved slowly and cautiously. It was difficult to locate where the light had been. He groped along, wandering in many curves. Trees were on the island, but he could see no trace of a building. After groping some time in the darkness he discovered what appeared to be a rock about five feet high. Feeling the surface of this, he found that it was not a solid rock, but a rocky formation with an opening on one side. Lying flat on the ground and peering in, he saw a light far in the earth, apparently from a lantern hung on a peg. He slowly crawled inside the cave. After advancing for several feet he found that he could stand up and walk.

A voice came from behind a shelter of the rocky wall that projected into the chamber. It pleased Harvey that it was not the voice of a Russian, for Russians were the only people he had any reason to fear.

"I have spoken," said a calm, stern voice within the concealed chamber. "I have given the treasure as it should be given."

"But, no, my brother," came a voice that seemed to Harvey to tremble with emotion. It was a harsh, cold voice, not like the other. "You have done well for yourself. You have done well for the clans in the mountains. But we have not fared as we should. Was it not our courage that made the accumulation of this booty possible?"

"Yes; that is so," answered the first speaker. "But I am Palpak, chief of the Zannucks, and it was I who planned everything. The wealth that came from the ameer's people we were compelled to hide here until the ameer's soldiers had finished their search among our villages, and the wealth that came from the Buddhist temples, which we found the most valuable of all, and the gold that came from the paymasters of the Russian soldiers whom we attacked and robbed. All these are mine—mine! Do you understand, Domitan? It was Palpak, the chief, who in the interest of all his people, downtrodden as they are by the wicked ameer, strove to gain that with which we could buy horses and cattle and make the Zannucks wealthy. I have given you enough. The rest must be divided among the people."

"No," said a third voice, thick and guttural. "Domitan is right, Palpak, though you be chief. We were with you in all the ventures. It is not right that you should rob us now."

THE GRAND AGGREGATE

Corp. McGregor, Ottawa, Wins Lord Strathcona's Gold Watch.

Second in Grand Aggregate Made By Staff Sergt. Crowe Wins the Silver Tea Service of the Canada Company—Shooting For the St. George's Vase—John Howard of Nova Scotia Makes Seven Bullseyes Simultaneously.

Bisley Camp, July 22.—Corporal R. McGregor, G.G.F. G., Ottawa, having the highest Canadian score in the grand aggregate, wins Lord Strathcona's prize of a gold watch. Staff-Sergt. Crowe, C. R., 30th Guelph, being second highest of the Canadians, wins the silver tea service, given by the Canada Company. The grand aggregate prizes are awarded to competitors whose respective scores in the King's Prize, first stage; St. George's Vase, first stage; Alexandra, Daily Graphic, Daily Telegraph and Graphic, make up the highest aggregates.

St. George's Vase.

This competition opened yesterday with the first stage at 500 and 600 yards, 7 shots at each distance, the first hundred shooting in the second stage, 15 shots at 900 yards, to-day. Winner receives the challenge vase, dragon cup, gold cross and £30; the second the silver cross and £25, and the third the bronze cross and £20. The next seven each receive the N. R. A. badge and £10, and these are 275 other prizes. Following are the scores of the Canadians:

500 Yards.

Sergt. Bayles, 10th, Toronto, 32; Pte. A. Baynton, 48th, Toronto, 30; Capt. H. C. Blair, Truro, 32; Capt. J. Crowe, Guelph, 31; Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe, Guelph, 33; Col.-Sergt. W. H. Davidson, Montreal, 30; Capt. R. Dillon, Whitby, 32; Lance-Sergt. W. G. Fowler, Toronto, 31; Col.-Sergt. A. G. Gardner, Sherbrooke, 29; Sergt. W. Gould, Guelph, 31; Pte. J. G. Goudie, Quebec, 30; Corp. R. McGregor, Ottawa, 29; Major W. P. Moore, Georgetown, 30; Sergt. G. Mortimer, 10th, Toronto, 29; Pte. J. Perry, Vancouver, 32; Pte. C. S. Scott, Ottawa, 32; Pte. Neil Smith, Stewart, 29; Pte. H. Tyers, 10th, Toronto, 29; Pte. T. Westman, Ottawa, 30; Col.-Sergt. W. Will, Hamilton, 32; Col.-Sergt. W. H. Youhill, Winnipeg, 33.

John Howard, Agent-General in London for Nova Scotia, put seven shots right in the centre of the bullseye in this match at this range. He was twelfth in the Duke of Cambridge, winning £3.

600 Yards.

Fowler 32, Gould 32, Westman 31, McGregor 33, Moore 21, Tyers 30, Capt. J. Crowe 32, Perry 34, Smith 31, Baynton 27, Staff-Sergt. Crowe 31, Goudie 30, Mortimer 31, Scott 29, Davidson 29, Dillon 27, Youhill 29, Will 31, Gardner 28, Bayles 30, Blair 28.

Two in Second Stages.

All scores of sixty-four in the St. George's Vase at 500 and 600 yards will shoot for thirty places in the second stage at 900 yards. Staff-Sergt. Crowe is the only Canadian eligible.

Pte. Neil Smith, of the Essex Fusiliers, is in the second stage for the "King's Prize."

Canadian Winners.

In range prizes, in the "King's" at 600 yards, Pte. Baynton took fourth place, with a score of 34, winning £1.

In the first stage of the "King's Prize," Sergt. Gardner was 371st, winning £2. Sergt. Davidson took 469th place and £1. Capt. Blair was 472nd and carried off £1.

Canadian Scores.

In the Kynoch competition at 1,000 yards, Sergt. Mortimer of the 10th Royal Grenadiers, scored 40 out of a possible 50. Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crows scored a similar number of points.

Sergt. Crowe also scored 40 in the "Handsworth" competition, 10 shots at 900 yards.

In the "Imperial Tobacco" match, 10 shots at 1,000 yards, Corp. McGregor scored 38, Pte. J. Perry 35, Capt. Blair 40, Capt. Crowe, Pte. J. W. Smith and Pte. H. Tyers each 42.

WEIGHING NOT HONEST

Rufus Pope, Member For Compton, Makes Strong Accusations.

The House, Notwithstanding, Defeated His Motion By a Vote of 75 to 46—His Resolution Was in Behalf of the Farmers, But Was Voted Down—Uriah Wilson on Undesirable Immigrants—Position of Hon. Mr. Sifton.

Ottawa, July 22.—On behalf of the farmers and dairymen of Eastern Ontario and the eastern townships of Quebec, Rufus Pope yesterday in the House exposed what he declares to be a dishonest system of weighing dairy products in the city of Montreal. He wound up with a motion affirming that the farmers of Canada had wrongly suffered for many years through the system of weighing butter and cheese at the port of Montreal, and that for this evil the Government was responsible. The motion also called for condemnation of the Government for its failure to act on the report of W. S. Parmalee's Royal Commission, bearing date of Oct. 22 last, which showed the necessity for a new system of weighing. This motion was defeated on a vote of 75 to 46, but not before some very strong accusations had been made by Mr. Pope.

Wilson and Sifton.

When the estimates of the department of the Interior were under discussion yesterday, Uriah Wilson protested against the policy of admitting undesirable immigrants into Canada. The laws had been improved, he said, but there was still room for improvement, both in the stringency and the medical examination and in the exclusion of paupers.

Referring to the 54 delegates despatched to England by the immigration department to bring settlers to Canada, Mr. Wilson said these delegates cost the country $25,000, and the net result of their joint efforts, as shown in the report, was to bring ten or twelve people from England to this country.

Mr. Sifton took the position that the medical examination was as stringent as it was practicable to make it. He also argued that the country was well protected against the inroads of paupers.

We Take U.S. Leavings.

E. B. Osler pointed out that between June 19 and May 19, 2,441 European immigrants destined for the United States landed in Canadian ports and were turned back at the border by the United States inspector. Of these 91 were rejected as paupers, 305 as contract laborers, 653 as diseased and 8 as idiots, all of whom remained in Canada.

E. F. Clarke said the answer to that was the care which the United States Immigrant Department exercised in medical examination of immigrants.

Dr. Sproule criticised the inadequacy of the medical examination at Canadian ports.

Mr. Puttee complained of the large amount of public money spent in bringing into Canada non-settlers, men and women sent here largely for strike-breaking purposes.

Read a Third Time.

Ottawa, July 22.—In the Senate, Senator J. K. Kerr moved the third reading of the bill to amend the Insurance Act. After numerous amendments, the bill was then read a third time and the title changed to "An Act respecting the Canadian assessment policy-holders in the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company."

PROVINCES LOST THEIR APPEAL.

Redistribution of Last Year Upheld By the Privy Council.

London, July 22.—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has practically decided that the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have no case in their appeal against the reduction of their representation in the House of Commons.

When the case was resumed yesterday morning, Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., on behalf of Prince Edward Island, spoke for two hours and a half, and was followed by Hon. William Pugsley, Attorney-General of New Brunswick, who spoke for an hour and a half.

After luncheon the court decided that it was not necessary to call on the counsel for the Dominion, but reserved judgment.

Mr. Blake said: "No comment is needed. The Dominion has won. That is all."

What It Means.

Briefly stated, the proceedings in the Privy Council mean that the provinces must submit to the reduction of their representation in the Dominion Parliament, and that the redistribution act is valid.

The outcome of the appeal also means that the Dominion Parliament will be prorogued next week or early the following week. For some days the Government has been conducting the business of the House in a leisurely manner. It was strongly of opinion that the provinces would lose their appeal, but it did not dare take even the remote risk of proroguing Parliament in advance of a decision favorable to the appellants. Such a decision would have necessitated a reconstruction of the redistribution act, in which event it would be necessary to delay the general elections till next year. The outcome of the litigation leaves the Government free to hasten prorogation and make ready for autumn elections.

Two Americans Shot Down.

Washington, July 22.—The following telegram has been received by Acting Secretary of State Loomis from Louis Kaiser, the American Consul at Mazatlan, Mexico, dated Wednesday:

"Two Americans were shot down in their office at Aguas Caliente, in this State, by officials."

Macdonald Scholarships.

Toronto, July 22.—The following teachers have been accepted as scholarship candidates by the Minister of Education for the Macdonald Institute course, commencing in September next at Guelph: R. F. Hacklock, Smiths Falls; Charles T. Yeo, Little Britain; Mrs. E. Birchard Palmer, Cobourg; Miss Louise Short, Salem; Miss Ella M. Robertson, Kincardine; Miss R. M. Finley, Lindsay; Miss Sarah Crysler, Cobourg; Miss Mary Eyres, Peterboro; Charles H. Fenton, Grafton; W. J. Robinson, Dutton; T. W. Kidd, Barrie; C. E. Jamieson, Morrisburg. Miss Harriet M. Huff, Rossmore.

How to Keep Dominant.

London, July 22.—In the Commons yesterday, Joseph Chamberlain, defending, as member of Parliament for West Birmingham, the introduction of Chinese labor into the Transvaal, which policy was inaugurated while he was colonial secretary, contended that white laborers would not work side by side with black laborers on equal terms, and he thought the white men were right. He added: "As the dominant race, if we admitted equality with inferior races, we would lose the power which gave us our dominance."

To Inspect Life-Saving Apparatus.

Ottawa, July 22.—Capt. McCuaig of the Marine Department has been appointed a special steamboat inspector to examine life preservers, life boats tackling, fire fighting apparatus, etc. Unless the requirements are fully met he has power to detain the vessel. The precautions probably arise from the terrible disaster to the General Slocum in New York.

Succeeds Murdered Man.

Toronto, July 22.—A short council meeting was held yesterday afternoon, and besides routine some appointments were made.

In place of Constable Irving, who was shot by Chartrand, Arthur E. Storie, now at Copper Cliff, has been chosen for the vacancy in Webbwood.

John Ronan, Hamilton, will be bursar at the Penetang Institution.

Back to the Stockyards.

Chicago, July 22.—Superintendent Connor of Armour & Co., said: "Practically all of the skilled men will be put back to work to-day, but not all of the laborers will be taken now."

MRS. MAYBRICK FREE

After Serving Fourteen Years Imprisonment in England.

Truro, Cornwall, Eng., July 20. — Mrs Florence Maybrick is free. She left here at 11.43 a.m. to-day on her way to France.

Mrs. Maybrick's imprisonment was terminated after more than fourteen years of her life in Aylesbury prison before the arched doorway of the white convent of the Sisterhood of the Epiphany of this little town, with the black robe deaters softly uttering their blessings and good wishes for her future. With two companions Mrs. Maybrick entered the carriage of Miss Daley, secretary of the sisterhood, and was driven rapidly to Grampell, a small station fourteen miles away, where, after exchanging good-byes with her companions, she boarded a train and started on her journey to France. She will not go to America until her presence there is considered necessary.

The greatest secrecy was shown about Mrs. Maybrick's departure. Mother Superior Julian of the convent said to a press representative that under her instructions she must refer all inquirers to the home office Others at the convent were equally uncommunicative.

At the railroad station orders were issued forbidding the employes to discuss Mrs. Maybrick or even to admit that she was at the convent.

Mrs. Maybrick is not freed unconditionally. She is out on ticket-of-leave, but to all intents she is as free as any other person, can go where she will and will not have to make a report to the British authorities, as once Mrs. Maybrick is abroad she will be outside British jurisdiction. The Baroness Deroques has made preparations at Rouen for Mrs. Maybrick's arrival at her quiet home there where she will begin a new life. When Mrs. Maybrick first arrived, she was kept under strict surveillance, never leaving the convent walls. Even for a walk in the grounds she would have to be under the escort of one of the sisters. Subsequently she was allowed to walk in the quiet streets of this picturesque place and in the shady country lanes in the vicinity. Those who have seen the published portraits of Mrs. Maybrick soon got to recognize the black-robed woman, with black bonnet and flowing strings, and gave her friendly greetings, which frequently passed unnoticed. Mrs. Maybrick seeking so far as possible to avoid the attention of the curious. Her time at the convent was taken up with sewing, reading and chatting with the sisters, endearing herself to them by many acts, showing that even the many years of servitude at Aylesbury prison had been unable to stamp out her innate kindly disposition. After her departure it was said by a sister at the convent that Mrs. Maybrick had given no trouble whatever, and that her conduct had been most exemplary, she observing without question all the regulations. She had not asked for and had not been given unusual favors. Nevertheless the Mother Superior was glad to be freed from her responsibility.

For Over Sixty Years

An old and well-tried remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Sold by all druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

PERCY SMITH WAS DROWNED.

Loses His Life at Minden—St. Cyprian's Helper.

Toronto, July 21.—A telegram was received last night by Mr. T. P. Wood, 19 Olive Avenue, from Minden, announcing the death by drowning of Mr. Percy Smith, formerly of Toronto, and for some time lay helper at St. Cyprian's church. About two years ago Mr. Smith was appointed lay reader at the Minden Mission, Haliburton County, where two clergymen and a lay reader minister to a parish of 1,200 square miles. His intention was to enter the ministry, and but for his untimely death he would have been a candidate at the Bishop of Toronto's examination for the diaconate next year. He came from England about ten years ago, his family residing in London. He was well known in Bracondale, the north-west part of the city, and in cricketing circles. For several years he was captain of the St. Cyprian Cricket Club. He was about 35 years of age.

Lindsay, Ont., July 21.—(Special).—Yesterday afternoon while bathing at Minden, Ont., a man named Percy Smith, a lay reader from Toronto, in company with two clergymen, lost his life. The unfortunate man was only in the water seven minutes, but all efforts to resuscitate him were unavailable. The water was seventeen feet deep at the spot where the accident occurred.

SAVED THREE LIVES.

A Plucky Girl Went Promptly to the Rescue.

Toronto, July 21—Miss Rae Petrie, daughter of Mr. H. W. Petrie, of 379 Huron street, whose summer home is on Clandeboye avenue, Center Island, has earned any reward the city has to offer for daring and courage.

About half-past five yesterday afternoon a canoe containing three people was upset about half a mile off the Island opposite Clandeboye avenue and main street. The beach was crowded, several men being among those present. The unfortunate people in the water were clinging to the upturned boat and calling for help, but no one made any move to go out to assist them.

"Well," Miss Petrie said, "if no one else will go out, I will."

Miss Petrie has been out in a canoe often enough, but does not claim to be an expert canoeist. In spite of this she jumped into a canoe which was on the beach and started out. A man on the beach called to her to come back and to get some one to go with her, and she did so and persuaded a boy to get in the canoe with her.

They went out together and went alongside the upturned canoe. The people clinging to the boat were Mr. Murdoch, Miss Cosgrave, and Miss Kidner. By the time Miss Petrie reached them Miss Kidner had let go her hold and had sank once. When she came up Mr. Murdoch caught her and held on to Miss Petrie's canoe. Miss Cosgrave also caught hold of the canoe.

In the meantime, Miss Cosgrave, a sister, had started out in another canoe. Mr. Murdoch got Miss Kidner into this boat and got in himself. Miss Petrie succeeded in getting Miss Cosgrave into her boat, and all returned to shore safely.

On landing, Miss Petrie received quite an ovation, and has been the recipient of many congratulations. By her pluck and prompt action she succeeded in preventing a very serious accident and all the Island residents are enthusiastic in singing her praises.

A GREAT MOVE IS RUMORED

Will Act As Patrols.

Aden, Arabia, July 22.—The Russian fleet vessels continue to patrol this vicinity. They did not attempt to interfere with the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Palawan, which passed here yesterday morning. Steamers of the French (Messageries) Lina are allowed to pass unchallenged.

British Cruisers Move.

Valleta, Island of Malta, July 22.—The British cruisers Lander and Lancaster, accompanied by three torpedo boat destroyers, left here during last night to rejoin the Mediterranean squadron.

The Crisis Is Acute.

London, July 22.—The authoritative assurances that the Malacca will be released, cabled by the Associated Press from St. Petersburg, do not appear in the British morning papers. Special despatches to a somewhat similar effect from St. Petersburg do not ally the alarmist views of the leading organs, which construe Premier Balfour's post-midnight announcement that the Government had received no confirmation of the reported release of the Malacca to mean that the incident remains unsettled.

Against Another War.

London, July 22.—Twenty guineas per cent. was quoted at Lloyd's yesterday for insurance against the outbreak of an Anglo-Russian war within three weeks. This is the rate which prevailed at Lloyd's on the Russo-Japanese war three weeks prior to the outbreak of hostilities.

LEAVES OTTAWA TUESDAY.

Todd's Parliamentary Government Quoted in Favor of Dundonald.

Ottawa, July 22.—Lord Dundonald has decided to leave Ottawa next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. He will proceed by a special train to Montreal. The following evening he will be the guest of the St. James Club. The general, it is understood, will respect the spirit of the instructions cabled by the British War Office. That he has done nothing to violate the laws, however, is generally admitted.

The following extract from Todd's "Parliamentary Government in England" shows that in addressing public meetings Lord Dundonald is clearly within his rights:

"Furthermore, in the case of military or naval officers, no impediment is placed in the way of their becoming candidates for a seat in the House of Commons, and, if elected, no intemperate or even factious language made use of by them in their place in Parliament, unless taken up by the House itself and made the subject of an address to the Crown, would be accounted a good reason for dismissal from the service. And similar freedom of speech is also allowed at ordinary political meetings, provided that nothing be said that is treasonable or a direct infringement of the Mutiny Act or the Articles of War."

Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"YOUNG WOMEN:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstruation periods. I am most grateful."—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 26 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Painful Periods

are quickly and permanently overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The above letter is only one of hundreds of thousands which prove this statement to be a fact. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality,—if it is painful something is wrong. Don't take narcotics to deaden the pain, but remove the cause—perhaps it is caused by irregularity or womb displacements, or the development of a tumor. Whatever it is, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is guaranteed to cure it.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

Details of Another Case.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and carelessness is the cause of most of the sufferings of women. I believe that if we properly understood the laws of health we would all be well, but if the sick women only knew the truth about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they would be saved much suffering and would soon be cured.

"I used it for five months for a local difficulty which had troubled me for years, and for which I had spent hundreds of dollars in the vain endeavor to rectify. My life forces were being sapped, and I was daily losing my vitality.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me completely, and I am now enjoying the best of health, and am most grateful, and only too pleased to endorse such a great remedy."—MISS JENNIE I. EDWARDS, 604 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Pinkham, whose address is Lynn, Mass., will answer cheerfully and without cost all letters addressed to her by sick women.

QUEBEC FAVORS DUNDONALD.

His Association With French-speaking Militia of Most Cordial Nature.

Montreal, July 20.— Despite the announcement that Lord Dundonald had been recalled to England by the British War Office, arrangements for the big reception to be tendered him by the citizens of Montreal, under the auspices of the Caledonian Society, are proceeding. Lord Dundonald will arrive here on the 27th, and in the evening will be the guest at a private dinner at the St. James' Club. The citizens' reception will take place on the following night.

The utmost surprise was experienced today at some of the statements made in the British Commons last night, especially the statement that some of Lord Dundonald's utterances are rankling in the hearts of French-Canadians. The absurdity of the statement is shown by the fact that all of Lord Dundonald's references to the French-Canadians have been of the most friendly and complimentary nature. Col. F. S. McKay, commanding officer of the 65th Regiment, Montreal's crack French-Canadian corps, voiced the sentiments of thousands of French-Canadians in an interview today. Col. MacKay said:—"It is altogether objectionable that considerations of race and religion should be introduced into the controversy arising out of the dismissal of Lord Dundonald. When Mr. Healy did so, speaking in the Imperial House of Commons, he was very ill-advised.

"It is absurd to suppose that any of Lord Dundonald's utterances or actions rankle in the hearts of the French-Canadians. So far as I am aware, the relationship existing between the late General Officer Commanding and the rank and file of the French-Canadian militia has been of the most cordial character.

"Personally, I am aware of a number of very graceful acts on Lord Dundonald's part in his association with the French-speaking militia. At the last annual inspection he asked me if the men of my regiment would prefer to have him address them in French. I replied that they would be delighted. He then spoke briefly in French, and very good French at that. I am at a loss to know where Mr. Healy secured his data. He may have secured it from the suggestion made by the Minister of Militia during the debate in the Canadani House of Commons, that Col. Roy had been ignored in the selection of officers for the staff of the Laprairie camp, merely because he was a French-Canadian. But no French-Canadian officer, I can assure you, thinks of attributing any such motive to Lord Dundonald. I have said before, and I repeat now, that it is most unfortunate that Lord Dundonald should have placed himself in the position where it was necessary that the Government should dismiss him. We could not look for a better General Officer Commanding, and, speaking as a French-Canadian officer, I may say that that portion of the militia comprised of French-Canadians was quite satisfied with his services."

Comfort for Old People

Most of the suffering of the aged is due to the kidney derangements, which lead to backache, rheumatism, lumbago and body pains. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills bring comfort to the old folks by keeping the kidneys healthy and active, and so eliminating from the body the poisonous waste matter which causes pains, aches and fatal disease.

JAPANESE OCCUPY KIAOTUNG

After a Heavy Loss on Both Sides

RUSSIANS ARE DRIVEN BACK

Japs Take a Strongly Fortified Position on the Chi River—Japanese Closing in on Kiaotung.

Tokio, July 23.—General Kuroki, after a severe fight, occupied Kiaotung on July 19. The place had been fortified by the Russians, who defended it stoutly. In the fighting General Kuroki's troops drove the Russians from their strongly fortified position on the Chi River, which is northwest of Motien Pass, and east of Anping, inflicting upon the enemy more serious losses than they sustained themselves. The fight began on the 18th, and ended on the 19th. The Japanese lost 424 men in killed and wounded. The Russian losses are estimated at 1,000.

One Company Loses All Its Officers.

General Kuroki began his advance early on the morning of the 18th. He covered and followed the enemy along the Chi River. The Russians seemed to be retiring to the northward, when suddenly two battalions, with eight guns, turned and attacked the Japanese advance vigorously. At this point the Japanese suffered before the relief came, one company losing all its officers. At a late hour in the afternoon the Russians' position was developed. They occupied an eminence on the bank of the Chi. This river guarded their left flank and high precipices protected the Russians on the right. The only approach to their position was through a narrow defile. The fighting continued until dark, when the Japanese forces bivouacked. The Russians made two counter attacks, but were repulsed in each case.

Renewed at Midnight.

The Japanese renewed the attack at midnight, posting their artillery in the valley below and on the high ground to the south of the Russian position. The main Japanese body was assigned to attack the Russian centre, a small detachment was sent toward the right flank and another to watch the enemy's left flank. After these positions had been taken, the fighting ceased for a time, but it was resumed at dawn. The Russians had thirty-two guns in action, and they vigorously shelled the Japanese. To this fire the Japanese replied, and the bombardment lasted for four hours. During this time the Japanese infantry moved forward, the flankers had succeeded in scaling the heights on the Russian right by 3 o'clock in the afternoon, at which hour the main force was ordered to storm the Russian centre. The Japanese artillery protected this move splendidly, but the infantry met with a severe fire, and lost heavily in gaining the heights. The final successful charge was delivered at half-past five in the afternoon.

Retreat a Rout.

The Japanese succeeded in partially cutting off the Russian retreat and it soon became a rout. The enemy went in two directions, to the northward and to the eastward. The Russian forces engaged and included, in addition to the artillery, seven battalions of infantry and a regiment of Cossacks. The enemy left 1,31 dead and 300 rifles on the field. Prisoners taken estimated the Russian losses at 1,000. The Japanese lost one officer and 54 men killed, and one officer and 350 wounded.

On July 19 Japanese forces attacked a battalion of infantry, who occupied Chechiato, to the northward of Shaotientszua. After four hours of fighting, the Russians retired across the Taitsu River. In this engagement the Japanese had 17 men wounded.

SO MANY KILLED.

That Japs Had to Cremate the Dead of Battle on July 19.

General Kuroki's Headquarters in the Field, July 20, via Fusan, Corea, July 23.—The Japanese attack on the Russians at Kiaotung Thursday resulted in another Russian disaster. Kiaotung is 25 miles from these headquarters. Few details of the engagement have been received, but they indicate that the fighting was fierce. The Russians had more than one division engaged and the artillery was used freely. The Russians are fortifying new positions before Motien Pass. There were more men killed in the fighting of Sunday, July 17, than can be buried, and the Japanese are now engaged in cremating the bodies.

Joined Northern Fleet.

London, July 23.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from St. Petersburg says it is reported there that cruisers said to have been bought by Russia in Germany have joined the Vladivostock squadron, which went to sea especially to meet them.

OUR MEN AT BISLEY.

Made Some Fairly Good Shooting on Friday—Lord Strathcona Presents Prizes—The King's Prize.

Bisley Camp, July 23.—The Canadian team yesterday did fairly well. The garden party given by the Canadian team was largely attended by a large number of visitors. Lord Strathcona presented the gold watch to Corp. McGregor as first Canadian in the Grand Aggregate, and also made the presentation of a silver tea service to Sergt. Crowe as winner of the Canada Company Prize. In the Grand Aggregate, Corp. R. McGregor scored 319 out of a possible 350. Other Candians in the prize list are: Staff-Sergt. Crowe 317, Pte. A. Baynton 310, Pte. Neil Smith 310, Capt. Crowe 310.

The King's Prize.

Major W. P. Moore, Pte. J. W. Smith and 21 others shot for two places in the third stage of the King's Prize at 600 yards.

The Canadians scored in the second stage of the King's Prize at 600 yards as follows:

Baynton 82, Sergt. Crowe 83, McGregor 85, Moore 83, Perry 92, W. Smith 82, Bayles 85, J. W. Smith 84.

The Rev. Mr. Ferguson, chaplain of the Punjab Light Infantry, won the silver medal in the King's Prize competition with a score of 192 points. The following are the Canadian aggregates: Pte. Perry 186, Corp. McGregor 181, Sergt. Crowe, Major Moore and Pte. J. W. Smith 179. Perry and McGregor are entitled to compete in the final stage.

Sergt. Crowe, Sergt. Bayles, Baynton and Smith each win £80 in the King's Prize. Moore wins £60.

In the range prizes in the King's Prize match at 200 yards, Canadians came in as follows. 5, Staff-Sergt. Bayles, £1; 18, Pte. Neil Smith, £1.

Corp. R. McGregor of Ottawa won the tie for second place in the King's Prize range prizes competition, at 600 yards. He wins a rifle and £3.

The Wingrove Match.

In the Wingrove match, 10 shots at 900 yards, the first prize for which is a £25 silver cup, Staff-Sergt. Bayles of the 10th Royal Grenadiers scored nine bulls and a magpie, making 48 out of a possible 50. tk

St. George's Vase.

In the St. George's Vase, at 500 yards, Capt. Crowe was 139th, winning £3; Sgt. W. Gould was 146th; Lance-Corp. Fowler of Toronto, 147th; Color-Sergt. Will, 174th, and Corp. R. McGregor, 202nd, each of them winning £2.

Pte. Perry is the only Canadian who has qualified for the second stage of the St. George's Challenge Vase at 900 yards.

In the Doubles.

In the Doubles match, Capt. Blair and Pte. Perry made a score of 61 out of a possible 70 at 600 yards. These matches are shot off every day. The first prize is £5.

In the Gregory match, at 200 yards, Canadians scored as follows: 7, Staff-Sgt. Bayles, £2; 16, Capt. R. Dillon, £1 7s; 17, Lance-Sergt. Fowler, £1 7s; 36, Major W. P. Moore, £1; 38, Pte. Neil Smith, £1.

The Canadian team won the Tilton competition, open to one team of eight. The prize is £25 and silver medals.

SIR FRED BORDEN'S WHOPPER.

The Mischievous Calumny Started by the Minister of Militia.

The Toronto Globe says:

"It is not necessary for Canadians to even repudiate the absurd notion expressed by one member of the British House of Commons that the Dundonald episode is the outcome of race or creed antipathy. That the fact of the Premier being a French-Canadian Roman Catholic and the late General Officer Commanding a Scottish Presbyterian, has even remotely to do with the affair is almost too absurd for use by the pettiest type of Canadian politician, and the man who could hint at it in the British Parliament ought to have been left to the obscurity which his speech befits. Neither Sir Wilfrid Laurier nor Lord Dundonald is capable of cherishing the ignorant and vulgar prejudice of race or creed."

It would certainly not be necessary for Canadians to repudiate this absurd notion" had it not been suggested by a responsible Minister, Sir Frederick Borden, on the floor of the Canadian House of Commons. The absurdity and falsity of Sir Frederick's statement is as obvious to everybody else as it is to the Globe, but it has never been retracted by the Minister of Militia and is being used against Lord Dundonald for all it is worth. It is also being deliberately used to stir up a race quarrel in Canada.—Montreal Star.

SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1904.

LAURIER AS A DIPLOMAT.

The additional papers respecting the Alaska boundary which have been recently presented to Parliament, do not add much to our knowledge, most of the information having already reached the public in some form. A perusal of them, however, affords light on the subject of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's claim to the full treaty making power, and his insinuation, if that word is strong enough, that he would have done better if acting independently of the Imperial authorities.

The preliminary correspondence between Ottawa, Westminster and Washington shows conclusively that the Canadian administration was not only consulted as to every step, but that its suggestions were adopted as their own by the Imperial authorities and forwarded to Washington in that character. It also appears that Sir Wilfrid himself named all the three commissioners on our behalf. He was as unfettered as though he had been corresponding directly with Washington.

Going further back we already know from previous documents that as long as Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues refused to consent to a commission of three on each side the Imperial authorities resolutely backed this contention. It was not till he foolishly gave way on this material point that the representatives of the Empire signified their unfortunate surrender to Washington. The only difference of opinion between Ottawa and Westminster was when Sir Wilfrid wished to raise a futile wrangle over the personnel of the United States commissioners. He might even then have refused to name commissioners and have withdrawn from the negotiations on the ground that these appointments were in themselves a violation on the very threshold of the terms of the treaty. This mainly course, however, he did not adopt and he could not expect the Imperial authorities to join with him in an undignified and useless squabble in which we know from experience the U. S. Senate would not have given way.

Speaking of the Senate, we may observe that while the treaty was made subject to their ratification, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was consulted throughout as to the terms of the treaty surrendered a right which Canada had acquired by precedent and custom. He omitted any provision for its submission to the Canadian Parliament for ratification.

We know from President Roosevelt's message to Congress that he expected and would have yielded to a request for some compensation for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty so as to afford freer access by the Panama canal between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States. What would have been more appropriate and more likely to be yielded than access by water to our Northwest Territories? Yet Sir Wilfrid, with inconceivable ineptitude, has thrown away his advantage, making the astounding statement that Canada had no interest in the matter of the Panama canal, though it will give us, as well as the United States, means of access between our Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

What is most striking in these documents is the plain proof that Sir Wilfrid was the best witness for the United States and gave the testimony that was most fatal for Canada. The United States commissioners in their judgment say:

The true condition was stated by the Prime Minister of Canada, in the Canadian Parliament, on February 16, 1898, when he said:

"My honourable friend is aware that, although this is disputed territory, it has been in the possession of the United States ever since they acquired this country from the Russian government in 1867, and, so far as my information goes, I am not aware that any protest has ever been raised by any government against the occupation of Dyea and Skaguay by the United States;"

and when, on March 7, 1898, he said:

"The fact remains that, from time immemorial, Dyea was in the possession of the Russians, and in 1867 it passed into the hands of the Americans, and it has been held in their hands ever since. Now, I will not recriminate here; this is not the time nor the occasion for doing so, but, so far as I am aware, no protest has ever been entered against the occupation of Dyea by the American authorities, and when the American authorities are in possession of that strip of territory on the sea which has Dyea as its harbour, succeeding the possession of the Russians from time immemorial, it becomes manifest to everybody that at this moment we cannot dispute their possession, and that, before their possession can be disputed, the question must be determined by a settlement of the question involved in the treaty."

This would have been an imprudent admission if true, but in fact it was utterly devoid of truth, being one of the reckless statements to which Sir Wilfrid is prone without caring what injury he does, so that he may have a fling at a political opponent.

Sir Wilfrid had too much of the treaty making power in this matter and used it to surrender our rights and our territory.

Mr. Lloyd-George, the slanderer of Lord Dundonald and of Canada is the man who was hissed out of an English public meeting as a traitor.

Those who are unacquainted with the Hon. Rudolph Lemieux are surprised at his false statements in London in regard to Lord Dundonald. He is the son of a turncoat and forger, and the son seems little better. He was one of the lieutenants of Mercier and Laurier when they raised the race and creed cry by which they both attained office.

It is not surprising that Sir Wilfrid Laurier sympathises with Mr. Lloyd-George. The latter was the ally of Kruger as the former was of Riel. Both were traitors who under any other flag than the Union Jack would have found themselves in gaol.

Col. Thompson, M.P., last year termed the militia force "the shadow of the skeleton of a skeleton." He digs now to eat his words. Probably like Mr. Monet he cannot afford to run an election without aid from the corruption fund, and he has to earn it.

It is a pity that the good people of Hamilton, or those who act for them, should be so snobbish. When Lord Dundonald was welcomed to Canada as a man of note and a gallant general they were proud to secure him as honorary colonel of their new Highland Regiment. Now that, like his illustrious grandfather, he is under a temporary cloud through the mach nations and slanders of a set of corrupt politicians and money grabbers, they give him the cold shoulder and do not want his presence at the presentation of colours to his regiment. It might offend his enemies in high places.

TORONTO'S BURNT DISTRICT.

Commission Gives That Bounded By York, Front, Yonge and Esplanade Street to the Railways.

Ottawa, July 23.—The burnt district in Toronto, bounded by York and Yonge and Front streets and the Esplanade, will within the next few days be formally handed over to the railways. Ownership of the property will be vested in the Grand Trunk Railway, subject to arrangements which the company will be required to make with the C.P.R. and the Canadian Northern as to a Union Station and terminal facilities.

This solution of the applications of rival railway companies for power to expropriate the burnt district was reached at a meeting of the Railway Commission held yesterday. It was facilitated by the withdrawal of the application of the Canadian Northern at a moment when the union seemed hopelesly complicated. The result is that the G.T.R. is satisfied, the C. P. R. is satisfied, the Canadian Northern is satisfied and the city of Toronto will have to be satisfied.

Guilty of Wife Murder.

Halifax, N. S., July 23.—Thomas Robinson was yesterday found guilty of the murder of his wife, Theresa Atland, on North Mountain, Nova Scotia. The crime was committed on the night of May 25. The evidence showed that the woman had been strangled to death and her body hacked to pieces and the house then fired, in order to hide the crime. Robinson is 50 years old.

Strike Declared Off.

Sydney, N.S., July 23.—The strike was declared off at a meeting of the subcouncil of the U.M.A. yesterday morning, men returning to work at wages received previous to June 1.

Rouen, France, July 23.—Mrs. Florence Maybrick arrived here Thursday from England.

WHAT WOMEN SHOULD KNOW.

That the cause of a great deal of suffering, usually supposed to be on account of female disorders, is overcome by ANTI-PILL, the discovery of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt.

A great amount of womens' ailments are caused by the food that is taken being turned (through improper digestion) into poison instead of nutrition. This poison carried by the blood throughout the system, makes weak women—women who are hardly ever well—nerves in dreadful condition—limbs ache, back aches, head aches—billious, constipated. ANTI-PILL, the Great System Treatment, will correct these troubles—it starts its work by making a well stomach—It insures strength to weak women—It is harmless at any stage or condition of a woman's life, and there is no time ANTI-PILL cannot be used with safety. Any woman who cares to may use a bottle of ANTI-PILL free from any expense. If satisfactory results do not follow its use, mail us wrapper with name of druggist from whom purchased and get your money back by return mail. Wilson-Fyfe Co., Niagara Falls, Ont. MALACCA AT SUDA BAY

Under Agreement Between Great Britain and Russia

Will Be Perfunctorily Inspected By the Consuls of the Two Countries and Released—The Incident Is Ended, Though the Dardanelles Is Open Question Yet—No Similar Incident Will Occur, As British Cruisers Have Orders.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—The steamer Malacca is at Suda Bay, Island of Crete, where under the agreement reached between Great Britain and Russia, she will be perfunctorily inspected jointly by the Consuls of the two countries and released, together with her cargo, unless palpable contraband of war intended for the Japanese shall be found, in which case only the contraband will be held. British Government stores on board the vessel will not be examined.

British at Alexandria.

Alexandria, July 23.—The British Mediterranean fleet has arrived here.

It Won't Occur Again.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—The Russian reply to the British protest was handed to Ambassador Hardinge yesterday afternoon. Therein Russia agrees that the Malacca shall not be brought before a prize court and undertakes that no similar incident shall occur in the future. As a matter of formality the Malacca's cargo will be examined at some port in the Mediterranean, probably Suda bay, Island of Crete, in the presence of the British Consul.

Malacca Incident Ended.

London, July 23.—The morning papers generally express satisfaction that the Malacca incident has been settled in accordance with the demands of Great Britain, though there is an inclination to await the settlement of the broader question of the passage through the Dardanelles of the volunteer fleet steamers before believing that all danger has been averted. This feeling is heightened by Premier Balfour's announcement on the adjournment of the House of Commons that he still had no official news to communicate either in connection with the Malacca incident or with volunteer fleet steamers in general.

The Apparent Contradiction.

Some papers are even inclined to doubt the authenticity of the news that the Malacca incident has been settled, but The Daily Telegraph semi-officially explains the apparent contradiction existing between Mr. Balfour's statements and the telegrams from St. Petersburg.

"Two despatches left the Foreign Office, July 21," says The Daily Telegraph. "One has elicited a favorable reply, but the other has not yet been answered. The promise that "No similar incident shall occur again" is very vague and elastic. It may mean that no British vessel shall in the future be seized, the papers of which are regular and the cargo carried by which belongs to his British Majesty's Government. That is not much of a concession, seeing that our fleet has instructions to prevent another such outrage."

No More Worship.

The Daily News says it believes that the Government is resolved that no more Russian warships, however carefully disguised, shall pass the Bosphorus, the outlet of which a portion of the Mediterranean fleet will carefully guard.

The Times says: "Although there is good reason to hope that we have advanced a stage towards a satisfactory solution of the grave situation brought about by the seizure of the Malacca, we cannot consent to any arrangement which would cut the ground from under our feet. It is the status of the St. Petersburg that we contest, and we take our stand, not on some impalpable point of international law, but on the plain text of the treaties and conventions which govern the passage of the Dardanelles."

THE COLOR LINE.

They're Educated But Are Colored So Could Not Work.

Toronto, July 21. — A particularly striking instance of race prejudice, in which the victims are intelligent and educated young men, came to light to-day in a case tried by Judge Morson. Two young Jamaicans, Edmond C. McNeil and J. Archie Cuff, came from Jamaica to Toronto, as a result of a letter from the Allan Manufacturing Company. They expected employment, and on their arrival were given positions at wages of $6 per week. They were soon discharged, and to-day they brought action against the company for breach of contract. Each claimed $70 fare from Jamaica to Toronto, $12 wages and $8 damages; the total claim was $100 each.

BECAUSE OF COLOUR.

McNeill, the first witness, said that he had been informed by a friend in Jamaica that the Allan Manufacturing Company of Toronto was in need of men. He wrote to the firm, and was told to come to Toronto. He did so, and papers were drawn up agreeing to four months' service. In the meantime they were employed by the week at the rate of $6.

"Was any objection made to your colour?"

"Not at first," answered the witness.

"Why were you discharged?"

"The other men in the employ of the Allan Manufacturing Company refused to work with us because of our colour. We were told by the manager that we would not be required further because of our colour," said McNeill.

"Did they give you a week's notice?"

"No, but we were sent checks for a week's salary."

"What are you doing now?"

AS A BELL BOY.

"Well, I had to take anything I could get," said the plaintiff. "I am now employed as a bell boy in the Grand Union Hotel at $5 per week and board."

Cuff said he came to Toronto as a result of the representations in the Allan Company's letter. He had been treated similarly to the previous witness, and was now employed at the ordinary laborer's work of handling barrels. "I simply had to take anything that came to hand," he said.

The letter which the company had written the young men was produced and handed to the judge.

"There is no contract made in this letter," said his Honor. "It merely tells them to come to Toronto and they will probably be employed."

"But they came upon the representations made in that letter, and under that understanding entered the firm's employ. The Allans are therefore liable," argued Mr. Eyre.

"What representations?"

"That they would be continuously employed."

"There are no such representations," answered the judge.

"Is not that letter written as an inducement for these men to come to Toronto?" asked the lawyer.

"It certainly is," answered the judge.

Mr. Eyre—It's an underhand trick to take advantage of these poor fellows.

"What do they want?" asked his Honor.

"They want to be properly employed in the city, or to receive money enough to take them back to Jamaica," answered Mr. Eyre.

FOR THE DEFENCE.

Mr. Allan said that his company would not have employed the men at all had it not been for the fact that they were without money.

Mr. Pankerton, who appeared for the defendants, attempted to prove that the plaintiffs came to Toronto fully knowing that if they were coloured they would not be employed by the Allan Manufacturing Company. He wished to show that Rev. Mr. Paget, a clergyman of Jamaica, had written Mr. Allen, telling him that he had informed Mr. Perkins, another minister of Jamaica, and nominee of the plaintiff Cuff, that such was the situation.

Cuff denied any knowledge that his colour would debar him from work.

"That is no evidence," said the judge.

"The plaintiffs cannot collect damages from you, but cannot you get them employment?" asked his Honor.

"They are already employed," answered Mr. Allen. "When I discharged them, I sent them to where I thought they would get work, around the hotels."

Mr. Eyre—"That is no work for men educated as these men are; they have both received university educations."

"Answering a bell in a hotel is not fit employment," agreed Judge Morson. "The case of these men is most unfortunate; I am very sorry for them, indeed. They seem well educated, honest fellows, and are certainly much above the ordinary in intelligence. It is a pity something cannot be done to give them positions."

"Was the check sent them for salary marked?" he asked.

"No."

"Then they are entitled to judgment for one week's salary, and for the costs of the action. The balance of the claim is dismissed."

"Yes, little man, of course your nose is broken; but take this can of Nestlé's Food home to Baby Brother, and you will feel ever so much better."

Nestlé's Food has been the standard infant's diet for forty years. It nourishes the child so that the increase in weight is immediately noted. It contains the right elements of nutrition, so combined that it closely approximates mother's milk. The danger of cow's milk is avoided. It requires the addition of water only (no milk) in preparation, as the basis of Nestlé's Food is the purest cow's milk, properly modified.

The Joy of Living

It is only the healthy who find a real joy in life. Weak, nervous, languid and discouraged people find new hope and energy in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. With new rich blood coursing through the veins and the thrill of new nerve force sent tingling along the nerve fibres, the joy of living returns and disease and weakness disappear.

The Heated Term with its Corresponding Daintyness and Lightness of Dress Materials is Now Upon Us.

In Woman's Realm
Fashion's Vagaries

Warm Weather Linen Suits are Very Smart — White Costumes of Supple Materials are now in Vogue.

FASHION'S ECHOES.

Parasols for morning use are of linen and pongee to match the suits and also of the new shaded taffeta.

A noted change in the coiffure for dress occasions is the introduction of a pompadour floral wreath when the hair is worn low.

Short skirted, unlined gowns of satin in tan, London smoke, beige brown and dark violet shades serve for short journeys.

The draped waist has become a strong rival of the blouse. Many of these waists are worn in early Victorian effect, over the skirt and with a deep, unbelted point in front.

Foulard petticoats will wear well. They come in pretty middle colors—good browns, tans, blues, reds and greens, as well as drabs and grays.

The decrease in size of toque and turban has met with unqualified favor, and far less difficulty is experienced in finding not only just the kind of hat for every occasion, but the most becoming, than last season.

THE LINEN GOWN.

Delightful Morning Gowns and Tailor Costumes in White and Light Linens.

The linen gown will be one of the popular features of the season, and every trousseau includes several specimens of it as morning gowns or as a tailor made summer walking dress. A modish model appears in the second cut. The attractive waist and the skirt with its deep flounces, surmounted with groups of horizontal tucks alternating with wide embroidery, show the effect that may be gained in a well cut, well made costume. Much variety is afforded in linens—some in colors showing fleck design of white, others bearing a woven spot, and all delightfully light and, according to the latest ruling, far less crushable than the old time linens.

Hopsacking will again make good, hard wearing, utility costumes, and a new material appears in "fishing net," which is very sturdy and submits to almost any kind of handling. Delaines in pastel hues, delicious old French grays, ecru and biscuit rank among the practical things of the season.

A French tailor costume of great chic is built in dark blue, trimmed with inlet embroidered cornflower blue cloth pastilles. And the latter color in various degrees of shading is, by the way, one of the season's smart hues. Various tones of blue blending off to mauve and violet are introduced on almost every smart cloth costume.

Fashionable loose mantles of decided convenience for the summer are chiefly made in light lawn soft cloths, smooth faced or fancy woven, and those very light tones are in the majority.

For Years, But Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Made a Thorough Cure.

Most stomach troubles arise from a torpid, sluggish action, and kidneys, liver and bowels are thoroughly cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mrs. Thomas Covert, Highland Grove, Peterboro Co., Ont., writes:—"I was a sufferer for years with stomach trouble and terrible headaches, and spent a good many dollars in medicine without receiving any benefit. Hearing Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills highly recommended, I determined to give them a trial, and did so with most satisfactory results, as I was very greatly benefited and do not hesitate to recommend this treatment as the best obtainable for such ailments."

FOR WARM WEATHER.

Linen Suits Are Very Smart—Many Simple but Becoming Hats.

In Paris one sees many beautifully embroidered linens made up with little short boleros and skirts clearing the ground. They are combined with scarlet belts, hats and parasols.

Vivid blue, vivid red and vivid green are three shades much used in linen. They are toned down with white or black and white embroideries.

To wear with wash dresses a variety of simple hats have been designed this year—for instance, the plateau hat of canvas, bound with black or colored ribbon and simply trimmed with knots of straw on a ribbon band. The Breton sailor shape is as popular as ever, and it is seen at its best trimmed with two wings and a shaded ribbon ruching. The envelope hat is another of the latest millinery confections. This rolls up on one side and folds over on the crown. The entire trimming consists of a twist of tulle or some other soft material.

SILK BLOUSE WAIST.

Many simple sailor shapes are trimmed with fruit and foliage, strawberries being among the latest novelties.

There is a revival of grass lawn linon and linsore of the same ecru shade, but this color is trying and needs to be relieved with dashes of red or green.

The picture shows a silk waist trimmed with valenciennes lace insertion. It has a cape effect, and the blouse is made more elaborate by the use of pin tucks.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Apricot Shades Are the Newest Thing. Hats Made of Blossoms.

Apricot shades are the latest, and they are far smarter than the ordinary pink tones. A gown of this shade of chiffon was seen recently. The full skirt was trimmed with shirrings and ruchings of the material. The bodice was snugly fitted and was trimmed down the front with tiny velvet bows of a somewhat darker shade, with a paste buckle in the center of each. The shoulders were draped with a soft fichu of old lace caught with a cluster of three mammoth roses shading from primrose to tangerine.

Some charming negligees are made with a loose coffee jacket and skirt of dimity trimmed with valenciennes. The prettiest lace ornamentation for these is in a vandyked pattern, with the lace frills to correspond.

Large flat hats composed entirely of small blossoms are very smart. These are trimmed simply with a large bow of ribbon.

The gown of all over lace will be worn a great deal this summer, and with it will be seen the all lace hat trimmed with a couple of large, beautifully shaded roses.

Tailor made gowns are this season of much thinner materials. One of pale blue silk was trimmed with broad bias bands, the coat having an Eton front and blouse back, the distinctive features being the narrow black embroidered vest and tiny turnover collar and cuffs of the same. The short puffed sleeves extended to a little below the elbow and were finished with three frills of lace.

The illustration shows a straw hat trimmed with a wreath of leaves and red roses.

Spinach in French Style.

The French prepare spinach by a superior method. When the spinach is boiled thoroughly tender and properly salted, of course free from every trace of grit, throw it in the colander and drench with cold water. This gives it a certain firmness and delicacy attained in no other way. It is to be shaken free of water, chopped fine, placed in a hot saucepan and stirred with a tablespoon of butter and two of cream until hot. Then heap in a mound in a dish with poached or boiled eggs on top.

Lemon Shortcake.

Make a rich cake, split and butter it; then take the rind, juice and pulp of three lemons grated, one cup of sugar, one cup of cream, mix thoroughly and spread.

DAINTY BABY CAP.

How to Make One With a Handkerchief in Five Minutes.

A little baby lies for the most part while in his carriage, and as a result bonnets are quickly rumpled. They are not particularly easy to launder, and it is expensive to have them cleaned. A pretty handkerchief can be made into a dainty little cap in five minutes.

To make the handkerchief cap proceed very much as children do to make a "soldier cap." Fold the handkerchief exactly in half; then fold the two upper or folded corners over to the lower edge, thus making a triangle. Now fold over the point of this triangle about an inch and finally fold back the two points of the folded over corners about two inches. See diagram. Now open this folded square along the edge A B, so as to leave but one thickness of the handkerchief in the back, supposing the side with folded corners is front. Raise up this front portion so that the folded over points will form the top of the cap. Before opening the cap pin the folds and afterward tack them with needle and thread and fasten on the little rosette bows. This little cap made of a scalloped or lace edged handkerchief is especially pretty, and it fits the little head perfectly. By this ingenious device baby can have a fresh cap every day or two. Quilted silk linings come for muslin caps, or, if desired, one can make them.—Woman's Home Companion.

Repose of Manner.

The air of distinguished repose so sought after by our nervous society woman may be acquired by any one if she will remember that the secret of a reposeful manner simply means the power to totally relax. Much of your nervous energy is lost in nervous fighting. One beauty specialist goes so far as to declare that nothing will make wrinkles quicker than the habit of moving and jerking and that nothing is so fatal to beauty as coughing and wheezing. All such habits are really nervous complaints. To cure all these fidgety movements cultivate the habit of sitting perfectly still, keeping the hands and fingers motionless as long as possible, and relax.

ACCESSORIES OF DRESS.

The Floral Sunshade a Smart Parisian Novelty—Lace Shawls.

The floral sunshade is a smart Parisian novelty, the design of lace which ornaments the same being outlined with small flowers such as bauskis roses, pansies or violets.

Lace shawls and fichus promise to be very popular, and the wide cape of lace inlet with pieces of pongee is worn with the embroidered pongee skirt.

A new material which is being exploited in Paris just now is a soft variety of cloth in flesh pink, decorated with black spots. It is hardly heavier than crepe de chine and is very supple.

Silk coutil is now being used for petticoats, and these are much more durable than those of silk. A charming example in pale pink had wide frills composed of a latticework of tucking and diamond shaped applications.

A stock of coarse linen, embroidered in the color of the suit with which it is worn, is the latest French novelty for morning wear.

The straight front is slowly disappearing in favor of the more curved outline.

The picture shows an evening gown. The waist is trimmed with a wide bertha having scalloped edges, and the entire gown is ornamented with waved ribbon ruchings.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Lace Is Lavishly Used on Gowns. The Wide Belt a Necessity.

So far all the waists and dress bodices are made with high collar bands, and, although some are unlined, yet the bare effect of the collarless bodice is missing.

Where lace is lavishly employed on a gown the sleeves are partially composed of the lace, and this gives a very smart and light effect, even on dark foulard or black gowns. In fact, the black toilet is often the smartest of all, so often is it trimmed with tinted lace.

Belts are quite a feature of the new fashions, and they are invariably wide. Tucked belts of leather are used with many of the tailor made costumes. Some of them are studded with silver or steel nails and are finished with buckles to correspond. Very deep belts of corded silk or taffeta are also worn, and the straight belts of colored shiny leather are designed to wear with soft, full blouses under cloth and linen boleros.

Lace squares and figures are used more than ever to outline yokes, sleeves and flounces.

Perfectly charming is the new silk linn, which possesses the substance of pongee and the softness of crepe de chine. At present this exquisite material is only to be seen in the india silk color, but later in the season it will be obtainable in all the fashionable shades.

Velvet or taffeta silk boleros are now much in evidence—another old fashion revived—and are made sleeveless or with elbow sleeves, the bolero matching the trimming of the dress and not the material in which it is carried out.

The picture shows a morning costume of white canvas piped with scarlet and white foulard with knotted scarf of same.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A Black Silk Hat Bag.

A black silk hat bag is mentioned by a Table Talk correspondent as a great comfort for man or woman, especially in traveling across the continent. The hat slips easily in and out and is perfectly protected from dust when not in use. Materials: One and one-third yards of good quality of black india silk twenty-four inches wide and three yards of black satin ribbon one-half inch wide. Make the bag with a French seam. Make a three inch hem in the top. Stitch two rows half an inch apart above the hem for the black ribbon draw strings.

Rhubarb Jelly.

Rhubarb jelly is delicious and especially appetizing with meats. To make it cut up the stalks without peeling, then steam them until very soft, lay them in a sieve to drain overnight or put in a jelly bag, as preferred. Measure the juice and allow one pound of sugar to every pint of rhubarb juice and let it simmer ten minutes or until it begins to thicken on the edge; then add the sugar and let it simmer till it jellies on the spoon or when dropped on a cool plate. Remove the scum carefully as it forms and turn into glasses to harden.

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

The Latest News From the Baseball Field---Football and Other Sporting Notes.

COBOURG COULDN'T COME.

The Second Time They Have Disappointed the Locals.

The baseball game between Cobourg and the locals, advertised for this afternoon, had to be postponed, on account of the Cobourg team being unable to come. This is the second time that Cobourg has failed to put in an appearance, and Manager Whitcrof has been put to considerable expense by their action. He did not receive word of their inability to come until yesterday afternoon, and had the advertising matter, etc., posted up, besides being put to the expense of engaging the grounds. This is a very mean action on Cobourg's part and the league officials ought to make them responsible for expenses incurred in this way. An endeavor was made to get the fast Bowmanville team here, but as the locals received word so late from Cobourg, arrangements could not be made.

T.A.S. WON EASILY.

Defeated Millbrook Last Night by Score of 8-1 in T.V. League Game.

The T.A.S. lacrosse team added another win to their string last night by defeating the Millbrook bunch by the core of 8—1, before a fair-sized crowd of spectators, considering the inopportuneness of the hour. At no stage of the game was the locals' goal in any danger of being stormed, and the Millbrook defence were kept busy, in fact, part of the home was called into requisition to help keep the ball out. The T.A.S. plainly showed to the spectators that the vistiors were not in the same class at all, running away from them at every stage, and keeping the ball hovering around their net. The game was one of the cleanest seen here this year, only one player being penalized, and that for a mere minor offence. Mr. Rollie Glover refereed and proved a very impartial one. His duties were very light, he kept a strict eye on the play. The Millbrook team are a fairly well-balanced one, but they lack the speed and nice combination of the locals. A number of times they indulged in the old-style long throwing plays, which were, as usual, always ineffective, a T.A.S. player securing the ball. The T.A.S. team put up a nice article of lacrosse, and, although not called upon last night to exert themselves, clearly evinced the fact that they are going to win the championship of this district, if not the Trent Valley League. The players are all speedy, and put up a nice combination play, catching and passing nicely. It would be hard to pick any star players, as they all play the game at their best. Crowley's catches were features of the game, and the Lome did not lose many chances of placing the ball near the nets.

THE GAME.

About seven o'clock Referee Glover blew his whistle and faced off, the T. A.S. securing the ball and rushing repeatedly on the visitors' goal. One rush sent the nets flying to the ground and the game was delayed for a minute. From the face-off Harry Donovan got a clear shot and the first goal was shot. Time, two minutes. Millbrook secured the ball and sent it up the field, but it was back in their territory again, and McCoy made a nice pass to Judd, who scored the second for the locals in one minute. Millbrook again had the ball, but Frank McCoy secured it and made a long shot, making the score board read 3—0 He again repeated the trick after some nice combination play down the field. It was now up to Millbrook, and after two minutes' play, Coom received the ball and took a long chance, scoring Millbrook's only goal. For the remainder of this period the play was more even. The score ended 4—1 in favor of the locals.

In the second period the T.A.S. again rushed matters. L. McCoy was given a short rest with the timekeepers, and Boyle, who relieved O'Brien in goal for a few minutes, stopped some hot ones. Just before time was called Donovan scored the only one in this period, making the score 5—1.

In the last period the visitors gave out, and the T.A.S. played rag with them. After seven minutes' play Deroucher made a nice run down the side and shot, and repeated the trick about five minutes later. In three minutes more he again saw an opening, and the score ended 8—1.

LACROSSE.

The Chippewas of Toronto play in Brantford to-day.

The Capitals of Ottawa are to battle with the fast Tecumsehs at the Island this afternoon.

Toronto, July 21—There is every prospect of a match being arranged between the Tecumsehs and the Shamrocks of Montreal for July 30, at the Island. The Indians are scheduled to play St. Catharines on that date, which is an open one for the Shamrocks, and an effort will be made to transfer the C.L.A. fixture. President W. P. Kearney, of the Shamrock A.A.A., was in the city yesterday and he said that the world's champions would like nothing better than to play the Tecumsehs.

BASBEALL.

The Lindsay Post treated its readers to a pleasant surprise on Friday by giving a fair report of the game between Bowmanville and Lindsay on Thursday. We are glad to notice the Post's improvement and hope they will continue to use their columns for the elevation of sport, and not for its degeneracy. They have the following to say about the umpire: "The umpiring of Mr. Rosevear was tip-top, and he is now an established favorite."

The Galt papers are still praising the ex-Peterborough pitcher. The Reformer has this to say: "Yeb" Flaherty is by far the best slab artist in the Canadian League. With one exception, all the games he has pitched have netted the opposing teams less than 6 runs. And what is more, in the last three games he had struck out 46 men, which is more than half the total put outs. Flaherty is certainly a good one.

VERY SAD DEATH.

Popular Young Man Cut Down at an Early Age.

The very sad death occurred early this morning of Michael John Burke, youngest son of Mr. Michael Burke, 341 Water st., at the early age of 23 years. Deceased contracted a severe cold about seven months ago, and it settled on the lungs, bringing the young man to an early death. He was a very popular young man among his associates, and his death was very sadly felt by his fellow-employees in the lock works, where he had been employed for a number of years.

The funeral will take place from his father's residence on Monday morning at 9 o'clock, and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

COOL FOR A FEW MORE DAYS.

Hot Wave Out West May Arrive Here Next Week.

Cool weather continues. Yesterday 74 was the highest, and to-day is no higher. To-morrow is expected to be quite cool, with a possibility of a shower or two. This weather prevails throughout Ontario and Quebec.

Another hot wave may be expected next week. It is now located in the west, but is travelling east. Yesterday the temperature went up to 88 at Calgary, to 92 at Medicine Hat and to 90 at Kamloops. Manitoba, however, was quite cool, with from 60 to 70 degrees.

MILITARY ORDERS.

Regiment to Attend Divine Service on Sunday, July 31st.

A letter was received from the Mayor of Barrie yesterday by Col. Miller, informing him that the town intends to entertain the 57th Regiment on Labor Day, and that a programme of sports is being arranged. An officer of the 57th will go to Barrie next week to make complete arrangements for the camp, and a pleasant outing is anticipated. It is altogether likely that the regiment will have a couple of nights' drill in preparation for the trip.

The following orders in reference to the Foot Guards' visit were handed out today:—

Orders by Lieut.-Col. J. W. Miller, O. C. the 57th Regt.:

No. 1.—A meeting of all the officers of the Regiment is called for Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the mess rooms.

No. 2.—The regiment will parade in divine service order at 10.15 on Sunday morning, July 31st, for the purpose of attending divine service with the Governor-General's Foot Guards, of Ottawa.

By order
D. WALKER, (Capt.),
Adjutant.

The McMaster Band.

Last evening the Murray street Baptist church was again crowded to the doors to hear the University Evangelists. The service was one of the most interesting that has been held. The meeting was opened by Mr. Williamson singing in excellent voice, "The Golden Threshold," after which Mr. McDonald spoke on "The Assurance of Salvation." This masterful address was followed by the quartette "Blue Galilee." Mr. Nobles then spoke fluently on the two words "Lost" and "Saved." The quartette sang one of their most effective selections, "Blessed is he that readeth." Mr. Cameron, the leader, made a brief appeal and many signified their desire to lead a better life. It was announced that a brief service would be held in the Central Park Saturday evening at 7.45. The announcements for Sunday were as follows: Service at 11 a.m., 4 p.m., 7 p.m., all in the Murray street church. At the 7 o'clock meeting "Important Questions" will be the theme in speech and song.

FROM ACROSS THE LINE.

To Inspect the Hydraulic Lift Lock and Its Method of Construction.

Yesterday afternoon's G. T. R. train brought in a party of United States visitors, drawn to town by the fact of the completion and opening of the hydraulic lift lock. The visitors included Dr. Aylmer L. Carthell, of New York, Mr. E. A. Bond, of Cohoes, N.Y., and Major Thos. W. Simons, of Buffalo, N.Y., and ladies of the party.

These gentlemen are three of the members of the Advisory Board of Canal Construction for the State of New York, and Mr. Bond is chairman of the Board. The work they are dealing with is the rebuilding of the Erie Canal, for the prosecution of which the State has made an appropriation of $101,000,000. These gentlemen stand very high in the profession and have designed and carried out works of large magnitude.

The party were taken in charge by Mr. R. H. Rogers, Superintendent of the Trent canal, and during the evening were driven over to the lift lock, to which they gave a hurried inspection and commented favorably on the massive character of the work and boldness of construction. It was the intention to have taken the visitors for a short sail down the river later in the evening, but the steamer arrived too late to be available.

Mr. E. A. Bond spoke of the work in charge of the board, of which he was chairman, in rebuilding the Erie canal. The appropriation has been made some $100,000,000 to cover the cost. The surveys were completed, and plans for several sections had been passed on and accepted only last week. So far as he knew it was not contemplated to make use of hydraulic lift locks, though that detail had been very carefully considered. While they were all very much interested in viewing the lock and seeing how the problems involved had been so successfully worked out the object of their visit was particularly to note the concrete construction of which the lift lock furnished a notable example, quite the finest and most ambitious work yet attempted. He could say that it was definately decided that in rebuilding the Erie canal concrete would largely be made use of in constructing the locks. It was the material to which engineers were now paying attention and offered large possibilities, and thoroughly practical execution. No doubt the cut stone trades would object, and in fact had objected, but it was felt that the cost of stone over concrete was so excessive that concrete must be made use of. Concrete, he felt sure, could be erected for $6.00 per yard, while the stone could not be put in place for less than $18.00 per yard.

The surveys for the new canal showed that the line departed very materially in places from the old route, notably so at Rochester. It would be taken south of the city, though in so doing large expense would be incurred. Over three miles of cutting, a great deal of it to a depth of 30 feet, was involved. At Cohoes, N. Y., the greatest drop occurred, about 160 feet. This would be overcome by locks of the mitre gate type, built of concrete. Similar construction would be the rule at Lockport, N.Y., where there was a drop of 55 feet.

Saturday morning the visitors were taken over the upper reaches of the canal to Lakefield, that they might view the several locks en route, returning in time to take train in the evening.

BOWLER MARRIED.

Ald. Welsh, of Stratford, Meets His Fate in England—A Romance.

Ald. John Welsh, of Stratford, who went to the Old Country as a member of the Canadian bowling team, was married Monday morning at Hastings, England. It is understood that Mr. Welsh formed the acquaintance of the lady on the occasion of a former visit to England, about twelve years ago, and they have been friends ever since. The acquaintance was renewed on this visit with the happy result of a union for life. Mr. and Mrs. J. Welsh will spend several months on the continent and may not come to Canada for some time yet. Ald. Welsh received three months' leave of absence from the Stratford City Council before leaving for England, so that he has yet a month or so to spare from his municipal duties. Mr. Welsh's family in the Classic City have all reached years of maturity, and his extensive jewelery business is being efficiently managed by his son and partner, Charles L. Welsh, and son-in-law, J. C. Diggins.

PROHIBITION COURT.

Two Drunks Were Gathered in Last Night.

Two drunks appeared before James Stevenson, J.P., this morning. They were gathered in last evening and when arrested were making themselves very obnoxious to the people passing. Jas. Smith, an Englishman, pleaded hard for leniency, and the magistrate let him off on his promising to attend to work in future. He is employed in the Canadian General.

Another employee of the Canadian General, a young man who has been up before, did not get off so easily. He was fined $1.00 and costs, amounting in all to $4.75.

BROKE LAUNDRY WINDOW.

Some Small Boys Made Themselves Obnoxious Last Night.

Last night about eleven o'clock some small boys, who should have been in their beds at homes, were seen loitering around Chambers street and Hunter street, smoking cigarettes and making a dreadful noise. One of them shied a large stone through the rear window of the laundry on George street, which is run by a couple of Chinamen, and the whole crowd then made their escape. The Chinaman came out, and endeavored to find out who threw the stone, but was unable to do so. He was at the Police Court this morning, and laid an information against the boys, who will be severely dealt with if found.

It is about time that the boys of Peterborough found out that they must not molest the Chinamen, who are harmless citizens. Quite often they are compelled to apply for police protection, which should not be the case. The boys, perhaps, do it in a spirit of deviltry, but the Chinamen do not look upon it that way.

—Our town has been remarkably free from fire during the last three or four months. The fire brigade has not been called out for over two months, and not a single case has been reported in that time.

—There was a large number of farmers in town today owing to the wet weather. They report that the hay crop this year is very extensive, and that the grain is all looking well, notwithstanding the late spring.

—The excursion to Lakefield, via the lift lock, this afternoon, under the auspices of the 57th Regt. band, was not as well attended as it otherwise would have been, had the weather been more favourable.

—Posters have been put up about Lindsay, announcing the excursion from Toronto on Monday, Aug. 1st, under the auspices of Victoria County Old Boys, who will revisit Lindsay on that day in great strength. Mr. W. A. Sherwood, the well known artist, formerly of Lindsay and Omemee, is President of the Old Boys' Association; Mr. Wm. McKenzie, Hon. President, and Mr. T. R. Kennedy, Secretary-Treasurer.

A DIFFERENCE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Rose One on Being Asked Question.

Ottawa, July 23.—In the Commons yesterday morning E. F. Clarke asked if there was anything to communicate about the movements and utterances in England of Chief Justice Taschereau. Why had he suddenly left London, and had he been recalled? The Premier said he had no information.

Mr. Barker of Hamilton wanted to know if the Government had enquired into the utterances of the Chief Justice, as he did in the case of Lord Dundonald.

In his reply the Premier said there was a difference between the two. Lord Dundonald, when speaking, was an official of the Government.

Members Tired Out.

Extremely dull and uninteresting were the proceedings of the House yesterday. The items for the Department of Agriculture were under discussion. Those passed were $100,000 for experimental farms, $22,000 for the branch of the commission of agriculture and dairying, and $40,000 to promote dairying interests by advance for milk and cream. When these matters had been disposed of it was 9.30 p.m., and the members felt so tired that they decided to go home.

Bill Is Passed.

Ottawa, July 23.—In the Senate yesterday the bill to amend the railway act of 1902, to prevent railway companies contracting themselves out of liability for accidents, was read a second and third time, and passed.

Rev. Dr. Philp Dead.

Grimsby Park, July 23.—Rev. Dr. John Philp of Kingston, died suddenly at Grimsby Park of apoplexy yesterday at 5 p.m. The Dr. was feeling remarkably well all day, took his dinner as usual about 2 o'clock, went to the Lakeview House to bid goodby, but soon after going up stairs he became unconscious, and expired three hours later. The funeral will take place from Dr Willgum Philp's residence, 94 Hess street North, Hamilton, on Monday at 2:30 p.m. to Dundas. Rev. Dr Philp was the son of the Rev. William Philp, a Methodist clergyman who came to this country from England in the early forties. The deceased married Miss Grafton of Dundas, who died about a year ago. During his ministry Dr. Philp had occupied a number of important pulpits, having been stationed at Toronto, London, St. Thomas, Hamilton, Montreal, and at the time of his death, the Sydenham Street Church, Kingston.

CAN'T SAY ENOUGH IN THEIR FAVOR

Why Miss Gusty V. Campbell Recommends Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets to All Her Friends Who Have Stomach Troubles.

"I can't say enough in favor of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets," so says Miss Gusty V. Campbell, Little Shippegan, Gloucester Co., N.B. Of course Miss Campbell has reasons for making a statement like this and here they are:

"I suffered from Dyspepsia for two months and was always getting worse till advertisements led me to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. One box cured me, and I can honestly recommend them to anyone suffering from Dyspepsia."

The moral of this is that if you take your stomach trouble before it gets too firm a grip it is easily cured by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. One box cured Miss Campbell.

But as in Miss Campbell's case, stomach trouble if neglected always grows worse. In its worst stages it takes time to cure it. But Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets will do it.

Those Pretty Raffia Hats.

Why don't you make a raffia hat to replace the one that was spoiled on the day of the opening of the lift locks? They are easily and quickly made, and are light and durable. The most popular colors are black, brown, red and the natural shade—a light champagne color. Directions for making these pretty hats may be found in the July Delineator, and the raffia is on sale at the Review office, the only place in town where it may be procured. 2d

"Rob you!" cried Paipak angrily. "Rob you of what? In the name of the white bull, of what can I rob you when you have nothing save what I have given you? I tell you I am working not for wealth for you, my brothers, but for the whole people. The Zannucks have been downtrodden and robbed by the ameer. He demands more tribute than we possess. He taxes us for our wives, for our cattle, and then his soldiers steal the cattle. He taxes us for our families, and the soldiers steal our children. Our boys are compelled to enter the ameer's army, and our girls—curses upon the ameer and upon you if you cannot see the justice of what I am doing. But the ameer has desisted from his search. He has some great affair now in progress. It is time we took the treasure to the mountains and distributed it among the people and then begin again to plan."

"It shall not be so! I swear it!"

"There are three of us!" growled the surly voice.

"And we are determined men!" said one who had not spoken before.

"Do you intend to defy me?" demanded the one who called himself Paipak.

The three laughed. "We intend to—you will see what we intend."

Harvey began to catch the drift of things.

"This," he reasoned, "is what is popularly called honor among thieves. Here's a band of four who have been successful in gathering treasure by robbing everything and everybody to enrich a people kept down by that miserable wretch of an ameer. And now the only decent one, if there is such a thing as decency among them, is to be killed so that the other three can keep the treasure instead of putting it to the use originally intended. Three against one. If I can save the leader, I can no doubt enlist him in my behalf."

"Who are you?" the robbers demanded.

He crept to the wall and peered around. A strange sight met his eager gaze. On a wooden peg that had been driven into a crevice of the rocky wall hung a lantern. On the stone floor of the cavern squatted four men in a circle, and between them were many bags of gleaming jewels, bales of choicest fabrics and bags of gold.

It was not difficult to pick out Paipak, for his watchful eyes were roving from one to the other as he remained on his guard against an attack. But the plans of the other three were already laid. It was evidently a preconcerted arrangement. The one called Domitan shouted "Now!" and the three hurled themselves upon Poloak.

"Hold on there! Let that man alone!" shouted Harvey, rushing in.

His presence disconcerted the robbers, and they stopped fighting. Domitan, with a curse and gasping for breath, rose to his feet and seized his knife.

"Who are you?" the robbers demanded in chorus.

The four seemed ready to join against Harvey.

"My friends," he said, "permit me to say that this conduct upon my own territory, to which you were not invited, is most unseemly. I am the owner of this island, having just purchased it from the Russian government. I'll have no murder committed here."

"You! The owner of the island of Ping Shong!"

"That's what I said! At this moment I own the island."

"It is a lie!" said Domitan. "You die on your island, then."

He made a rush, but Paipak intercepted him. The other two, recovering from their astonishment, joined with Domitan.

Suddenly from the outer cavern came the rush of booted feet and the clank of arms.

"Seize them all!" commanded Captain Sergius Orskoff to the force of Russian soldiers, who rushed upon the combatants and executed the order before the American and the robbers were aware of their presence.

At the moment Harvey recognized Orskoff the latter exclaimed:

"The American! I have found you at last!"

CHAPTER XVI.

AN ARGUMENT AND AN EXPLANATION.

VENGEANCE gleamed in Orskoff's eyes. His sword was at the throat of the American.

"Stealer of women! Scoundrel who has twice stolen the daughter of Biarteikis. Where have you hidden her? The searchlight of the gunboat revealed the hayboat, but she is not there. Where have you hidden her?"

"Now, captain," said Harvey, "don't be too hasty in this matter. I did not steal Koura Biarteikis, but I know where she is."

"You know! Of course you know! But you lie when you say you did not steal her. You came down the Kur in a hayboat belonging to the Astrakhan Charka with a woman disguised as a man? Who else was that but Koura?"

"You are getting excited! Kindly take that confounded sword from my throat. I'd like to talk with some comfort."

"Comfort! A stealer of girls asks for comfort! That is the limit of American effrontery. I'll run the sword to the bone."

"If you do, I assure you that you will never see your Koura again."

"See, he admits he has the girl! He has accomplices who will kill her if he is harmed!" shouted one of the soldiers.

Something in the words and manner of Harvey impelled Orskoff to lower his sword. He turned to the soldiers who were guarding the four robbers and said:

"Take them on board the gunboat. It is evident that they have robbed Russians, for here are bags of rubles. They must be taken at once to Tiflis. Convey all the treasure on board."

Turning again to Harvey, his face resuming its expression of hate, he said:

"You know that I love Koura, and to rescue her I am willing to parley with you. I had determined to kill you on sight. Come with me."

Harvey followed his captor to the entrance of the cave. Here he found a guard of additional soldiers with lanterns. In the distance a brilliant searchlight sent its gleam upon the island, lighting it as by day. In the great light from the gunboat Harvey could see that the old hayboat had stuck in the mud near the island. At a little distance was a sailing vessel, evidently the property of Paipak and his robber brethern. On the shore were two boats, which had landed the Russians.

The five prisoners were jostled rudely while getting into the boats and at a command from Orskoff were soon on the way to the waiting gunboat. They were received on board by a young officer, who saluted Orskoff.

"I congratulate you, my captain. I am told by the men that you not only captured the American who stole the daughter of Biarteikis, but that you also had the good fortune to seize the four robbers who attacked the paymaster and robbed him at Mogda."

"Are you sure these are the men?"

"I could not be mistaken. The leader is Paipak, chief of the tribe of Zannucks, nominally under the rule of the ameer, but hating him."

"Guard them well then."

"Shall we get under way at once, my captain?"

"No, lieutenant. As you know, we want to find Koura Biarteikis. I have, it is true, captured the man who stole her, but I have not succeeded in finding the young woman. Remain here while I investigate. I shall go on that island in the daytime and search. I can see little at night even with the searchlight."

Harvey stood waiting to be questioned, but Orskoff paid little heed to him.

"Put the prisoners in irons," he said to a subaltern.

"But irons won't unlock my lips," said Harvey.

"I will find a way to unlock your lips. If I cannot find Koura on that island in the morning, I will hang you by your thumbs till you tell the truth."

"But I am anxious to tell it now. You won't listen."

Orskoff waved his hands, and Harvey was dragged away.

The gunboat remained, and as soon as it was sufficiently light in the morning Orskoff took a squad and returned to the island. He examined every foot of the place and returned to the gunboat chagrined and angry.

"Bring up that American!" he commanded. Harvey was hustled to the deck.

"Lieutenant Nevisky, attend!" said Orskoff. "Now, stealer of women, I will give you one more chance to tell the truth. If you do not, your thumbs will be torn out. Your life depends upon your answers. Tell where you have hidden Koura. Your punishment will be worse than death if you do not. Koura was to have been my wife"—

"You said something like that before, but that she was to be your wife is news to me. For my part, I am willing to tell you where she is."

"I have searched the island. I am convinced that Koura is not there."

"I could have told you that and saved you trouble and time. Koura is getting farther away every minute. You will never find her."

"You fiend, I will have your life!" howled the captain as he sprang to his feet.

"You do seem inclined that way, but before you take it, reflect. Just show a little common sense, if you have any. If you kill me, how do you expect to find Koura?"

"But you say you do not know where she is."

"I said nothing of the kind. I said I did know where she was. But I did not take her there. Take off these confounded irons, treat me like a man, and I will tell you what I know."

"Remove the irons," said the captain. The lieutenant unlocked them.

"Come with me alone," said Harvey. Surprised, Orskoff beckoned to Nevisky, who turned and walked away.

"Beware," said Orskoff, "how you trifle with me."

"I am not trifling with you. I am the only man who can help you find your Koura, and it happens that I have as ardent a reason to want to find her as you."

"You—you love her!"

"I don't even know her, but one I love is with her."

"Then you did take her away?"

"No, I did not. I know nothing about Koura—that is, except where she is this moment. But, before I tell, you must first tell me how you traced me to the island."

Orskoff made a gesture of impatience.

"Koura had been living with her uncle in Tiflis. I saw her every day, and if I was not on duty I spent the evening at the house. One night I was on duty and did not go. I stopped to see her the next morning, and her uncle, who was beside himself with terror, told me she had gone out the night before and had not returned. I knew she had been stolen, and, as that was the morning you escaped from prison, I knew you had taken her. I searched the river and learned that Charka's hayboat had gone down toward the Caspian. It was said that a man and woman, the woman disguised as a man, had gone with Charka. I reached the coast as soon as possible, but I could not overtake you. The launch had gone before I made the discovery, or all this would not have happened. On the gunboat I cruised everywhere, using the searchlight at night. Last night we discovered the hayboat and at once went to the island."

"I was on Charka's boat," said Harvey, "and if you had used any reasoning powers you would have known that it could not have been Koura who was with me. You say you were told that the woman with me was disguised as a man. Now, how could I get Koura in such a disguise? When a woman disguises herself, it is for a purpose. Koura was stolen; she did not go of her own accord, as did Alma."

"You speak of Alma Jurnieff, niece of the colonel."

"Yes. She assisted me to escape, and, as our attempt was discovered before she could return to her apartments, it was necessary for her to fly with me. On the Caspian the hayboat met with disaster, and Alma and I were left on it alone. We drifted all night, shivering with cold and hunger. In the morning we found ourselves under the bows of a long, black boat belonging to the ameer of Bokhara."

"I know the boat. It is used to carry goods to Persia."

"Not this time. It is being used to carry Alma Jurnieff and Koura Biarteikis to Bokhara. They permitted Alma to go on board, and I, like a fool, in my excitement allowed them to know she was not what her clothing would show. They would not take me, and the captain, whose name, I believe, is Karakal, or something like that, shouted out to me that they had the daughter of Biarteikis and that soon both girls would be the brides of princes."

"Is this true? Do you swear you are telling me the truth? How did they get Koura?"

"Hafiz Effendi passed us in a cayik. He was intercepted at the mouth of the river by the launch, and something was said about sacks. They were permitted to depart. Undoubtedly the Turk had Koura concealed."

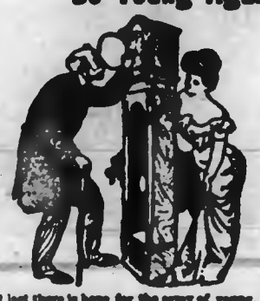
Turn Time Backward. Be Young Again.



At last there is hope for the army of young, old and middle-aged men who either through early indiscretions, later excesses or exposure find themselves losing in virile power. How many of you are now reaping the harvest of your folly? At last you are face to face with the realization that nature cannot be deceived, neither does it forget the wrong done it, whether through ignorance or otherwise; but the punishment always corresponds with the amount of abuse committed. Do not, however, lose hope, as there is a cure, thanks to Dr. Goldberg, the noted specialist, who can give you what is rightfully yours—perfect manhood. If you are not what you should be: if you have stricture, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotency, rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc., write at once to Dr. Goldberg, and he will send you his method of curing these diseases free of charge.

The doctor has received fourteen diplomas, certificates and licenses from colleges and state boards of medical examiners, which should convince you as to his standing and abilities.

His acceptance of a case for treatment is equivalent to a cure, as he never accepts an incurable one for treatment, and should you decide to doctor with him yourself

Pay When You Are Cured.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It was for this reason, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor at once and confidentially lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as his booklet on the subject, containing the testimonials and certificates, entirely free. Address him Dr. B. Goldberg, 224 Woodward Ave., Room 1 t Detroit, Mich., and it will be sent immediately by return mail, free, in a plain, sealed package.

Released on Bail.

St. Catharines, July 23.—In the police court yesterday afternoon, Charles Brooker, John Byron, Robert Darling, Frank Coughlin, Charles Doyle, John Epler and Robert McCann, all Riordan Paper Mills strikers, were committed for trial upon a charge of notoriously assembling and assaulting R. A. Nicholas of the Noble Detective Agency, Toronto, on the night of July 11. The men all elected to go to a jury. They were released on $200 bail each.

Suicide By Carbolic Acid.

Ottawa, July 23.—The body of Alfred Powell, a man well known in the city, aged 27 years, was found dead at Rockliffe Park yesterday afternoon. A bottle of carbolic acid by his side told the tale of suicide. He was a victim of drink and had been out of work for some time. He had apparently been dead two days when found.

It Will Cost Eight Millions.

Montreal, July 23.—"The proposed Canadian Pacific Railway line from Toronto to Sudbury will cost $8,000,000, and of this amount $2,000,000 will be required for the construction of fifty-eight miles from Romford to Byng Inlet," said F. S. Darling, the Canadian Pacific railway engineer in charge of all construction work east of Winnipeg, yesterday. "Before the end of the month 2,500 men will be at work in the portion of the line between Romford and Byng Inlet."

Dodd's Kidney Pills Prove Their Value as a Tonic.

Doctors Failed to Help Amos Stewart, of Goderich, but Dodd's Kidney Pills Built Him Up.

Goderich, Ont., July 22—(Special)—The value of Dodd's Kidney Pills as a tonic has been proved by Mr. Amos Stewart, a flour miller, of this town. In speaking of his cure, Mr. Stewart says:—

"I had been very poorly for about a year, and though I was treated by two doctors I kept losing flesh all the time till I was down to 145 pounds.

Then I commenced using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in ten days I gained six pounds. I am still gaining a little every day, and I am feeling better in every way, and I feel that I owe it all to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are Nature's own tonic. They cure the kidneys. Cured kidneys take all poison out of the blood. It is the poison in the blood that causes the loss of strength and energy and flesh that makes a tonic necessary.

A LAKE YACHT ABLAZE

Castanet, of Visger Line, With 150 Passengers on Board.

Reached Port Miles From Kingston—No One Seriously Hurt—Passengers Transferred to the Nokomis Without Loss of Life or Accident—Crews of Both Vessels Put Out the Fire—Accidents and Deaths.

Clayton, N.Y., July 23.—The steam yacht Castanet of the Visger line, returning from Kingston yesterday afternoon with a load of 150 excursionists, caught fire in midstream and only by the most fortunate circumstances was an awful accident averted. The yacht was four miles from Kingston and half a mile from shore, a stiff breeze was blowing and the passengers were enjoying the ride when suddenly, without a sound of warning, a sheet of flame shot up through the hatchways.

Ablaze to the Stern.

The passengers at once ran to the ends of the boat. The flames swept up to the canvas awnings, and in a moment these were ablaze to the stern. While the passengers were huddled forward and aft in fear, the engineer and firemen crawled from the flames of the engine room. The crew had meanwhile caught up armfuls of life preservers, which they handed to the passengers. Then they began to fight the blaze. The captain, Barney Nunn, turned his boat from its course, heading it for the shore, followed by the steam yacht Nokomis, which was a mile away when the blaze burst out.

Passengers Transferred to Nokomis.

The burning boat was beached on Cedar Island, and in a moment the Nokomis was run behind her. The transfer of passengers was quickly made without the loss of life and the united efforts of both crews extinguished the blaze. Engineer Charles Wood and his son, Raymond Wood, the fireman, were both badly burned, but will recover. The cause of the accident was an explosion of gas in the fire box, which threw the fires out into the engine room and down the galleys. The boat was a handsome excursion yacht, built in 1898. The damage to her can be repaired.

Drowned Near Berlin.

Berlin, July 23.—A drowning accident took place in the Grand River, about three miles above Bridgeport, on Thursday evening. Two young men left town Thursday afternoon to go up the river with the victim, who is Fred Elliott of the eastern section of Toronto. He was in the employ of James Reid of Stratford, a photographer and picture enlarger. About 4 o'clock on Thursday evening, Elliott and two fellow-employes, named Rutledge and Clymer, left Berlin to go up beyond Bridgeport for a swim. They did not return yesterday and Mr. Reid received a telephone message, that while in bathing, Elliott had been drowned, three miles above Bridgeport.

Drowned at Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, July 23.—As the steamer Collingwood was nearing the dock Thursday night with a load of Owen Sound excursionists returning from Collingwood a man was seen to drop or fall from the dock between the dock and the steamer. Search was made, but no trace could be found until yesterday morning, when the body was recovered. It proved to be that of William Deay, a resident of Owen Sound. Deay leaves a widow and three small children.

Boy With a Gun.

Napanee, July 23.—Frank Wilson, 26 years of age, while playing with a gun, accidentally discharged it, the contents lodging in the neck and shoulders of a Miss Walker, who was picking berries on Mr. Field's farm, about two miles from town. It is thought the young lady will recover.

Port Hope Man's Death.

Hamilton, July 23.—James McCormick, Port Hope, fell backwards off a G.T.R. bridge between Hamilton and Dundas yesterday morning and was brought to the City Hospital, where he died last evening. His spine was injured. He was about 35 years old and unmarried. He had joined the G.T.R. forces only a few days ago.

"Trouble Man" Hurt.

Hamilton, July 23.—Sam Williams, known to almost everybody as the "trouble man" of the Cataract Power Company, fell from a pole at the corner of King and John streets last evening, about 8 o'clock. He fell thirty feet on the cement sidewalk and was very seriously injured. He had climbed the pole to turn on the Gore Park lights.

Mrs. Malone Badly Burned.

Toronto, July 23.—Last night a lamp carried by Mrs. Malone, a widow, who lived with her son at 72 Kensington avenue, exploded, and the room was immediately filled with flames, which soon seized on Mrs. Malone's clothing. Her son escaped through a window, and Mrs. Malone was found in her yard moaning, she having succeeded in extinguishing the flames. She was so badly burned that the nurses at St. Michael's Hospital, to which she was conveyed, could not say this morning that she would recover.

SIR WILFRID'S SUNNY WAYS.

Like Oil on Sir Fred. Borden's Choler Gland

Permission For Bonds to Attend Dundonald Demonstration at Ottawa.

Ottawa, July 23.—The send-off to Lord Dundonald next Tuesday evening is likely to be one of the biggest demonstrations in the history of Ottawa. So promising are the prospects of a tremendous turnout that political influences are being exerted to keep Liberals at home. A double column editorial on the front page of yesterday's Free Press, the Government organ, is the subject of considerable comment. It refers to the effrontery of the man who flings "fool's paradise" and "lack of etiquette" at us just before he boards the boat for England, "there to meet the reprimand which he richly deserves."

Liberals Dragooned.

The article continues, "That some usually well balanced citizens have been cajoled into taking part in an affair which can only be a partisan demonstration, is evidenced by the public meetings of the ringleaders and the names which they have given out as their abettors. No man who takes part in the demonstration to Lord Dundonald is either a true Canadian or a Liberal. Let Lord Dundonald go home; let him go quietly. When he calmly considers his insult to Canadians he will be ashamed of himself. He ought to be. That the Tory leaders are smallwitted and hard pressed for a policy cannot be better emphasized than by their lauding a disgraced official, and in their cowardly efforts to arouse racial and religious strife within the hearts of our broad-minded Canadian people. Let the better men in the Conservative party disown these men who would bring their party to ruin. Surely there are some large men still left in a party which once commanded the respect of Canada."

Sir Wilfrid's Sunny Ways.

The committee in charge of the preparations for the send-off had some difficulty in securing the service of a military band in the city. The regimental band were afraid to turn out. Finally the committee went to Sir Frederick Borden. The Minister, it is said, promptly turned them down and said things concerning Dundonald and the demonstration which would hardly bear repetition. He promised, however, to talk the matter over with Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The committee called again after the matter had been "talked over" and found Sir Frederick in a gracious mood. He spoke kindly of Lord Dundonald and hoped the demonstration would be a success. He gave the necessary permission to the bands.

Dundonald's Position.

London, May 23.—Lord Dundonald's position as a half-pay officer has been examined. On July 18, the Secretary of State decided, in view of all the facts, it was expedient that Lord Dundonald be recalled, and asked for an explanation, his attention being called to the paragraph in the King's regulations forbidding officers speaking publicly or attending public meetings. The telegram was despatched on July 19. Under section 175 (1) of the Army Act, officers of the regular force on the active list, without any royal warrant for regulating the pay or promotion of regular forces, are subject to military law, and under royal warrant for pay. The 1900 Active List includes officers who are on temporary half pay. Lord Dundonald, therefore, is subject to military law, and must obey any lawful order.

CHEESE MARKETS.

Iroquois, July 22.—678 colored and 80 white cheese were boarded here to-day, mostly sold on the board at 7 7-16c. Buyers: Joaston, Logan, Smythe, Weir and Ault.

Listowel, July 22.—At the cheese fair held here to-day twelve factories boarded 2895 boxes, 2755 white and 140 colored. On the board 7⅛c was the best bid after the fair; on the street 7 9-16c was bid in some cases, but we were not able to learn of any business being done. It is probable that some sales may be made later to-night, as some salesmen were willing to take 7⅜c for their offering.

Ottawa, July 22.—There were 1957 boxes boarded at the cheese board to-day, 994 white and 964 colored. There were 522 white sold at 7¼c and 722 colored at 7⅜c.

Napanee, July 22.—Cheese board met to-day: 90 colored and 435 white boarded; all sold at 7 5-16c.

Perth, July 22.—On the cheese market here to-day there were 2030 boxes of white cheese and 600 boxes of colored. About 2000 boxes were sold at from 7¼c to 7 7-16c, the balance being shipped to cold storage in Montreal. The buyers present were Bissell, Webster, Ferguson, Patten and Everetts.

Kept Poor by Doctor's Bills.

Many a family is kept poor by doctors' bills when just as good and oftentimes better results could be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which sell at 25 cents a box of twenty-five doses. As one pill a day is the most frequent dose under any circumstances there is no treatment obtainable which costs so little, and at the same time none which brings about such excellent results in derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

NO RACE PREJUDICE.

Sir Fred Borden's Vile Slander of Lord Dundonald Set Right.

The "Patrie," while admitting Lord Dundonald's right to submit to Canadian public opinion a defence of his conduct, has, on several occasions, expressed the opinion that the ex-commander of our militia would have done better, under the circumstances, not to afford even the least pretence to a charge of political partisanship. The English Government, in inviting Lord Dundonald to return home, has acted in the spirit which dictated our suggestions. It goes without saying, however, that if Lord Dundonald formed the resolution to retire from the British army it would be his absolute right to enter the political arena in Canada, become a candidate for the House of Commons, etc., etc.

The debate which has just taken place in the British Parliament once more reveals the fact that profound ignorance exists in England, touching the affairs of this country. Is it not, for instance, supreme folly to say, as did Mr. Lloyd George, that Lord Dundonald's conduct is of a nature to create a conflict between the two races in our country?

Why such a conflict? When, and in what manner, did Lord Dundonald ever cause offence to the French-Canadians? On the contrary, Lord Dundonald is very popular with the French-Canadian militiamen. He has always acted towards them with the greatest possible liberality, and no one is able to charge him with a single act of injustice.

There is no question of race in this matter, and those who seek to create a contrary impression are either interested agitators, or are guided by complete ignorance of the situation.

Lord Dundonald's only fault was that he lacked discretion, as well as skill in politics. Lord Dundonald is not a diplomat. He is a soldier, and he acted like a soldier. He came right to the point, when he should have acted with more prudence. His speech at the Windsor Hotel resembles an inconsiderate act, and he paid for it by dismissal from office. He, however, will remain none the less a soldier of the first rank, and an honest man who will leave behind him in Canada nothing but the most excellent remembrances.

The Canadian Government could not do otherwise than dispense with the services of Lord Dundonald, but it might have avoided the severity which characterized the proceedings.

But whatever may be the details of this regrettable incident, the public men of Great Britain, who are making a race question of the Dundonald matter, must be told that they are making the greatest error. The French-Canadians, like their fellow-citizens of English origin, have a powerful interest in seeing our military organisation maintained on a wide and liberal basis.

Lord Dundonald tried to attain this end, but he met with difficulties and interferences, which he believed dangerous and unjust. He denounced them publicly, and he erred in his manner of proceeding, but to conclude from this that Lord Dundonald is the enemy of the French-Canadians and the enemy of the government because the leader of that government is a Catholic and a French-Canadian. What folly to speak in this manner—a folly as regards facts. The government of Canada is not a Catholic government. There are in its ranks only four ministers of that religious denomination. Where does the Catholic question come in, when the difficulty arose between Lord Dundonald and Mr. Fisher, two Protestants? Let our compatriots be not deceived by incendiary harangues as those delivered by Mr. Healy, or by articles such as those we regret to read in some of our French newspapers. The French-Canadians would soon sink to the condition in which Ireland is if they forgot themselves to the extent of standing apart, and if they do not clearly realise that their best interests demand that they shall live in peace and harmony with those who surround them.

We protest for our part with all the energy we possess against the attempts made in Canada and Great Britain to create race and religious trouble, with the evident object of making political capital out of an incident which has no possible connection with nationality or religion.—La Patrie.

DROPPED DEAD AT COLBORNE.

Mr. A. McDonald, a Well Known Apple Exporter.

Colborne, July 22—Archie McDonald, of the firm of McDonald Bros., apple exporters of this place, died this morning after a few hours' sickness. Last night about 9 o'clock, he and his brother were talking on the street, when, without any warning, Mr. McDonald was taken with acute indigestion and dropped senseless upon the walk. He was carried into his brother's home and medical assistance called, but despite the efforts of two doctors he passed away this morning at 9 o'clock without regaining consciousness.

Mr. McDonald was well known in this district, having purchased apples for many seasons, here and around Lindsay.

CANADA TO THE FRONT.

Successful Termination of Some Remarkable Experiments which are of Interest to Everybody.

Ottawa.—An Ottawa physician has demonstrated to the world that in scientific research Canada is second to none. Taking up the theory that ripe fruits are nature's cure for various disorders, he proved after years of labor, that this hypothesis was founded on fact.

Each fruit in nature's storehouse was successfully analyzed. The fresh, ripe fruit was first reduced to a pulp by a special machine. All the woody fibre was strained off. The juice was then evaporated and tested to reveal the medicinal powers. One of the most surprising features of the experiments was the minute quantity of active principles obtained. In some cases a bushel of fruit, after separating the fibre and evaporating the juice, yielded only a few grains. the expense, difficulty and the discouragement of such research will thus be appreciated.

After the analysis was complete, the physician found that apples, oranges, prunes and figs were the most valuable from a medicinal point of view. That is, the active principles of these four fruits combined the virtues of all the others, and in a more marked degree.

Yet the discoverer was not satisfied. Further experiments revealed the fact that by a peculiar replacement of atoms in the fruit juices, the action of the active principles was greatly intensified or promoted. It was conclusively proven that while the action of fresh ripe fruits on the healthy system was sufficient; yet in a diseased condition, such fruits had not the power to correct the disease. For instance, while the daily eating of fruit will prevent constipation, yet if one permits constipation to become chronic, the mere eating of fruit will not cure it. We must first tone up the bowels and make them well enough to be affected by the action of the minute quantity of active principles in the fruits.

This secret combination of fruit juices has been perfected, tested and found to confirm all that has been said in favor of this treatment for stomach, liver and kidney troubles. The tablets are called "Fruit-a-tives," have the odor and taste of fruit, and are pleasant to take. They are now sold by the leading drug stores throughout the Dominion and already their sale has been remarkably large. People everywhere are recognizing the fact that they have at last a certain and speedy cure for all stomach, kidney and liver diseases. "Fruit-a-tives are put up only in 50c boxes, with a distinctive label.

OUR ERIE CANAL.

The Great Wheat Route From the Northwest to Liverpool.

The opening of the big lift lock at Peterborough, Ont., for overcoming differences in water levels amounting to 65 feet, serves to direct attention to a very important public work on which the Dominion government has for several years been engaged and whose completion is certain to work many changes in navigation conditions on the great lakes.

The desirability of a ship canal to connect Lake Huron and Lake Ontario and render unnecessary the long detour by way of Lake St. Clair and Lake Erie is so often commented on that the fact has been lost sight of that an artificial channel to unite these two bodies of water by the so-called Trent Valley route is already in process of construction. This channel will not be a ship canal. It will be merely a barge canal of about the same capacity as the Erie canal will have after the enlargement and improvements recently authorized, are completed, and, like the Erie canal it will form an important part of the interior waterway of the continent. It will not, of course, have the value of a waterway of a size sufficient to accommodate the largest lake boats and its use will involve the inconvenience of a transfer at its Georgian Bay entrance, of cargoes to the smaller steam barges and tow barges, designed especially for the navigation of the canal, but this will not be so great a disadvantage, especially in the case of commodities which like wheat, are easily and expeditiously handled by machinery in loading and unloading processes.

As a matter of fact, practically all of the wheat intended for export from the Canadian Northwest is now transferred at Georgian Bay ports. It is brought down to the Port Arthur elevators by rail and sent thence to Owen Sound by vessel, and there transferred to freight cars. The only difference in the system that the use of the canal will bring about is that after the Georgian Bay transfer, the cargoes can be sent forward at cheap rates by canal barges instead of by rail at dearer rates.

Barges with a tonnage as large as 800 tons will be able to navigate this canal. Considerable remains to be done on it, but it is not to be doubted that when it is open for the entire distance between Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario, it will become a link in a great wheat route between the Manitoba fields and Liverpool.

It is a route shorter by 727 miles than the route via the Erie canal and has advantages suggesting that great quantities of export wheat from the American as well as from the Canadian northwest will follow this quick and cheap pathway to the markets of the Old World.—Detroit Journal.

LARGEST HYDRAULIC LOCK.

Appreciation From United States—Northwest Grain to Tide Water.

The completion of an important engineering undertaking was celebrated last Saturday at Peterborough, Canada, in the opening of the great hydraulic lift lock on the Trent waterway, which is to connect Georgian Bay with Lake Ontario and furnish a shorter route for the grain of the northwest to Montreal and the ocean. The Trent waterway is a series of cuts and natural channels that, when completed, will stretch from Midland, on Georgian Bay, to either Port Hope, half way down Lake Ontario, or Trenton, farther) east, on the Bay of Quinte. A considerable part of the route has long been used for local traffic, but the improvement now going on is to deepen the existing canals and connect the interior system with the two lakes by cuts at either end. When this is done, barges of 25,000 bushels capacity will receive the grain from the upper lake steamer at Midland and pass through the land locked waterway to the St. Lawrence and down it to the ocean going steamers at Montreal. Over $4,000,000 has already been spent on the improvement, and not less than $5,000,000 more will be required for its completion.

The greatest engineering work on the route is the hydraulic lift lock at Peterborough which has been under construction for eight years. The change of level at that point is sixty-five feet. To overcome the difficulty it was decided to abandon the old plan of a succession of locks as in the case of a descent on the Welland canal, and substitute a single hydraulic lift lock. There are but few works of the kind in existence, and these are in Europe. The greatest is the one on Dortmundems canal in Prussia, which was completed in 1899 and has worked well ever since. This, however, is of smaller capacity and less height than the Peterborough lock, being but forty-six feet against the sixty-five feet on the Trent valley route.

The Peterborough lock consists of two immense pontoons, closed at their ends by means of gates hung on the lower edges; gates also being used to close the ends of the reaches of the canal on the upper and lower levels. These pontoons, guided between three massive concrete towers, are each supported on top of steel pistons, seven and a half feet in diameter, which work in water-tight steels wells, one under each piston. At the opening ceremony on Saturday a steamer loaded with officials and invited guests floated into a pontoon from the upper level and another steamer floated into the opposite pontoon sixty-five feet below. One steadily and smoothly descended and the other rose, passing each other midway; the gates were opened, and each steamer passed out into the canal.

The experiment was carried out without hitch or jar. The great lock, the largest of its kind in the world, was declared a perfect success. It has put 100 miles of navigation above in connection with fifty miles of navigation below. There remain several smaller locks to be done before the eight-feet waterway will form part of the route by which the grain of the northwest can reach tidewater. — Cleveland Standard.

MARRIED IN NORWOOD.

Nuptials of Miss Howson and Mr J. W. Burgess.

On Wednesday evening Miss Margaret Howson, eldest daughter of Mr. W. R. Howson of Norwood, was united in marriage to Mr. John Wellington Burgess of Belmont. The marriage took place on the lawn, which was beautifully decorated with flowers, ferns and Chinese lanterns. Rev. W. G. Howson of London officiated, assisted by Rev. Caleb Parker of Norwood. The Wedding March was played by Mrs. M. Swain of Havelock. The bride, who was given away by her father, was beautifully attired in a biscuit colored silk eolienne, trimmed with all-over lace and applique, with berthe of sprangeld ecru. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations, while her hair was adorned with a wreath of similar blossoms, from which hung a silk embroidered tulle veil. The bridesmaid, Miss Minnie Howson, sister of the bride, was attired in a pink silk eolienne, with drop yoke, and cream lace berthe, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was attended by his cousin, Mr. Williamson Burgess of Belmont.

The young couple are well known in town, and their many friends will extend congratulations.

LATE MRS. PAYTON

A Resident of Dummer for Many Years.

An old resident of Dummer passed away on the morning of the 15th inst., in the person of Mrs. Payton, relict of the late Robert Payton, at the age of 89 years and 4 months. The late Mr. and Mrs. Payton emigrated to Canada from Wiltshire, Eng., 50 years ago, taking up their residence in Dummer, where they resided continuously except for a brief period when they moved to the Northwest. Not liking the climate there they decided to return, and while en route Mr. Payton was taken suddenly ill on board the train, and on reaching Brandon was removed to the hospital, where within a day or two he passed away, his daughter, Mrs. McDonald, remaining over with her father, and brought the remains to Warsaw for interment. The deceased lady was of a quiet and unassuming disposition, and always retained the quaint Old Country mannerism and dialect so characteristic of many people from the Mother Land. She preserved her physical and mental faculties to a wonderful degree until a few days before death. She leaves behind her two sons and one daughter, Charles, of Owen Sound, and Jas., of Peterborough, and Mrs. Jas. McDonald, of Warsaw.

CARRIE NATION AGAIN.

Knocked Down by a Young Man but Was Unhurt.

Louisville, July 22—Mrs. Carrie Nation, who is attending the Fair at Guthrie, Ky., created a scene in the grand stand by walking up to John Williams, a young man from Trenton, Ky., and knocking a cigarette from his mouth. He warned her not to repeat the act, but she did so, not heeding the warning, whereupon Williams knocked her down. Mrs. Nation was not hurt.

ORGANIZED SLANDER.

Ministerial Misrepresentation and Demand for Dundonald's Recall.

We have irrefutable evidence in Canada that the members of the Government and the Government's organs, departed from truth when dealing with the whole affair.

The Minister of Militia may have thought he was speaking the truth when he alleged Lord Dundonald discriminated against French-Canadians. It has since been shown that this statement was utterly false. Has Sir Frederick Borden corrected his position or retracted the falsehood? He has not.

Then the Toronto Globe made more all gaffes; Dundonald's anti-American forts; his "preposterous" and "extravagant" recommendations. All false; but yet no retraction.

Hon. Sydney Fisher's double-barreled explanation of his course of conduct will go down on record as the meanest prevarication. That minister's squirming is jeered at by members of his own party.

Then we have Lord Dundonald styled an "Imperial monster," "a mock hero of Ladysmith," "a conspirator against self-government and constitutional usage." For these epithets the Canadian ministerial organs are responsible.

Some of these papers have even gone so far as to admit correspondence suggesting that Lord Dundonald was intoxicated when he spoke at the Windsor Hotel dinner. This base, unworthy and false insinuation was put in another form and launched forth in Parliament by a member who, it is alleged sits in the House with a promise of a judgeship in his pocket.

In view of these Canadian occurrences, it is suggesting something wide of the mark, when the English press is considered, to bring forward the view that manipulation, directed from Ottawa, has not been wanting? We have seen the London Times' editorial cabled to Canada with the basic passage, in favour of Lord Dundonald, cut out. The impression has been fostered by the Canadian Government organs that the English comment was unfavorable to the ex-General Officer Commanding.

We have seen the Canadian Solicitor-General advocating, in London, Lord Dundonald's recall.

The responsibility for Lord Dundonald's undeserved recall, therefore, apart from the traditional War Office blundering, rests with the Ottawa administration.

First they tied Lord Dundonald's hands. At his protest they dismissed him. Then followed the disgraceful slanders, partially enumerated.

We repeat that the industrious circulation of these lies and misrepresentations is responsible for His Lordship's summary recall, when he had done nothing to deserve a recall.

This fact should be borne in mind; and the responsibility for the whole affair should be placed where it belongs—at the door of the Ottawa Government.—Montreal Star.

RUSSIA SENDS ORDERS

Forbids Volunteer Fleet to Interfere Further.

A JAPANESE VESSEL SUNK

Smolensk Fired Three Blank Shots Followed by Two Loaded Ones Across the British Steamer Ardova and Then Boarded Her and Transferred Her Crew.

St. Petersburg, July 25.—Grand Duke Alexis presided at Saturday's Council, which Count Lamsdorff, the Foreign Secretary, and Vice-Admiral Avellan, chief of the Admiralty Department, and other high naval officers attended. The result of the conference removes all doubts concerning the present attitude of Russia with regard to the volunteer fleet. The validity of the view expressed in the British note regarding the irregularity of the position of the vessels was so far admitted that the Council agreed to waive the right of search.

After a long discussion, in which Count Lamsdorff took a leading part, it was decided that the present status of the volunteer fleet was not sufficiently well defined, according to international law, to render further searches and seizures advisable, and that therefore Russia, in the interests of friendly relations with the powers, should withdraw the authority given the volunteer fleet in this respect.

Russia Sends Orders.

Orders have been sent to the volunteer fleet steamers St. Petersburg and Smolensk to refrain from interference with foreign shipping. It is expected these steamers will eventually join the Baltic fleet, and be replaced by ordinary warships.

The Malacca will be received by the Russian and British Consuls at Algiers, and will be formally liberated on a declaration by the latter that the ammunition on board the vessel belongs to the British Government, and is destined for Hong Kong.

Boarded Another.

Port Said, July 25.—Advices received here say that the Russian volunteer fleet steamer Smolensk fired three blank shots across the bows of the British steamer Ardova, the cargo of which vessel consists of coal and explosives, and the vessel not stopping, the Smolensk sent two loaded shots at her, one of them passing over amidships and the other over her stern. The Ardova was then seized and her crew transferred to the Smolensk. The vessel will be brought to Sues.

ANOTHER VESSEL IS SUNK.

The Vladivostock Fleet Active on the Japanese Coast.

Tokio, July 25.—The Russian Vladivostock squadron has sunk the merchantman which it captured off the coast of Izeu Province yesterday. The name of this ship and her nationality is not known, and nothing had been learned of the fate of her crew. Witnesses ashore saw the merchantman following the fleet. Then they saw her fired upon, after which she disappeared. The Russian warships were last reported at 11 o'clock yesterday morning to the southwest of Caperie, Izeu Province, steering to the west.

Ships to Canada in Peril.

London, July 25.—The Tokio correspondent of The Times, in a despatch dated July 24, says he believes that the object of the Vladivostock squadron is to interrupt trade between the United States and Japan, and that steamers on the way from Canada and San Francisco are in serious danger. He says that another aim of the squadron is apparently to seal Tokio Bay.

ACTIVE WAR OPERATIONS.

Kuropatkin Is Reported Anxious to Abandon Liaoyang Without Fighting.

London, July 25.—Specials to the London morning papers confirm the news of active operations at the seat of war.

The Daily Telegraph's Che Foo correspondent, under date of July 23, says:

"A junk from Dalny reports that last night a Japanese fleet of 20 warships and 20 torpedo boats bombarded Hwangshia for three hours and the forts replied."

THIS SCOT A FOREIGNER

But It Was in the United States, Not Canada This Time.

Kingston, July 23.—It cost a young Kingston bank clerk two dollars for being a Scotchman. That was the charge levied upon him by the United States alien inspector at Cape Vincent, N.Y., where he arrived there en route to the Old Country for a vacation. Of course the bank clerk uttered a strong protest at having to pay the money to enter that country, but declared that he wouldn't change his nationality even if it enabled him to escape payment of the paltry sum of two dollars. He was only passing through the "land of liberty," but came to the conclusion it was worth the money to gaze upon such a strange place. It seems that the party in question had been in Canada only thirteen months. Under the United States laws people residing in Britain are foreigners, and must pay a tax like Chinamen to enter the limits over which the Stars and Stripes float.

Knight Commander's Cargo a General One--European Passengers Were Detained--Russians Sank Two Japanese Schooners.

Special to the Review

Yokohama, July 25.—The Vladivostock squadron yesterday sunk the British steamer Knight Commander, from New York, of the Province of Lzu, after transferring the crew of the Knight Commander to the steamer Chinan, which arrived here this morning. The Vladivostock also captured a German vessel, believed to be the Araba, with three thousand tons of flour, and an unknown British steamer. The two vessels were sent to Vladivostock in charge of prize crews. The American Trading Company are the agents here for the Knight Commander. The Knight Commander's cargo was a general one. Her European passengers were detained by the Russians and her crew of 21 was transferred to the Chinan, which also reports that the Russians sank two Japanese schooners.

MONDAY JULY 25, 1904.

CANADIAN AND U. S. ENGINEERS

Not long ago the Cleveland Plaindealer had an article which was amusing through its effrontery in claiming that Canada was altogether dependent on the United States for engineering science. We did not seem to remember, it stated, that they taught us practically all we know about building railroads in difficult places. On the same authority the C.P.R. could not overcome the obstacles of the Rockies without summoning engineers from the United States and even the G.T.R. had to get help from the same source. Further we are told in reference to the G.T.P. that it would be a sad humiliation should we be obliged to call for American help after all. These pretentions are in the same line as the impudent assertions of some of the engineers who were given positions on the G.T.P. by the favoritism of managers from the United States, that Canadians might do ordinary work, but that for anything difficult we must go across the international boundary for brains.

Of course, all this is sheer invention and without foundation. The Grand Trunk was planned and constructed wholly by British engineers. The C.P.R. was not driven to such dependence. Canadian engineers have made much more than a local or even continental reputation. Among these we merely mention Sir Sanford Fleming, Mr. Keefer and the Messrs. Shanley, of the latter of whom they may have heard in Cleveland as having constructed the great Hoosack Tunnel, after United States engineers had failed in overcoming the difficulties.

There is no great danger of our having to undergo the sad humiliation of having to call in United States engineers to aid and teach us. Without wishing to insinuate any necessity for tuition, we may allude to the recent visit of the skilled engineers for the construction of the enlarged and improved Erie Canal to inspect our hydraulic lift lock. Without any ill-natured suggestion that they must come here to be taught, no doubt other engineers from the United States, eager to see novel work, like all men interested in their profession, will be glad to make themselves acquainted with this engineering triumph. In fact in this particular we lead not only the continent, but the world, for though there are three hydraulic locks in Europe, the resemblance is only in the principle, without the advanced and improved application which has been devised here and carried out so successfully. And this we may say has been accomplished without going out of the local office, by Mr. R. B. Rogers, the Superintending Engineer of the Trent Canal, Mr. Francis and the rest of the staff. Engineers from the United States will be welcomed when visiting us to inspect this great work, even if we are not in urgent need of their services.

How much longer is Sir. Frederick Borden going to suppress Lord Dundonald's report in order dishonestly to claim personal credit for some of its recommendations?

In another column will be found a contribution to the history of Mr. Frank Sullivan, the gentleman on such friendly intimacy with the Provincial Secretary as to introduce even members of the Legislature to him.

Has Saturday Night again been hired by a new Liberal Minister, as it was by the Provincial Secretary? It is repeating editorially the vile calumnies heaped on Lord Dundonald, which it must know to be false, because they are contradicted by the documents brought down by the Government, even in their garbled conditoin.

It was Sir Frederick Borden who started the malicious calumny that Lord Dundonald showed prejudice against the French-Canadian. The slander was founded on a statement in regard to Col. Roy, which has been proved to be untrue. Yet the organs and allies of the Ministers of Militia, both in Canada and the United Kingdon, are repeating his slanders without his making any effort to withdraw his falsehood and do Lord Dundonald justice.

Mr. Fitzpatrick objects to the report that he is retiring from politics to accept the position of solicitor to the G.T.P., in the first place because it is not true, and still more because it is an accusation of acting dishonorably. Yet it is precisely the position in which as Minister of Justice he has placed Mr. Fraser, the late M.P. for Guysborough. To reward this bitter partisan for his aid in influencing the people to enrich the railway grafters he has made him a judge. The new Liberals seem determined to degrade the judiciary.

After alluding to the fact of the Governor-General's Body Guard being a family regiment of the Denisons with good results, Saturday Night proceeds:—"The attempt to make the 13th Scottish Light Dragoons a preserve for the Baker family, whose instincts are political rather than military, was one of the causes of the row between Dundonald and the Ottawa Government." Only one Baker was recommended for a commission, and counting his cousins, his brother-in-law and the cousin of his brother-in-law, there were not as many of the connection as there are Denisons in the Body Guard. The objection was merely due to political corruption and personal spite on the part of the party heeler responsible for the district.

Of Use Every Day

Once you become acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment and the scores of ways in which it is useful in every home, you would not think of being without it. Eczema, salt rheum, scald head, tetter, chaffing, chilblains, burns, scalds and every form of skin irritation and eruption soon yield to its extraordinary soothing, healing influence.

UNITED STATES ENGINEERS.

Pretence That They Are Needed to Teach Canadians Their Work.

The Cleveland Plaindealer recently had the following editorial, which is interesting in view of later development:

The cry of "Canada for the Canadians" now so frequently heard in the Dominion is understandable in this country, where the same spirit was once rampant. Canada is quite likely to find out, however, as did the United States, that it is both silly and unprofitable.

The latest manifestation of this spirit in Canada appears in connection with building the proposed transcontinental railway. It is proposed that only British labour shall be employed, in spite of the obvious fact that considering the Dominion's limited supply of laborers fitted for such work the enterprise will languish or fail altogether if such a narrow policy of exclusion shall prevail. That there is more than mere noise behind the agitation is shown by the fact that American engineers who have gone to Canada to build new lines find themselves unwelcome and in certain cases have been requested to retire in favor of Canadians.

Possibly Canadians do not remember, or do not wish to, that Americans taught them practically all they know about building railroads in difficult country. Both the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific owe their existence largely to the efforts of American engineers who, in the latter case at least, were called in when the British experts found themselves unable to overcome the obstacle presented by the Canadian Rockies. The British experts reported that certain routes were impracticable or even impossible. American engineers, fresh from their experiences in our own mountainous sections, thought and demonstrated otherwise. In consequence the Canadian Pacific did not have to halt on the slope of the Rockies.

It is perhaps natural that these Canadian engineers and capitalists should wish to kick away ten ladder by which they ascended. Americans can get along somehow even if not allowed to build Canadian railways, but the action of the Dominion people is a bit ungracious to say the least. It would be a sad humiliation should they be obliged to call for American help after all.

The Joy of Living

It is only the healthy who find a real joy in life. Weak, nervous, languid and discouraged people find new hope and energy in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. With new rich blood coursing through the veins and the thrill of new nerve force sent tingling along the nerve fibres, the joy of living returns and disease and weakness disappear.

ENGINE 490'S WILD RUN

Hair-Raising Railroading on G.T.R. Into Owen Sound.

Locomotive, a Train of Twelve Heavily Loaded Mark Cars and a Caboose, After Developing High Rate of Speed in Runaway From Ben Allen, Piled Themselves in Twisted Mass in the Dock at Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, July 25.—The worst railway wreck ever experienced on the Owen Sound division of the Grand Trunk Railway, occurred at 12.35 Saturday afternoon, when locomotive No. 490 was forced over the end of the rails, plowed up three hundred feet of macadam roadbed and finally buried herself in the west side docks, almost touching the schooner Ida Ilsen. Five marl cars of a train of twelve followed up the engine and piled themselves up in an indiscriminate mass of twisted trucks, broken timber and marl.

A Hair-Raising Run.

The wreck was prefaced by one of the most hair-raising runs ever experienced by a railroad crew. The train, consisting of engine 490, twelve marl cars heavily loaded and a caboose, in charge of Conductor Kee, developed a high rate of speed on the grade near Ben Allen, a station five miles out of Owen Sound.

The engineer, H. Brown of Palmerston, whistled for down brakes. The brakes would not work, and from then on the train rushed wildly and helplessly down the grade towards Owen Sound. The engineer reversed the throttle, but the weight of the train and the momentum made this utterly useless. The engine was being pushed by the train.

The train swept into the yard and flashed past the depot. Fireman Wm Johnson jumped at the last switch. At the end of the rails the engineer jumped also and the locomotive plunged across the roadway and buried herself in the dock at the side of the big schooner Ilsen.

That no one was killed is a remarkable fact.

Cost Drew Him Down.

Deseronto, July 25.—A sad drowning accident occurred about a mile below Adolphustown Saturday evening about 8 o'clock in which R. H. Gifford, druggist, aged 33 years, of Watertown, N.Y., was the victim. The Crescent Yacht Club of Watertown, N.Y., of which deceased was a member, were enjoying a week's cruise on the Bay of Quinte. The anchor of the yacht Heola dragged. Gifford and another man left in a small boat to get a stone off shore. They placed the stone in the bottom of the boat, and their canoe capsized. Both had oil skin coats on, which dragged them down. Gifford's companion clung to the capsized boat, but Gifford started to swim to shore. He sank almost immediately before help could reach him. They were about 15 yards from the shore and in about eight feet of water.

Sun Scorches Englishmen.

London, July 25.—Only a slight break has been experienced in the prolonged drought. The cry of the agriculturist now is for rain. Many moors have been seriously damaged by fires. At the Tunbridge Wells cattle show valuable cows had to be treated for sunstroke, one prize animal expiring from the cause. Between Aldershot and North Camp, the railway rails expanded to such an extent that the line buckled, a thing said to be unprecedented in this country.

Jockey Swalwell Killed.

New York, July 25.—Ernest Swalwell, a Canadian steeplechase jockey, who came from Toronto a week ago to ride Robert Davies' steeplechaser Opuntia, was thrown in the Brighton steeplechase Saturday, and died from his injuries while being carried in an ambulance to the Emergency Hospital, Coney Island. Swalwell is the second steeplechase rider who has met death in a race in the course of the present meeting at the seaside track.

Merry Del Val Resigns.

Rome, July 25.—The Tribuna says it is reported that Cardinal Merry del Val, the Papal Secretary of State, has tendered his resignation, owing to the hostility of the cardinals, which indicates that they accuse him of rendering impossible an accord with France, and that the Pope has refused to accept the resignation.

Hit Head on Bolt.

Grimsby, July 25.—Friday afternoon Albert Marsh's little boy, Earl, was playing in an upright swing. The little fellow fell out backwards, striking the back of his head upon a quarter-inch bolt point, penetrating through the skull and fracturing it. It was found necessary to perform an operation to save the little fellow's life.

To Take His Seat.

Ottawa, July 25.—John Charlton arrived in the city on Saturday and will take his seat in the House Monday afternoon for the first time this session. Mr. Charlton shows traces of his severe illness, but is in a fair way to recovery.

SERVANTS IN RUSSIA.

The Law Excludes Them as Witnesses Against Their Employers.

The Russian servant is hired for one year and is told exactly what his particular duty is to be. He then sticks to that one duty. As long as each servant faithfully performs the special duties of his position all is well, but the neglectful butler or cook or coachman is sent by the employer with a written note to the police judge, who after carefully investigating the complaints has a right to order bodily punishment or to write a bad mark in the book kept for this purpose.

In great Russian households often from twenty to fifty servants are kept, and even the middle class families have two to four. The pay of these servants varies according to the line of work. While the "chiefs" in the kitchens of wealthy families often receive £300 a year, a cook in an ordinary citizen's employ gets no more than £12 a year, and a maid of all work never gets more than £5 a year. At Easter every servant gets a present, generally, a suit or dress.

Every other Sunday the servants in a Russian household are entirely free. Their work stops Saturday night after supper, when the servants leave the house not to return until the next Monday morning. The employers never ask where or how the free time is spent.

Russian servants will pilfer. Since Russian ladies leave everything to the care of the servants the latter do as they please.

The manservants smoke cigars belonging to their masters and pay frequent visits to the wine cellars of the house, but a gentleman would consider it "demeaning" himself to prosecute a servant for this.

The Russian servants will talk about fellow servants, but never about their employers. Even when they quit one place and take service in another family they would never mention anything about their former masters. This discretion goes so far that even the law considers it. In Russia the law excludes servants as witnesses against their former or present employers so long, at least, as these servants are not suspected of having taken part in the crime.—London Mail.

SHORT TALKS.

A terrible lot of love is wasted on cats, dogs and unmarried men.

So many people waste time! Do you do it? Do you talk, and talk about nothing?

How we all dislike the child that has its own way and is impudent! All of us need a great deal of training.

A good many people are like pie-plant—their good qualities are not known because no one handles them right.

When a woman's daughter marries a preacher she is more firmly convinced than ever that her children have advantages she did not enjoy.

If a woman truly loves her husband, when she is asked how he is she will say, "Well, he does not complain, but I do not think he is very well."

If you have a little hard sense it has probably been beaten into you; very few have it naturally. So that, after all, adversity and criticism are useful. —Atchison Globe.

The Bear He Missed.

Telling in his book of some hunting experiences near the north pole, Captain Sverdrup wrote: "Walruses and seals were harpooned and shot and also the large arctic hare, which seems to have contracted the peculiar habit of frequently running long distances on its hind legs. Hunting was not always easy, the atmosphere playing strange tricks with the eyesight, as witness the following account of the stalking of a bear: 'With the utmost caution, with his gun ready and his eye fixed inexorably on the bear, Sehlel advanced to the spot. Meanwhile the bear sat wagging its head, but keeping a good lookout, it appeared, for when Sehlel had come some twenty steps nearer it rose and flew away. It flew as well as any bird, which, after all, was not remarkable, for it was a gruccous gun.'"

ECZEMA ON LEG FOR TEN YEARS

Would Scratch Till the Blood Flowed--Entirely Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hiram Frey, Norwood, Ont., states— "I was troubled for ten years with eczema on one leg. The itching was terrible, and when scratched the blood would come. The doctors could not cure me. Fortunately I heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and its persistent use has completely cured me. There is now no trace of the disease left.

My little girl two years old, has also been cured of Eczema by Dr. Chase's Ointment. Her face was a mass of sores and we had to bandage her hands to keep her from scratching it. Today her face is clear of even the scars which the ugly sores made, and she is thoroughly cured. I am glad of an opportunity to let people know what a blessing Dr. Chase's Ointment has proved itself to me."

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Lord Dundonald Portrayed by One Who Knows Him.

The new London Weekly, London Opinion, is a bright, readable paper, treating rather of current topics than of literature, though literature is not forgotten. In a late issue there is an interesting sketch of Lord Dundonald, from which we take the following paragraphs:—

"I am sorry, but not at all surprised, that Lord Dundonald has been unable to hit it off with the authorities of Canada. The Cochranes have never had the smallest sympathy with officialdom of any kind, and they generally contrive sooner or later to make officialdom look uncommonly foolish. The present head of the house of Cochrane inherits his ancestors' daring and dash, as well as their extraordinary inventive genius, their scientific turn of mind, and their utter inability to "kow tow" to any "little tin gods," whether politicians or permanent civil servants. The Canadian Government are no doubt constitutionally in the right, but what is serious is that they have lost the service of the very man for the Canadian militia, a soldier of extraordinary initiative and efficiency, as shall presently appear.

Lord Dundonald is a good speaker, but is apt to be carried away. I remember an oration of a year or two ago, at a semi-public dinner, which amused me vastly, because it was so different from the manuscript which he had carefully prepared beforehand, and which it had been my privilege to read. He has a pleasant, cultivated voice, and does not appear at all impulsive to the casual observer. But ther eis a regular volcano inside. What he feels most strongly about is political interference with the service—indeed, he carries it so far that he never speaks in the House of Lords, considering it improper for an officer on the active service list to do so.

Altogether, Lord Dundonald belongs to a type of officer which, it is to be hoped, will be the rule rather than the exception in the British army of the future. For he combines in an extraordinary degree dash with caution, brains with old-fashioned sportsmanship, theoretical knowledge with practical efficiency. Give him his head and he will do wonders, but attempt to tie him up in red tape and you will immediately hear something drop.

This lithe, well-proportioned man, with refined scholarly face and dark curly hair, has already had a marvellous career, though he is not yet fifty-two. At Eton he learned boxing among other things; the 2nd Life Guards was his university, and he took his tripos, so to speak, in Africa. He served with the Camel Corps in the Soudan in the forties, and brought the news of Gordon's death to General Buller, being the only officer who could guide himself across the desert by the stars. Yet he actuallyhad to pay his own expenses to get out to the Boer war, though once there he was rapturously welcomed, and did invaluable service before Ladysmith with his irregular horse being especially adored by the Canadians.

Lord Dundonald's three chief inventions are the galloping gun carriage, the Inatra hand warmer, and a camel back ambulance. His gun carriage was refused by the sapient war office, which now has to buy the carriages at a much greater cost from a private firm. In the solitude of his fine library in Portman Square, where is treasured the lock of hair which Napoleon gave to Captain Dundonald Cochrane, of the Orontes, at St. Helena, saying: "This is all your country has left me to give,"—he has worked out many an intricate problem. He was the most popular commander the 2nd Life ever had, though he never sought popularity; he was always thinking of the men's comfort. For instance, when the regiment was doing a long march on a broiling day, he hired carts at his own expense to carry their heavy cuirasses. He has a pretty literary style, which he has used to clear the fame of his grandfather, the great Admiral Cochrane.—Scottish American.

FOR NAUGHTY NATIONS.

Offending Powers Punished by Means Other Than War.

"Go into a corner, you naughty, naughty nation!" So spoke the six Great Powers of Europe one day last summer to the erring Kingdom of Servis, when at one fell swoop a group of assassins made away with the Obrenovitch dynasty.

"We shan't speak to you for a long time," they said, and a day or two after the massacre, several ambassadors and their households were leaving Belgrade Station for an indefinate "leave of absence," from which some have not yet returned.

"You bad, bad man," said the same Powers, on August 31st, 1896, to Abdul Hamid, Sultan of Turkey. "You have massacred thousands of Armenians. We would like to go to war with you about it, if we were not afraid of each other. Never mind. We sh'a'nt light up on your birthday. There!"

And on that anniversary, not a single European Embassy showed a glimmer of light. Their blinds were drawn down, and the European quarter of the city was gloomy as the grave. The little punishment, it was said, was felt more severely by the erring Sultan than a dozen collective notes of protest.

Nobody goes to war with Turkey, for the very simple reason that directly one Power should show itself hostile to the Sultan, some other Power jumps up and proclaims herself his friend. But when countries find themselves at loggerheads with the Porte, they have a fairly simple method of inflicting punishment which hurts. They merely seize the custom revenue of Smyrna, which is like depriving a schoolboy of his pocket money, and in a very short time Turkey is BROUGHT TO HER SENSES.

"You sha'n't have your pocket-money" is a very favorite way of dealing with the world's naughty children. Venezuela, the incorrigible babe of the west, has suffered this punishment so often that she doesn't seem to mind it. The only difficulty is that every Power who has a debt against Venezuela hits upon the idea of seizing her duties, and a scuffle ensues. Then Uncle Sam steps in, and stops the punishment, with a sort of hint that he sympathizes with Venezuela.

"Boys will be boys," he says; "besides, if there's any pocket-money to be stopped, I guess I'm the right one to do the stopping ".And so it was last year. Of all Venezuela's debtors, it was her kind Uncle Sam who first got his claims satisfied.

Naughty, big France got up one day in 1896, and said to the whole world: "Personally, I don't care a fig for anybody!" and accordingly she passed a tariff law excluding neagy all nations from her markets. She denounced her treaties of commerce with seven nations, and, altogether, was a distinctly bad, if big, nation.

But she was punished by harmless little Switzerland, and the punishment hurt her very much. Switzerland raised her tariff against French goods. She drank Spanish instead of French wines, wore German clothes, made her own silk, took Belgian machinery. But this was not

THE SEVEREST PUNISHMENT.

In a moment of triumph Switzerland said to her powerful neighbor: "Sha'n't use your railways, or your ports, or your ships. Shall send my goods to America through Belgium, Holland and Britain. Sha'n't use your horrid Marseilles at all, but Genoa, Antwerp, and Homburg. There!"

And the transference of Swiss commerce to non-French ports meant a loss to France of eleven million francs ($2,200,000) in freights and commission.

"Neither shall I read your horrid books," added the vengeful Swiss, "but shall read German ones instead. You know what that means, eh?"

France winced. It was a nasty thrust, for Switzerland stands midway between the rival Powers, and a Switzerland with German sympathies would be an awful thing for France.

By such means as this little Switzerland brought the proud Frenchman to his senses, and in 1895, the French Chamber voted in favor of a friendly agreement with Switzerland by a majority of five hundred and thirteen as a result of the fearful damage done by the smaller State.

RUSSIA WAS NAUGHTY

in the matter of tariffs in 1903. In addition to raising her tariff against the world generally, she inflicted particular injury on her neighbor, Germany, by making her pay the higher tariff, whereas Germany's rivals paid the lower. Germany, of course, replied by shutting out Russian produce, and the two Powers fought a furious tariff war. But Russia had a corner for Germany, out of which that Power could not get.

"Your ships sha'n't come to Russia," was the awful decree. "They shall pay a rouble (79 cents) a ton for every visit they make, whereas other nations, who are good, only have to pay about 4 cents. There's something for you to think over."

And Germany was floored. For her northern towns live almost entirely by their Baltic trade with Russia, and they were threatened with ruin by this punishment. Germany, besides could not hurt Russia by retaliating, for Russian ships do very little trade with German ports.

"You are all very rude, and very malicious," said injured John Bull to France, Germany, Belgium and Holland, in 1900 when the slanders about our fan-tzai war were being circulated all over Europe.

"But you shall be punished," he continued, "I sha'n't call on you this year."

This threat is far more terrible than it sounds. Scores of continental towns, not only watering places, but inland centres, such as Brussel, the Hague and many German cities, look to British and American tourists for their summer revenue, and the falling off of visitors brought houses and shop-keepers. American visitors, by-the-way, avoided the Continent to a great extent, as they, too, were subjected to insults.

RUIN TO MANY HOTELS,

The late Queen herself administered the snub direct to France by changing her winter resort from the French to the Italian side of the Riviera.

Last year, it should be remembered, the King did not as usual go to Homburg, but to Marienbad, in Austria. As the King has more or less set the fashion for Homburg, His Majesty's change of plan gave a tremendous impetus to the Austrian rival.

A word from Royalty, too, or some personage has been known more than once to crush a whole industry, and through that, to punish a nation.

A note to the effect that a reigning Sovereign no longer smoked Havana cigars, would undoubtedly punish the Island of Cuba in the most appalling fashion, as society invariably takes its lead from the monarch in such dictates of taste.

During a critical period between Germany and France, Bismarck inflicted almost as great a blow on his enemy at the dinner table as he could on the battle field. He let it be known that he no longer drank French wines. Without doubt, this hit had a great deal to do with the development of Rhine wine industry, and thereby was injurious to the whole French nation.—Pearson's Weekly.

Pills And Piles.

A prolific cause of Piles is the use of cathartics and pills of a drastic, violent nature.

Followed by a reaction on account of the resinous, drying properties they contain.

There are other causes, but no matter what the cause or what the kind of Piles, Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid can be relied upon to cure—to stay cured.

It's an internal remedy that removes the causes of itching, blind, bleeding or suppurating piles.

A guarantee goes with each package containing a month's treatment. It can be obtained for $1.00 at druggist.

FOLLOWING LAURIER.

Stranger General Russied—French Canadians May Slander Him.

The Laurier organ, La Presse, thus continues bis crusade against strangers:—

"Lord Dundonald, an employee of the Canadian Government, is to be allowed to denounce his superiors; and precisely for this infraction of disciplins the Tories take him under their protection and declare him a great man.

"Sir Henri Taschereau, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and Hon. Mr. Lemieux, Solicitor-General, now both in England, allow themselves to enlighten British opinion on the consequences of so dangerous an escapade; and the Tories at once show an extreme susceptibility upon the interference of officials in the public affairs of our country.

Lord Dundonald, a stranger to Canada, has not the right to occupy himself with our affairs; nevertheless, the Tories give him their protection.

"Sir Henri Taschereau and Hon. Mr. Lemieux are of the Canadians; the Tories refuse them the right to vindicate our honor.

"There you have them, the fanatics of Ontario, in all the odiousness of their shameful conspiracy. Let us judge them as they show themselves to be.

"Who, in the Province of Quebec, will continue to treat them as honest citizens?"

They Know Him.

A well known literary man who has been spending several weeks at his old home in Vermont tells of a conversation which he overheard between two visitors on the porch of the village store. An acquaintance of theirs had just passed in the street, and the following comment was heard by the visitor:

"That goes 'Si Perkins.' Then a meditative pause—"Si ain't the man he used to be."

"Naw—sir' he never was."—Harper's Weekly.

THEY WANT THEIR MONEY.

Fuss Over Estates Limited—Contract Holders Disappointed.

(Toronto Telegram, July 22.)

About fifty contract holders and ex-contract holders of the Estates Limited met in Richmond Hall last night to discuss the company's method of doing business.

The "Estates Limited" was organized last June, and is doing business at 76 Queen street. The concern issued prospectuses guaranteeing that on payment of $2.50 per month for 25 months and $6 per month thereafter until $1,137 had been paid, a house costing not less than $1,000 would be given at the expiration of 25 months to anyone who made these payments.

HOME FOR $62.50.

On the payment of $62.50 the contract holder would secure a home in a little over two years at the outside. He could occupy it and pay $6 per month after that on the instalment plan. In many instances the company represented that many houses would be available in a few months. The company protected itself by holding a first mortgage against the houses for the balance due from the time they were occupied Any contract holder who wanted to be released could do so at any time, but half the amount he paid in, plus $10 would be forfeited. Should the company fail to provide a house at the end of the 25 months the total amount paid in by the contract holder would be refunded with interest at six per cent.

This scheme attracted a great number, and as many as 1,400 contracts were issued. Although the company's officials represented that many contract holders would have homes long before 25 months would expire, it appears that no extensive building operations have been going on. Only a few houses, it is understood, have been turned over to contract holders.

This delay and unsatisfactory arrangements by the management have made many contract holders uneasy, and two or three meetings have been held lately to discuss the situation and to consider what action should be taken.

THE CROWN'S ADVICE.

Mr. Reginald Eyre, acting City Crown Attorney, was invited to the meeting to give his advice. He stated that about fifteen contract holders had consulted him, and he advised them to get out of it as quickly as they could. The company could not be got at criminally, as it was a corporation. Perhaps it could be reached under the Loan Companies' Act. He doubted whether a civil action would be wise.

"You men haven't got enough money to fight this company," said he. "They have your money and will use it to fight you. The best way to get after them would be to bring action under the Loan Companies' Act, and the evidence you would have to secure to warrant that would cost you something."

"If this company, sir," said a man near the door, "is doing business in contravention to the Loan Companies' Act, why does not Dr. Howard Hunter, the registrar of loan companies, interfere?"

"Well, I can't say," was Mr. Eyre's answer.

ALSO THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

"Well Mr. Eyre, would a petition to the Attorney-General cause an investigation into the company's methods?" asked another individual. "I don't believe the concern has ever built a house for a contract holder nor has it an acre of land."

"I would simply petition the Attorney-General," said the Crown officer, "that a number of you men have paid your money into this company and that you cannot get any satisfaction. It might be some satisfaction to find out who the shareholders are and bring an action against them, but it would be just a chance whether you would ever get anything."

FRANK SULLIVAN, MANAGER.

More quite a discussion followed on the cost of a lawsuit. It also brought out the fact that there had been several changes in the management since the company's inception. At the time of organization the officers were:—C. A. Mittleberger, president; A. D. Chaplin, vice-president; E. L. Briggs, secretary, and James Crichton, inspector. Contracts were signed by Messrs. Mittleberger and Briggs. The former retired shortly after, and the latter died, and the list of officers then read:—Alexander Young, president; A. Chaplin, vice-president; R. E. Kemerer, treasurer, and F. J. Sullivan, manager; James Crichton, director; H. Taylor, secretary; John W. Bayliss and George E. Ireland, directors; H. F. Nobbs, manager real estate department.

THE SAME FRANK.

"Is this the Frank Sullican of political fame?" asked one when he heard the name of the manager.

"Yes, sir," replied another, "that's Frank Sullivan of the Gamey case."

"I believe the Ontario Government and its crowd are all in it," shouted somebody. "Frank Sullican can get anything he wants."

It is said that until May, Sullivan and Young were directing the affairs of the concern. After a hot meeting of contract holders in that month Sullican stepped down, and now the management is in the hands of Messrs. Hall and Nobbs.

The long and rambling discussion was concluded by the chairman, Mr. Walter Bishop, stating that he for one would forfeit half his deposit and get out as soon as he could and many murmured that those were their sentiments.

It seemed a settled opinion among those present that no action could be taken, as the concern was not 25 months in business; therefore their contracts would not be legally matured till then.

A motion was made that the management address a meeting of the contract holders at a date as early as possible, and inform them of the condition of things, was carried, and the meeting adjourned.

THE M'MASTER STUDENTS' BAND

STIRRING SERVICES AND ADDRESSES BY THE MEMBERS.

Effective Music in Sunday School—A Crowded Morning Congregation—Afternoon and Evening Addresses—An Overflow Meeting.

As was to be anticipated from the growing interest in the meetings held by the McMaster students, yesterday's services were the largest attended and the best in every way. At the urgent request of the pastor and officers of the church the young men have consented to remain for two days longer, and those who have not yet heard them will have the opportunity of doing so this evening and also to-morrow at 8 p. m. It had been intended to hold an open air meeting in Central Park on Saturday evening, but owing to the weather the band very reluctantly abandoned the idea.

It is only possible to summarize briefly the services held yesterday. Again the Band took charge of the Sunday School in the morning, and addresses were given by Messrs. McGregor and Cameron to the scholars. Mr. Macdonald sang an effective solo with guitar accompaniment, entitled "Over the Line." The service was one that will linger in many memories as long as life lasts and was marked by the profession of conversion by many of the scholars.

Following this the Band adjourned to the regular morning service in the church, which was again crowded. A very fine address was given by Mr. Huddleston on the subject of "Hope," followed by the leader of the Band, Mr. McDonald, on the "Need of Evangelism." The latter was a splendid if startling statement in defence of such services as were being held at present in Peterborough. Leaving the church our reporter heard one prominent business man remark that he considered it one of the bravest as well as most brilliant addresses ever delivered in town. Mr. Cameron concluded with his usual appeal to those who were in doubt or difficulty to give the Band the chance of being of help to them, and this was again met by a happy response.

The music as usual was quite a feature. Mr. Williamson singing "The Dream of Paradise" with great power and effect. The quartette also sang "Strong in Thy Strength" and as usual were listened to with the most rapt attention. It is pleasant in this connection to bear witness to the pleasing and most effective way in which the musical work of the Band is done. The selections used are all full of the gospel message, and are rendered in a manner that is beyond all praise, both in method and in tone.

In the afternoon the church was again crowded for the young people's service at four o'clock, when powerful addresses were given by Messrs. Buchanan and Hilts and concluded as usual by Mr. Cameron with an earnest appeal to the unconverted. The quartette sang two selections, "The Riches of Love" and "Jesus is passing this way," and by special request Mr. Macdonald sang "What will you do with Jesus" very effectively, accompanying his solo on the guitar.

At the evening service the church was speedily filled to the last available seat by a most representative audience, and it was necessary to duplicate the service by using the school room downstairs for an overflow meeting. While no satisfactory arrangement it was the only thing that could be done to accommodate the crowds desiring to hear the speakers. The gathering in the church was a most inspiring one, and the whole service, song and addresses, was based on a series of questions. The opening solo and quartette was entitled "Which way shall I take" and was followed by a very powerful address from Mr. Huddleston from the text, "Why could we not cast Him out?" This led easily to the presentation of all involved in the answer "Because of your unbelief," and the enforcement of the present need of faith in all the avenues of personal and national life.

Mr. Williamson sang a solo entitled "The Man of Sorrows" with great power and pathos, after which Mr. Noble asked the question "What will a man give in exchange for his soul," briefly showing how large a place in all our lives is taken up with bargaining. He enforced the lesson that eternal issues hang on present earthly decisions in regard to the soul.

The quartette aptly followed by singing "Where will you spend eternity."

In conclusion Mr. Cameron took as his text the question "How can we escape if we neglect so great salvation." The prominent idea, the speaker sought to enforce was the "greatness" of Christ's work of salvation and the need of the human acceptance of the same. It was a powerful, manly address, followed by the usual appeal to the unsaved. While the quartette sang a couple of selections many availed themselves of the invitation to pass into the enquiry room, where they were pointed anew to the Saviour by those interested in the work.

Downstairs in the school room the meeting was led by Mr. Hilts in a very quiet and helpful manner. The addresses were delivered by Messrs. McGregor and Huddlestone, the former taking as his subject "The Power of Faith," and giving a very telling address. This gentleman's style is peculiarly attractive to young people from his fresh and natural method, and was greatly appreciated. Mr. Huddleston repeated the address previously given in the church above, and Mr. Hilts concluded the meeting with some pregnant lessons on the evils of disobedience and unwise curiosity. Here also response was made to the very earnest appeals for decision made by the speaker. During the overflow service the quartette sang "The Shepherd True" and Mr. Macdonald sang the solo "Let Him have his way with you." At both services a special offering was taken up for the members of the who, it is very pleasing to note, conduct their work strictly on the voluntary principle, taking whatever is given regardless of their own expenses. It is very gratifying to state that the response to the pastor's appeal on their behalf was quite substantial.

PASSED THEIR EXAMS.

Successful Teachers at the Cobourg Summer School.

The following Peterborough teachers—Miss Eyres, Miss I. Noble, Miss S. Dawson and Mr. F. Kerr — have completed the course at the Cobourg Summer School and have been successful in securing certificates in drawing, manual training and nature study. Miss Eyres, in addition, took a certificate in domestic science.

The principal, Mr. C. C. Arthur, reports that these teachers all did excellent work.

BAND EXCURSION

Well Patronized Considering the Wet Weather.

The excursion under the auspices of the 57th Regiment band on Saturday afternoon to Lakefield per steamer City of Peterborough was a good success, considering the unpleasantness of the weather. Nearly 200 people were on the trip and greatly enjoyed going over the lift lock and the trip through the canal. Lakefield was reached about 5.30, and a stop was made to enable the excursionists to get tea, after which they returned home, the boat reaching the lift lock shortly after nine o'clock. The band rendered a fine programme during the day, and everyone present had an excellent time.

Brevities.

—The Charity Board meets this evening.

—There was no Police Court this morning.

INSTRUCTIVE ADDRESS ON THE YUKON

REV. DR. PRINGLE AGAIN ADDRESSES A PETERBOROUGH CONGREGATION.

Gives a Very Vivid Picture of the Camp Services Held There—Made Strong Appeal for Dawson Hospital.

The service in St. Andrew's church yesterday morning was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Pringle of the Yukon, who is at present travelling through Ontario and the eastern provinces in the interests of a Presbyterian hospital which is being erected at Dawson City. A few months ago the citizens of Peterborough had the pleasure of listening to a very interesting lecture by Dr. Pringle on the life and other conditions existing in the Yukon, and they were glad to again listen to him. He did not pretend to preach any sermon, but gave a very plain talk about the need of a hospital at Dawson, and told of the work that is being done by ministers of the gospel in that northern land, interspersing his remarks with tales of everyday camp life. He first referred for a few minutes to the appeal which he was making on behalf of the hospital, and said it was costing the sum of $20,000, $15,000 of which had been subscribed by the city of Dawson, one man alone contributing $5,000. At the last meeting of the General Assembly he addressed the meeting, and had been authorized by the Assembly to appeal for the $5000 on the debt, and $3000 for its support. He hoped to have the required amount and return to the Yukon before navigation closed, as after that everything was dear, and vegetables, etc., were about double the price they were at any other time.

Rev. Mr. Pringle, in introducing his subject, said that no doubt he would repeat, during his remarks, some of the things he had told them on his previous visit, but he said that repetition was a good thing some times. It was always a great privilege to work for Christ anywhere. Ontario, Nova Scotia and the other eastern provinces are noted for their morality and intelligence, but the speaker believed, and had no hesitation in saying that Manitoba has a sounder basis for its provincial life than Ontario. It was not laid there but in Ontario by the many ministers who preached the gospel to the younger people, and laid the moral foundation that is building up the west. We must leave results to God, and recognize the great privilege of serving God. Dr. Pringle said if he thought that all the work that was being done in the Yukon and by the many ministers in the eastern provinces, and by the handful of missionaries, he did not give much for it. Everyone must do something for the betterment of his fellows. Just as Jesus Christ labored in the flesh amongst men, he is doing the same today, and is moving throughout Canada, the Northwest, China and Japan, and other countries, doing good. It was not the handful of missionaries; it was Jesus Himself.

We in the older provinces do not know what it means to depend only on Jesus Christ for our whole strength. Our life is somewhat routine. A person who goes to these far away countries soon realizes what Jesus meant when he said, "I am not alone when He is with me."

Dr. Pringle here gave a description of the trip up the river to the Yukon, and described the services that are held at the camps on the way. He said that we might forget services at home, but we would never forget them in the Yukon, and their influence for good will tell on our lives for ever. Men never know what Jesus Christ is to them until they get into straits such as everyone experiences there. There is nothing there to take our thoughts away from Him nor anything to allure us. For instance, a group of men in a cabin or but, just as soon as the name of Jesus of Nazareth is mentioned, everything becomes still. There is a great solemnity about these services, and a seriousness in the faces of men never seen before, and they always wanted more in religion than in anything else. The speaker then described the service, and told of the old truths that were told to the men gathered, and the old familiar hymns that were sung, which we have perhaps long forgotten. He said that we needed more of this in our own country, and the old texts were good spiritual truths and good common truths. While these cabin services lasted only about an hour, it was practically only their beginning, as the men would sit around the fire discussing religious points late in the night. The men ask all kinds of questions, and many of them are hard to answer, but no matter whether the questioner is an atheist or an unbeliever you can get them all in their absolute belief that Jesus of Nazareth is the ideal man and master. The speaker had never found a man who would not believe this.

He here briefly referred to the noble work that Rev. Mr. Wright, formerly of town, was doing in the town of Skagway, and paid a tribute to his ability. He believed with Mr. Wright that the best way to save people is not by bringing the prodigal home, but by preventing him leaving. The prevention was far better than the cure, and we should do our best to keep the boys from drifting down into the pit. You can always preach to the men there if you only keep Jesus of Nazareth to the front, because there is in Him an appeal to a better and nobler life.

Dr. Pringle then spoke briefly on the Home Mission work that was being done in the Yukon. The ministers were not preaching to spruce trees out there, but to about 30,000 souls, and the influence they got out there they carry wherever they go. There never was a service that was more deep and abiding than the ones held there, and the ministry and hymns roused the men and brought them back into the fold.

In closing, the speaker again appealed to the congregation to do something to help on the mission work, and said he would like, above all things, to see a few hundred consecrated women give themselves for the hospital work in these mission fields.

Miss Florence Miller rendered a solo at the morning service in a very pleasing voice.

BY THE CANAL ROUTE.

First Craft to Make Continuous Run Over the Trent Canal as Opened.

On Saturday the first craft to make Peterborough wharf over the canal route came in despite the rain, which brought with it a recollection of lift lock Saturday. Mr. Geo. H. Wilson, of the Lindsay Post, came through in his power yacht, accompanied by his two sons, Masters Bruce and Roy Wilson, and Mr. F. W. Wilson of the Port Hope Guide. In another yacht, belonging to Mr. G. H. Hopkins, of Lindsay, were his two sons, Bruce and Bert, and Masters B. H. and W. Allin, sons of Dr. Allin of Lindsay. The party left Lindsay on Thursday morning and made Buckhorn the same night. Friday afternoon and night were spent on Stoney Lake, and making town on Saturday they took camp at Crawford's grove. They speak of the sail down the canal as the most delightful part of the trip. They propose to go on down past Hastings, and through the Trent river to Lake Ontario. The trip may be extended to Kingston and up the Rideau canal to Ottawa. The camp equipment is packed in a canoe and towed behind. Good speed is made.

Coming down the canal they were joined by Mr. Bickford of Toronto, who with his wife is taking a similar cruise. Mr. Bickford took the water at Port Perry, running up through the lakes to the head of Balsam Lake and then turning back to pass through the chain of waters to Peterborough. He left on Sunday morning to make Hastings by night. The craft was thoroughly equipped for the journey and very comfortable.

The Pole Nuisance.

If the signs of the times are read aright there will presently arise a wave of indignation that will do something definite about the indiscriminate planting of 'phone, power and street railway poles. Citizens who were disposed to view the erection of poles opposite the other fellow's property are now getting it themselves, and have joined the army of kickers. One indignant citizen called at the Review office to affirm that in his neighborhood no less than nine poles had been planted inside the frontage distance of 100 feet, and he thought the thing was being carried too far, and proposed the formation of a Citizens' Pole Association, to watch the proposed erection of poles and stand off the indiscriminate planting of sticks. There is not the slightest doubt that the matter will take shape and pressure will be made on the council to abate the nuisance and as the council are amenable to the feeling that influences the popular vote, something will have to be done.

BOWLING.

The local bowlers have been very fortunate in having grand weather so far this season, as Saturday night was the first night during July that the lawn was too wet for play.

The enthusiasm among the members is intense; many of the new members are becoming so adept that the older ones will have all they can do to retain their supremacy. Peterborough expect to send three or four strong rinks to the Dominion tournament at Toronto, August 15th. Schedule for Monday Evening, July 28

LACROSSE.

Port Hope Guide:—"The action of the Hastings Club in defaulting their game is anything but sportsmanlike. Hastings was looked upon as one of the squarest teams in the league, and their notice of default came as a sad surprise to the locals. The Ontarios have to play off a tie game in Peterborough and if they win will have to play off on neutral grounds for the championship. It was expected that the gate receipts of the Hastings game would be sufficient to pay for these trips, and no doubt it would have. Then the advertising was all done before Hastings sent any notice, and the expense incurred in trying to arrange this game will make the Ontario's treasury look like '30c.' To be exact it cost the locals $63.00 to go to Hastings about two weeks ago, and in return for this they have a chance of getting Hastings' deposit money of $25.00. And it is indeed too bad. The Ontarios had a good chance of winning out, but unless something is done in the way of a subscription, the locals may default the game in Peterborough."

The Tecumsehs of Toronto were defeated at the Island on Saturday by the score of 7—3 by the Capitals, of Ottawa.

Brantford is now in its old-time form, and trimmed the Chippewas, of Toronto, on Saturday, by the one-sided score of 9—1. Some hope for them yet.

BASEBALL.

Parker, the fast little player for the Bowmanville team, has gone to Toronto, to play with a team there.

The Wellesleys of Toronto would like to come to town next Monday to play the locals, and a game may be arranged.

The Mail and Empire says today that Manager Harley of the Torontos is to give Pitcher "Bill" Reid a workout.

The inevitable is to happen tomorrow evening. The Examiner baseball team has been doing a lot of "beefing" ever since they defeated a very unrepresentative team from the Review, and intend to play the Auburn team tomorrow night at the Oval. Poor old neighbor, you have our best wishes, but ——! The teams will line up as follows— Examiner—Jolliffe p, Hutchinson c, Glover 1b, Rehea 2b, Shurah 3b, Gilman ss, Long lf, Scriver cf, Graham rf. Auburns—Belleghem c, Weatherstone p, Kelly 1b, Ollie 2b, McCurry ss, Clegg 3b, Long cf, Shaw rf, Rutherford lf.

GOLF.

Jack White, the golf professional, who recently won the open championship of Great Britain at Sandwich, with the record-breaking score of 296, has about decided to visit this country. White's plan differs somewhat from the one pursued a few years ago by Vardon and Taylor when they toured the country getting large purses from the different clubs, win or lose.

White is not coming here in the interest of any special make of clubs or balls, either, his rule being to have enough matches arranged to pay his expenses. When Vardon and Taylor were here they usually played against the best ball of two amateurs or professors, as the case happened to be, but White will find his hands pretty well occupied in successfully meeting the resident "pros" over their home greens.

In discussing the relative merits of the professionals of this country and Great Britain, Walter J. Travis said the other day at Apawamis that he did not consider Vardon, Taylor and Braid more than two strokes better than Anderson in 72 holes. Although White beat out Vardon, Braid and Taylor in the recent championship, he is not generally considered quite on a level with the "big three." Provided White comes over it will be early in September.

The newest in Sundaes are "Creme de Menthe" and "Maraschino Cherries." Try them and see how delicious they are. On sale only at T. H. HOOPER'S.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Party of Ladies Attacked by an Infuriated Cow Near Cemetery.

One evening last week while on their way to the Little Lake cemetery a party of ladies were attacked by an infuriated cow, which was being driven along Crescent street, and but for the timely arrival of assistance one of the party might have sustained fatal injuries. As it was one of the ladies was tossed by the savage beast and thrown a distance of twenty feet and would probably have been gored to death if it had not been that some gentleman who happened to be near ran to her assistance and drove the animal off The young lady was carried into a nearby house, where it was found that her injuries were not of a very serious nature and after a short rest she was able to return home.

In washing woollens and flannels, Lever's Dry Soap (a powder) will be found very satisfactory.

CASTE IN INDIA.

Its Peculiarities Illustrated by the Religion of the Sweeper.

Among the yet unsolved problems of Indian ethnology is the religion of the sweeper caste. It seems clear enough through all the confusion that the supreme deity of the Chuhras is Lalijura, or Lalberg, "a god without form or dwelling place."

A mound of earth, surmounted by a piece of stick and a bit of cloth for a flag, is this deity's shrine, and to it "poojah" is made and a little sacrifice offered of ghee, or grain. It needs no consecration, this simple shrine, and wherever the sweeper may be, if sickness comes or a gift is desired, the little shrine may be set up, with its queer bit of rag and stick, and the worshipper's prayer is made.

The sweeper will have nothing to do with the transmigration of souls. Once a sweeper always a sweeper, and even the ideal sweeper, Pir Jhota, with his broom of gold and basket of silver, "cleans new the fourth heaven, the house of God, and sweeps the apartments of the highest." The good sweeper goes to heaven, however, after death, but in the heaven of a sweeper there is nothing to do but bathe and sit at ease.

The bad sweeper, on the other hand, goes to hell, where he is tormented by fire and wounds till the deity is pleased to vouchsafe relief. Between these two extremes is a kind of purgatory, where the sweeper who is not good enough for the one place and not bad enough for the other undergoes a sort of probation which either kills or cures him.

Of Balmik, the great leader of one sect of sweepers and now himself, like Pir Jhota, a sweeper in the courts of heaven, the accounts differ so widely that it is difficult to identify him. It seems clear, however, that with the profession of sweeper he combined the recreation of poetry, and there is some amount of evidence in favor of his having been the author of the "Ramuana."

He is alternately represented as a low caste hunter of the Karnal Nardak and as a Bhil highwayman who was converted by a saint whom he was about to rob. There is a legend, too, that he laid down his life for the sweepers of Benares and induced the people of that city to admit sweepers into their presence, as they had never done before.

As for Lalberg, the other great leader, he takes us back at once to the days of Homeric myth. He was born from the coat of Balmik and suckled by a hare, in proof whereof Chuhras to this day abstain from eating hares. On the other hand, Lelberg was also born of a pitcher, through the power of Abdul Kader Kilani, and when the Prophet Elias was turned into a sweeper for spitting on the saints in heaven it was Lalberg who relieved him.—Times of India.

Wise Beyond Her Years.

He was a curly headed boy with life before him. She was a little girl with a saucy pug nose, but wise, it would seem, beyond her years. The fact that she was nursing a doll with eyes that opened and shut with a click may have been his inspiration.

"Say, sister, I think I'd get married if I knew how."

"Oh, that's easy," replied the owner of the pug nose. "First you buy a diamond ring and give it to her, then you buy a gold ring like mamma's got and give that to her. And then you must buy her a watch for her birthday."

"An' what she give me?" expectantly asked the little chap.

"Why, nuthin', of course," smartly replied his little companion.

"Say, sister," he added, "I guess I won't marry."

For Over Sixty Years

An old and well-tried remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Sold by all druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

Copyright, 1903, by F. B. Tremble

Orakoff spent several minutes in thought. Suddenly turning to Harvey he held out his hand, saying:

"I believe you. I ask your pardon for the insults I have heaped on you. This is terrible! Koura gone! A slave to the heathen ameer, and I helpless to aid or rescue her! It makes one mad! I could drive this sword blade into my heart!"

"Sit down and be calm," said Harvey. "We can rescue Alma Jurnieff and Koura or kill the men who marry or harm them. Let us work the game together. I am starving. Give me some food."

The food was ordered.

CHAPTER XVII.

A TRAITOR TO THE CZAR.

CAPTAIN ORSKOFF paced up and down the deck feverishly while the American ravenously ate his meal. Harvey, when he had finished, asked for a cigar.

"You are maddening!" said Orakoff as he handed the American a cigar. "One can see that you are not in love—not as I am."

"Sit down," said Harvey. They took chairs on deck.

"Getting excited is not going to help us any," said Harvey, puffing at his cigar. "I am as eager as you to rescue the girls. The difference is that you, without any plans, want to rush off and probably involve us in greater trouble, while I wish to plan out a line of action. Now, that boat went somewhere on the Bokharan coast—where, we do not know. The thing is to get what information we can out of the robbers."

"They would lie to us."

"I don't think the chief, Paipak, would lie. Except for my presence

"Stop!" he commanded suddenly.

the other robbers would have killed him, and he must feel some gratitude."

"But these fellows are shrewd. We could do nothing with them unless we granted them their freedom."

"And that, of course, you would not do."

"No! I am an officer of the czar!"

"What do you intend to do with me?"

"It is my duty to return to Tiflis with you and give you over to the authorities."

"Just so. You are one of those machine made soldiers so common in Russia—fight for the czar and die for yourself. Is that it? No; that isn't quite right—fight and die for the czar and to the devil with yourself; that's more like it. Let's look over the premises. Take my own case in a business sense. I don't know where my windmills are. They were taken to Astrakhan by that fool of a German. Well, supposing I was at liberty to go after them, the first thing I would do would be to outline a plan of getting as quickly as possible from where I am at this moment to the spot where I considered it most likely I would find them."

"I don't see—the connection."

"No, of course not. But tell me—what is your duty in the matter of these robbers?"

"I have already stated that. I must take them to Tiflis and charge them with robbery. Several times the officers in charge of the money to pay the soldiers have been robbed. We suspected that it was done by some of the mountain robbers and mistrusted the Bokharans. But we could never catch any."

"That's because you are a machine soldier. The third section of your police does not work that way."

"What way?"

"Without thinking. Pardon me, you insist it is your duty to go at once to Tiflis?"

"Certainly, unless we can intercept that vessel belonging to the ameer."

"Suppose we do not intercept it? Suppose the rascals make a port in Bokhara?"

"Then I must return to Tiflis and ask permission to enter the territory of the ameer in search of Koura."

Harvey looked at him and whistled.

"My friend, you accused me a short time ago of not loving as you do. Yet you sit calmly here and say you would go to Tiflis to ask permission to rescue the girl you claim to love."

"I am a soldier of the czar!"

"Verily you are, and well have you learned your lesson. I am a soldier of commerce, and love it, but I would consider neither trade nor honor nor citizenship against the chance of saving the girl I love. To the deuce with a patriotism that destroys love. Orakoff, do your duty! If you feel that it is your duty to take me and the robbers to Tiflis, do so, and forever bid farewell to Koura Biarteikis."

"But what can I do? The girls are by this time perhaps on Bokharan soil. It is against the orders of the czar for a Russian soldier to step foot in that country."

"Tiflis is several days' journey from here; Bokhara but a short distance. Somewhere, in the clutches of the Bokharans, are the girls you and I love. Your duty calls you to desert them in their need; mine calls upon me to die for them if necessary. Rather than let you take me back to Tiflis I'll fight you to the death."

Orakoff stared. Harvey turned and resumed his walk. He took several turns and closely watched Orakoff. The Russian was deeply thinking, his brow knitted in perplexity.

"Stop!" he commanded suddenly as Harvey reached him again. "You sell windmills. To no one save those who employ you do you owe allegiance. You come and go as you see fit. You are shrewd and brave and take your wares to all countries and run risks of death to promote the commercial interests of the company. You have spoken of your love. Under the whiplash of your tongue I am torn in halves with the bitterest conflict of my life. I have led my company in battle and have faced the enemy without a tremor, but that is nothing compared to the hell that is surging in my breast now. In me, in this breast, there is a conflict that overshadows anything in my experience."

"I don't understand," said Harvey.

"You would understand if you were a Russian officer and at the same time a man in love. Remember, I am performing my duty when I place you under arrest and take you back to Tiflis. You are a condemned prisoner who has escaped. With your innocence or guilt I have nothing to do. It is my duty to take these robbers to Tiflis, and it is not my duty to permit one of them to talk. Yet, as against this duty, the girl I love is in the hands of the Bokharans. You, the man who is most wanted in Tiflis, and these robbers are the only men on earth who can help me. For, once the girls are on Bokharan soil, I am helpless."

"Helpless?"

"I cannot stir regiments to cross the border. The order must come from St. Petersburg. By the time we get that order the girls will be married to the princes."

"That is what I have been striving to show you—the uselessness of your duty in this case. I claim your duty is to go after the girls."

"Impossible! There is a secret corps for such work. I am not a soldier once off Russian soil unless sent there."

"Who asked you to be a soldier? Come with me. Let us rescue the girls. Alma has really committed a crime, I suppose, but we must risk the danger of Tiflis. I'll take care of that part when we get the girls."

"You would try to escape—would even try to kill me to escape."

"Nonsense. If you will assist in rescuing the girls and let Alma Jurnieff escape, I will go back to Tiflis with you and take my medicine."

"You would risk death and disgrace for the girl you love?"

"Yes. I'd risk hell for the girl I love."

"That is love! That is love! It is as I feel myself. Let me think! What a problem for a man to solve!"

He abruptly left Harvey, who sat down, preferring to let Orakoff work out the problem himself. Orakoff paced gravely up and down, never once looking at Harvey.

"Have you a plan?" he asked suddenly, stopping before Harvey.

"Give me your answer to the problem you have set out to solve, and I will give you the plan I have thought of."

Again that monotonous pacing up and down the deck. It seemed to Irons as though the Russian was growing older looking each moment. Again the feverish eyes and working lips. It came to an end at last. With a sigh as if exhausted Orakoff dropped into the chair by the side of Irons.

"Well, I have fought the fight," he said wearily.

"And won?" asked Harvey.

"No; God knows it is no victory! I have lost. My patriotism goes down before my love. I am a Russian. I know the Russian cruelties to those who defy the czar. I know the pitiless rule that breaks the hearts and destroys the lives of those who even permit a culprit to escape. Knowing this—knowing the punishment, the disgrace, the horror of treachery—I have resolved to become—a traitor!"

"A traitor! What nonsense!"

"Yes, a traitor to the czar! You and I will soon be under the same condemnation. We will go together to the very throne of Bokhara if necessary and rescue those we love or die in the attempt. It is settled. I will not turn back!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

A CONTRACT WITH A ROBBER CHIEF.

HARVEY broke the spell of silence:

"I thought you would see daylight. Now that we agree, let us go on and plan. We must not lose sight of the fact that we are dealing with unknown quantities. We have no method of learning just where the girls are. We must use measures that will assist us. What was your idea when you spoke of becoming a traitor?"

"I become a traitor the moment I give you your liberty and accompany you upon the proscribed ground of Bokhara."

"You must go even further than that. We must use the robbers."

"Paipak! I must at least send him and his brothers to Tiflis."

"You will then throw aside the one staff that can assist us over the difficulty."

"What use can the robbers be to us?"

"This fellow Paipak is chief of a clan called Zannucks, who hate the ameer and all those who are faithful to him. I overheard them talking in the cave. It seems the ameer levies such exorbitant taxes that the Zannucks cannot pay. He taxes everything—wives, children, cattle. That is the reason the chief seeks to rob the ameer and his people—to reimburse the Zannucks. Paipak would not hesitate to help us if by helping us he could work injury to the ameer. Grant the robbers their freedom. Let them take their booty to their people on condition that they assist us in rescuing the girls."

"Set free robbers who have attacked Russian paymasters!"

"You said that you would not turn back. Now you are trying to turn two ways—one toward Tiflis, the other toward Bokhara. It will not do. If you wish to accomplish anything in this affair, you must go the whole figure—stake all and win or lose. That is the way I do business."

"What is your plan?"

"Have Paipak brought here and let us talk with him in a straightforward businesslike way. Any man will help another if he can also benefit himself by doing so."

"I leave it to you. Your head is full of plans, while mine is simply taken up with thinking of poor Koura."

"I think of Alma as much as you do of Koura. But simply thinking will not rescue them. We must act, and act quickly."

Orakoff sent for Nevisky. The lieutenant was pacing the bridge, eager to be off. He could not understand why the captain did not hurry to Tiflis with the prisoners instead of wasting the time chatting in an apparently friendly way with one of them.

"Lieutenant, have the chief robber brought to me," said the captain.

As Paipak was being led toward them Orakoff said to Harvey: "Conduct the negotiations. I will agree to anything you plan."

Orakoff ordered the irons removed from the robber. When the three were alone, Harvey said to Paipak:

"We have had you brought here to have a businesslike talk. You appreciate your situation, I suppose."

"I am a prisoner of the czar. He will perhaps kill me."

"Just so. And all of your treasure, the stealings of many months, is on board this boat."

"Yes, to enrich a Russian officer. My people can starve. The ameer's tax must be paid or twenty of our best young men and women must go to Bokhara. It is wrong."

"Of course it is wrong. We know your people hate the ameer and that the ameer is cruel. It was a strange chance that took me to that island of Ping Sheng."

"You saved my life, for my brothers were mad with wine."

"Your future course will show whether I did well. Let me explain how I came to the island."

Then followed a detailed rehearsal of the story of Koura and Alma.

"They are beautiful girls," said Harvey as he concluded. "One is to be the wife of the captain; the other is to be my wife."

"Why do you tell me this? I am a prisoner."

"Because we want your assistance in rescuing these two girls from the men of Bokhara. They are your enemies, and you have sufficient reason to hate them."

"But I do not love the Russians more."

"This is not a question of loving the Russians. I saved your life, did I not?"

"I would do anything for you."

"Suppose you are set free and the treasure is restored to you. The only return we ask is that you give us all the assistance in your power to recover the two young women."

"Do you mean that the Russian will permit me to depart in peace to my people and take with me the treasure that I stole?"

"Yes; to rescue the young girls we will do that. The captain has promised it."

"Do you agree?" put in Orakoff anxiously.

"I am not a fool."

"That means you agree, of course," said Harvey. "The ameer is the silliest rascal in Asia, but our united brains ought to be able to outwit him. First we must figure out where the girls probably are now."

"Where was the ameer's boat when you saw it?" asked Paipak eagerly.

"I cannot say. I drifted all day and half the night before I reached the island. It went in the same direction I drifted."

"They were going to Siloon."

"What is Siloon?"

Killed in Boyish Scrap.

Brockville, July 25.—The 11-year-old son of William Webb of Winchester Springs, was accidentally shot at his father's farm. Mr. Webb had left a loaded gun in the barn. Deceased and another boy named Liberty endeavored to get possession of it, and in pulling it out of the crater the weapon discharged. The whole charge went into his breast, killing him instantly.

Band Refuses to Turn Out.

Ottawa, July 25.—The effort of the local Liberal organ, The Free Press, to intimidate civil servants against taking part in the citizens' send-off to Lord Dundonald, Tuesday evening, has evidently not been in vain.

The band of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, eleven of whom are employed in the printing bureau and several more in various other departments of the civil service, met yesterday and voted against turning out, although permission for the band to play had been given by the military authorities, and the band had accepted an engagement from the citizens' committee to furnish music in the procession to the railway station.

CAPTURES KING'S PRIZE

Pte. Perry, Vancouver, B.C., Best Rifle Shot in the Empire.

Wins the King's $1,250, the N.R.A. Gold Medal, and the N.R.A. Gold Badge From 1,071 Competitors For the Coveted Trophies—Perry, Who Was Formerly of the Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, Exceeded 1902's Winning Score 10 Points.

Bisley Camp, July 25.—(C. A. P.) Pte. J. Perry of the 6th Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles, Vancouver, won the King's Prize on Saturday. His winning was a great surprise, but most popular. He scored seven bulls and three inners at 1,000 yards, giving him a total of 47 over that range. His total score over the 200, 500, 600, 800, 900 and 1,000 yards ranges was 321, out of a possible 355, which was 10 more than the score of last year.

Carried Around the Camp.

An enthusiastic crowd followed the hero of the hour as he was carried around the camp. At the Canadian hut the procession halted while Perry was photographed. All the Canadians in camp have decorated their hats with maple leaves taken from the trees lining the avenue leading to the Canadian hut. Commander Anderson is jubilant, and Adjutant McDougall is equally so.

The Prince and Princess of Wales both congratulated Pte. Perry, and the Prince asked him if he had been in South Africa. On Perry replying that he had Lord Roberts overheard him. The veteran soldier came up and spoke to Perry, congratulating him.

Pte. Perry was chaired by the members of the Canadian team and carried around the camp, his bearers singing "The Maple Leaf." At the pavilion they were met by a band, which, playing "See the Conquering Hero Comes," proceeded to the Canadian hut.

Perry's win is the most popular one the C.A.P. representative has seen in sixteen years at Bisley.

Corp. McGregor, Canada, was 21st in the King's Prize and won $60 and the National Rifle Association badge with a score of 306 points.

Major John Howard, Agent-General in London for Nova Scotia, is the winner of the St. George's Challenge Vase competition. He gets the vase, a dragon cup, a gold cross and £30.

42nd in St. George's Vase.

Pte. J. Perry of Vancouver was 42nd, winning the N.R.A. badge and £6. The match is shot over 500, 600 and 900 yards ranges.

Staff-Sergt. Crowe was 115th in the first stage of the St. George's Vase competition, at 500 and 600 yards, winning £2.

In the Doubles Saturday Sergt. W. Mortimer and Sergt. T. S. Bayles, two men of the 10th Royal Grenadiers, scored 61 out of a possible 70.

In the King's Prize, at 900 yards, Pte. J. Perry scored 45 and Corp. R. McGregor 42.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by Lord Roberts, visited the Canadian camp and inspected the colonials drawn up in an open square in front of the Canadian hut. Lieut.-Col. Anderson, the commandant of the team, showed them through.

PRIVATE PERRY.

Winner of the King's Prize.

Scotland won the National Challenge Trophy. This is open competition by teams of twenty from the volunteers of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. The ranges are 200, 500 and 600 yards.

The Prince of Wales asked the audience at the pavilion to join in a welcome to the representatives of the King's dominions over-seas. The audience gave a rousing cheer.

Prince Congratulates Perry.

The Prince also asked them to join himself in congratulating Pte. Perry on his success in winning the King's Prize. The Princess then distributed the prizes.

Perry was given a grand reception when the Princess presented the King's Prize.

The Prince, before leaving, congratulated Lieut.-Col. Anderson, and said: "I am more than pleased that a Canadian has won the King's Prize."

McGregor Won $15.

In the Corporation of the City of London competition of the value of £105, open to Indian and colonial volunteers, McGregor was second, winning a prize of £15; Sergt. Crowe third, winning £10; Bayston tenth, £5; Capt. Crowe eleventh, £5; Smith twelfth, £5.

London Press Comment.

The Daily Chronicle says that Private Perry's victory is the chief volunteer event of the year will help to obliterate the bad feeling caused by Lord Dundonald, and at the same time recall the high services rendered the Empire by the Canadians during the Boer war.

The Daily News says that Great Britain will heartily write Private Perry's name on the roll of honor. Markmanship will do much more than any expedient that could ever be devised to bring the Empire together and to neutralize such small manchief as half a dozen Dundonalds could do.

The other London papers in their reports of the Bisley matches feature the fact that the King's Prize was won by a Canadian, and give due credit to Private Perry for his unerring markmanship. The Canadian colony is rejoiced at the success of their kinsman.

Samuel J. Perry, born in Toronto, 26 years ago, an old member of the Royal Grenadiers, was one of the first contingent on service in South Africa.

The King's Prize.

The prize consists of $1,250, given by His Majesty, the N.R.A. gold medal and the N.R.A. gold badge. And greater than these is the everlasting glory of being the best shot in the Empire for his year. The prize is the blue ribbon of the rifle world, and is unrivaled among the great contests of skill and endurance.

The prize is competed for in three stages, the first at 200, 500 and 600 yards, with seven shots at each distance. The first three hundred in this stage compete at the second stage distance of 600 yards, with 20 shots each. The first hundred in this stage may enter the last stage at the distances of 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, with ten shots at each distance. The possible is therefore 355, and the score of 321 made by Perry is a remarkably fine one. His target at the 1,000 yards range is one of the best ever made.

Ottawa, July 25.—Sir Frederick Borden has forwarded to Col. W. P. Anderson, commandant of the Canadian team at Bisley, a cablegram of congratulation to Private Perry of Vancouver upon winning the King's Prize.

THE DAY OF TEST.

Capital of $25,000,000 to Clash With 25,000 Workers.

Fall River, Mass., July 25.—With hope of peaceful settlement abandoned, both sides in the pending industrial trouble here await with dogged determination the coming of this morning, and the first test of strength between manufacturers representing a combined capital of $25,000,000 and more than 25,000 cotton mill operatives.

The mill gates will be opened at the usual time this morning, when the operatives will be given an opportunity to go to work under a wage reduction of 12½ per cent. If an insufficient number responds, the mills will be closed for an indefinite period.

Fight to A Finish.

Chicago, July 25.—Determined on a fight to a finish to enforce the demands of the striking butchers, a sympathetic strike of all the union workmen employed in the meat packing industry throughout the country, with the exception of the teamsters, will be declared this morning at 7 o'clock. Last night the indications were that the teamsters will join the other unions on Tuesday in order to bring the packers to terms.

Dundonald at Alexandria.

Alexandria, July 25.—Lord Dundonald arrived here yesterday on the morning express from Ottawa, and was given a right royal Glengarry welcome by his fellow-countrymen from all parts of the county. The Earl was escorted to J. A. MacDonald's, where he was entertained until 11 a.m., when he attended divine service in the Presbyterian Church. During the afternoon he visited many typical Scotch familes. At 6 o'clock he was entertained at dinner by His Lordship Bishop MacDonell. Lord Dundonald attended service in the evening, after which he left on the 8.20 train for Ottawa. Hundreds escorted him to the station, and as the train moved out Piper Dewart struck up the Highland lament.

Welsh Not Dead.

Belleville, July 25.—William Walsh, who was reported killed by miners at Craigmount, is not dead, but is getting better in a Renfrew hospital. Three of his assailants have been committed for trial at the next assizes.

Falconio to Manilla.

Rome July 25.—The Giornal ed'Italia says that it is likely that Mgr. Falconio, the apostolic delegates in the United States, will be transferred to Manila to replace the late Mgr. Guidi.

THE MONTREAL ITALIANS.

Why So Many of the Sons of Sunny Italy Went There.

Montreal, July 25.—Judge Winchester appears to have got at the bottom of the work of the men who induced so many Italians to pour into this city when there was no work for them to do. Labor Agent Antonio Cordasco admitted Saturday evening that 3,910 laborers had applied to him for work, and that he had collected $5,350 from the lot, some paying $1 and others $3. It also came out that Cordasco owned a paper called Courrier del Canade, and that it was circulated in Italy and Italian centres in the United States. Then Mr. Cordasco admitted having received a further sum of $1,200 between the 8th and the 12th of July, but he told the judge he was ready to pay it back.

NUMBER SHOT IN RIOT.

Vigilance Committee Aroused and Threats of Lynching Made.

Bonesteel, S.D., July 25.—Riot and disorder were again in evidence yesterday, at least four citizens having been shot and seriously wounded. A number of grafters also were wounded. The vigilance committee is thoroughly aroused and there are threats of lynching as the most effective punishment to be meted out to offenders.

There are reports of a pitched battle at a sodhouse east of the town, in which a dozen or fifteen shots were exchanged.

About 40 men arrested Saturday and Saturday night were convicted yesterday and will be deported.

Peace at Lhasa.

Nagartse, Thibet, July 25.—The Thibetan peace delegates met the British mission and professed willingness to arrange peace if the mission would return to Gyangtse. Col. Younghusband replied that he could only make peace at Lhassa, but that he was willing to discuss terms while proceeding there.

Burglars at Brockville.

Brockville, July 25.—Burglars entered A. C. Millar's drug store Friday night, between 9 and 12 o'clock, and carried off about $175 in cash.

Yale and Harvard Won.

London, July 25.—Taking first honors in six out of nine events on the card, Yale and Harvard defeated Oxford and Cambridge Saturday afternoon and won the rubber in the athletic contest between the principal universities of America and England, which began in 1899.

Kept Poor by Doctor's Bills.

Many a family is kept poor by doctors' bills when just as good and oftentimes better results could be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which sell at 25 cents a box of twenty-five doses. As one pill a day is the most frequent dose under any circumstances there is no treatment obtainable which costs so little, and at the same time none which brings about such excellent results in derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

MORE BOQUETS FOR CANADA.

What They Think of Us in the United States.

The New York Tribune is greatly impressed by the crop reports of the Canadian Northwest, and in the following glowing words tells its readers what this great country will yet be. It says:—

"Canada's wheat crop this year promises to exceed that of 1903 by about 30,000,000 bushels. This is a big increase, and with no abatement likel, in succeeding years, it is easy to be seen what a formidable wheat producing and exporting competition the great Northwest has become and is becoming. It could now, if need were, feed the Mother Country all by itself, leaving the United States out of the question, though it is not likely to be drawn on to that exclusive extent. But the territory stands for one of the greatest grain-producing in the whole history of the whole world, its edges hardly searched yet, and it will have its share in determining the course of empire and development as the years and centuries go on, tigg its background of production is old as Egypt's, and its horn of abundance filled and emtied with an equally continuing regularity."

The New York Post thinks this is a lucky year for Canada. The wheat crop of the United States does not promise well. Rain has damaged it in Kansas; there are similar reports fom the Red River Valley, and President Hill, of the Great Northern, estimates the crop at 600,000,000 bushels, as against 637,000,000 last year. It says:—

The news from Russia is unmistakably bad; the fear of a wheat famine is becoming more acute. The Roumanian crop is in poor shape, and a heavy increase in the Austro-Hungarian yield is now predicted. But the crop in Manitoba and the Canadian Northwest is expected to exceed all records; at least 77,000,000 bushels are predicted for Western Canada this year, and as high as 87,500,000 bushels may possibly be reached. In 1900 that region produced only 20,000,000 bushels. This year 3,500,000 acres are under cultivation, but it is reported that 171,000,000 acres are suitable for wheat. While our Republican politicians affect an air of condescension towars our northern neighbor, that lusty infant gives increasing promise of attaining proportions that will some day make us rub our eyes.

In another leading American newspaper, the New York Herald, a correspondent recognises the fact that anxiety over reciprocal trade has been transferred from this to the other side of the boundary, and takes Senator Lodge to task for his attitude towards Canada. This writer says, among other things:—

There is a deal of talk going on at present among Democrats and Republicans regarding reciprocity with Canada, and the talk seems to be all on this side of the border. I know something of Canada, having many friends and relatives there, but but I never hear that the Canadians are holding out their hands crying like little children, for good old Uncle Sam to take them in his arms.

There was a time when reciprocity would have been welcomed, and advances to that effect were made, but were rejected by the influence of Senator Lodge, who on several occasions has shown antagoniam to Canada. He has committed many errors, historical and political, but his continued opposition to reciprocity and his evident antipathy to everything Canadian is the gravest of all his errors. Canada can snap her fingers at him now. She is the gem colony of the British Empire, her maple leaf is flourishing as it never flourished before, and her sturdy little beaver is burrowing at a tremendous rate and saying nothing. He doesn't scream like the bold eagle, bu he does a lot of tunnelling and scratching.

Perhaps Senator Lodge is hugging the delusion that some day in the near futore there will be an Emperor Theodore I. of America with a certain Lord Lodge as Prime Minister and chief adviser to his imperial majesty, and who can say what "benefficent things would be planned for Canada!—Canadian Trade Review.

KAWARTHA LAKES INVITE VISITROS

ARE A FAVORITE RESORT FOR HOME AND FOREIGN HOLIDAY MAKE.

Large Parties From the United States and Elsewhere—Their Natural Beauties and Advantages—Good Sport for Fishermen.

Bobcaygeon, July 23—Among the most celebrated resorts of the continent must be named the Kawartha Lakes. The many lakes are connected with small streams which form a continuous water communication of over 60 miles. Bobcaygeon is the hub of the lakes, and it would be difficult to choose a spot more suited to the requisites of tent and cottage life.

A brisk run of business is being done between Bobcaygeon and Lakefield, the steamers Ogemah and Empress carrying large crowds to the various points. The two boats are working together with the utmost regularity, and besides the local traffic the through trade, and the Peterborough round the loop run, is attracting a numerous patronage by townspeople who want a day of variety, pleasure and health.

Tourists all along the lakes are flocking to the various resorts, all of them having their own peculiar popularity. Chemong Park is alive with a jolly lot of Torontonians and American people. Buckhorn has its full quota of guests, who are revelling in nature and berries. At Burleigh Falls the Messrs D'Arcy have their much-enlarged hotel fully taxed all the time and the popularity of the Park Hotel hostelry increases with its capacity. Camps and cottages dot the lake shores, and the woods now are resounding with the merry laughter of holiday folk enjoying life as it should be enjoyed.

The annual Chemong Park regatta takes place on August 6th.

TORONTONIANS THERE

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hodgetts, Miss Bertha G. Hodgetts, Master Arthur W. Hodgetts, Miss J. Hamilton, Dr. C. J. Copp, all of Toronto, are enjoying the fishing at Bobcaygeon, Kawartha Lakes.

Miss Gertrude Edwards, of "Rosstella," Birch ave., Toronto, is the charming guest of Mrs. W. T. C. Boyd, at Bobcaygeon.

Mrs. F. C. Greer and Master Kenneth Greer, of Toronto, are visiting Mrs. Hurchmer, her mother, at Bobcaygeon, the hub of the Kawartha Lakes.

Dr. and Mrs. T. McGill, of Toronto, are among the many guests at the Hotel Royal. Mrs. McGill landed a 22-lb maskinonge on Tuesday, besides two bass that weighed 3 1-2 lbs each.

A very fine touring automobile was in town for a few days. A party of Americans were enjoying a touring holiday. The roads, they say, are unsurpassed.

The following are among the many guests registered at the Hotel Royal, Bobcaygeon: W. A. Gourlay, D. M. Henderson, A. Carson, A. S. Hamilton, J. D. Roberts, J. A. Wilkinson and wife, P. J. Rooney, all of Toronto; W. Curry, Miss McCaw, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Puley, of Buffalo; T. H. Synder, A. A. Hess, H. E. Hess, E. H. Frank, of Massellon, O., and of Buffalo; C. A. Klump, C. Kershaw, F. H. Belts, Cleveland, Ohio; Samuel E. Bell, Smethport, Pa.; P. V. Cusuck, B. H. Wilson, Buffalo; E. F. Butler, Toronto; Dr. and Mrs. McGill and Master Eric McGill, Toronto; Edgar Knapp, B. Graves, E. L. Downey, George F. Thompson, Middleport, N.Y.; Dr. Graham and boy, Toronto; L. W. Smith and son, Toronto; H. C. Bedlington and wife, Toronto; S. J. Edmonson, Hamilton; A. N. McIntosh, Toronto; J. R. Church and Robt. Gemmell, Toronto; E. W. Burton, Rochester, N.Y., Frank Parkes, Toronto; F. C. Babcock, C. S. Snatt, Medina, N.Y.; B. Larzelere, Zanesville, Ohio; N. H. Graff, Pittsburg, Pa.; E. C. Keans, Henry Rockel, Zanesville, Ohio.

Mrs. Hunter, of Toronto, and family arrived here Wednesday. They were conveyed to the old Camp Grounds, Port Harvey, Pigeon Lake, by the steamer Pearl.

DR. RIGGS' PARTY.

Dr. Charles Riggs and party, of Toronto, are having a very jolly time with his gasoline yacht, and is ready for a brush at all times with any other yacht. She is a good one, and gets through the water very fast. The doctor is having capital sport fishing, the yacht being a great convenience in getting about the lakes. The party had three maskinonge on their lines at one time, and the excitement at such a time ran high.

MAY GET C. P. R. CONNECTION.

Sturgeon Point is in full bloom now, and besides the regular Lindsay colony, there are a number of tourists, American and otherwise. There is to be a grand concert given in aid of the Ross Hospital soon, and this will no doubt be well patronized. A regular boat connection with the C.P.R. at Emily Creek or Nasmith's, opposite the point, is being talked of. It would be convenient for Toronto peopel, and, depending on the train service, it might be convenient for Lindsayiotes.

The C. P. R. track is now completed to Bobcaygeon, and we are now awaiting the official opening. A gala day it will be for the Bobcaygeon and Lindsay people.

NEW COTTAGE AT SPRINGBANK.

Mr. Charles T. Harbaugh, of Sewickley, Pa., has plans out for a handsome cabin at Springbank, Pigeon Lake. It is somewhat of the Bungalow style, one large room called the living room in the first floor, 18 x 32; back of this is a middle hall dividing the kitchen, bedrooms, and pantry, etc. Verandahs 14 ft. wide are in front and on each side of the building. The stairway is of a novel design, and extends from the first to the second storey. In the corner of the living room is a very large stone chimney with a huge open fireplace. There are four large bedrooms on the second floor. Contractors are now making bids on it, and the work will soon be under way. Mr. Harbaugh's family are expected here soon, and will occupy tents until the cottage is finished.

AT EUREKA POINT.

Mr. R. E. (Bob) Moody, the popular Rear-Commodore of the Toronto Canoe Club, and a couple of his clubmates spent a jolly day at Mr. Mungo Nasmith's cottage, Eureka Point, Sturgeon Lake, last week.

A new dinghy, the Lareta, has arrived at Eureka Point, and in a trial spin made a good showing against Mr. Nasmith's lake champion, May D. With good handling, Lareta stands a fine chance for honors on Sturgeon Lake.

Mr. Charles B. and George (Skipper) Nasmith, of this popular Torontonian Point, spent Sunday at their pretty cottage. Mr. Murray, of California, a mining inspector, accompanied them.

Miss May Stockwell, soprano soloist of Mr. A. S. Vogt's famous Jarvis Street Baptist church choir, Toronto, will be the guest of Miss Eleanor Love this week at Eureka.

Mr. Bert Moyler is also expected to come by the Saturday night boat.

Mr. Percy H. Love and his friend, Mr. Charles R. Capon, of Toronto, are spending their vacation at Eureka Point, Sturgeon Lake. They are seeking trouble in the dinghy line.

The fishing has been very good this season, and several fine catches have been made.

A party of Toronto Canoe Club members arrived in camp Saturday night. The point was prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns in honor of their arrival.

The flag station here will be a great convenience. Many of the Toronto residents who own launches will travel by C.P.R. to this place, and from here to their respective summer homes.—Toronto Star.

HORSE BREEDING.

Government Aid—An Outline of the Irish System.

In the year 1900 the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland devised a scheme for encouraging improvement in the breed of live stock, particularly of horses and cattle, in that country. An outline of the Irish system may be of interest to Canadian horsemen, who have for some time been discussing the problem of obtaining for service throughout the country a sufficient number of sound, well-bred stallions of the most profitable types.

General Objects.—In formulating their live stock schemes, the Department's main object was to promote improvement in the breeds of the country by encouraging private enterprise in the breeding of pure-bred animals, and in the introduction of new sires, and to do this in such a way that the accompanying advantages should be principally secured for the smaller farmers. Since interests of national importance were at stake—such, for example, as the maintenance of the high reputation of Irish horses, the improvement of the feeding qualities of the store cattle, and the milking properties of dairy cows—and as these interests required that the stock of the country should be considered as a whole, and should not, in public schemes for its improvement, be attached by the introduction of strains likely to have injurious general effects on the national breeds, it was necessary that these schemes should contain certain principles of uniform application to the whole country. It was, therefore, necessary that the live stock schemes should emanate from the central authority, while, in particulars other than their national features, they might be modified in accordance with local opinions and circumstances. In order to have the assistance of the most representative expert opinion in Ireland in the formation of these schemes, the Government appointed two special advisory committees—one for horses, and the other for cattle, sheep and swine.

Horse Breeding Scheme.—The horse breeding scheme as outlined by the advisory committee and approved by the Agricultural Board, provided for the registration of suitable and sound thoroughbred and agricultural sires, and a selection of a number of the best breed mares in each county to be served by these sires. The owner of a registered stallion is entitled, under the scheme, to a fee of £3 for each selected mare put to his stallion. The mares selected were the property of persons deriving their means of living from farming, whose valuation did not exceed in the poorer counties £150, and in the more wealthy counties £200.

The first year 410 stallions were offered for registration, of which 298 were thoroughbred, and 112 of the agricultural type. From the first it was deemed advisable to spare no pains in making searching examination of the stallions offered for registration, and, accordingly, before any of the stallions offered under the scheme were accepted, the Department's inspectors had to certify, (1) as to the suitability, and (2) as to the soundness of the animal. A register was published in March, 1901, which contained the names and pedigrees of 97 thoroughbred and 31 agricultural stallions that had been accepted. Upwards of 1600 free nomination tickets of £3 each, were offered at 150 shows of mares held during March and April, and nearly 1700 of these tickets were issued.

In addition to subsidising stallions by means of £3 nominations to mares, the Department offered in a few counties, where there was an insufficient number of stallions for the purposes of the scheme, premiums varying from £50 to £100.

Loans for the Purchase of Stallions.—In order to encourage farmers of small means to provide themselves with a registered stallion, a sum of money was alloted by the Department for the purpose of granting loans for the purchase of approved sires. The money was lent at 2 1-2 per cent. interest, payable in five annual instalments. It was a condition precedent to these loans that the animal should be insured for its full market value.

Premiums for Female Stock.—As a further means of encouraging improvement in stock breeding, the Department adopted the principle of awarding premiums and prizes to female stock. The advisory committee on horse breeding pointed out that that industry in Ireland is, to a great extent, injured by young mares being sold out of the country, thus leaving only second class animals for breeding purposes, and the Department adopted their recommendation that the prizes and premiums should be mainly confined to young mares, from two to six years old, served by a registered sire, in the hope that the farmers would thereby be induced to retain these mares.

the Japanese first army is being largely reinforced by veterans from the reserves.

The correspondent of The Standard with the Japanese army, under date of July 25, says:

"It is difficult to understand the intentions of the Russians. Kuropatkin is evidently bent on retreat northward, yet he lingers in the south, attracted apparently by Port Arthur."

The correspondent of The Daily Chronicle, in a despatch dated at Motien Pass, July 25, regards Gen. Kuropatkin as outmanoeuvred and anxious to abandon Liaoyang without fighting, but also reluctant to retire while Port Arthur remains uncaptured.

Russians Unable to Oppose Jap Advance.

London, July 25.—The Daily Chronicle's Yinkow correspondent reports that there was heavy fighting Saturday and Sunday in the neighborhood of Tatcheskiu with Gen. Stakelberg's force, consisting of twenty battalions of infantry, a brigade of artillery and a division of Cossacks, and that the Russians appeared to be drawing the cordon tighter around the Japanese positions.

The correspondent of The Times with Gen. Kuroki's army says: "Chinese report that Gen. Kuropatkin, with 40,000 troops, is at Liaoyang, while his second in command with many men is still at Haicheng. I still adhere to the opinion that the Russians are not able to seriously oppose the Japanese advance."

Battle Fought Saturday.

Newchwang, July 25.—A battle was fought Saturday near Tatchekiao, attended, it is believed with heavy losses. The progress of the battle was watched by many people in Newchwang from the roofs of the houses. The day was clear and the smoke of the guns could be plainly seen.

News at Tientsin.

Tientsin, July 25.—News has reached here that a battle is raging outside of Newchwang. The fighting can be seen from the housetops. In the engagement of Saturday, the Russian loss is reported to have been 800. The Japanese are slowly nearing Newchwang. Great excitement prevailed in that city during Friday's and Saturday's fight.

Another report from Newchwang states that Saturday's battle was at Tathsulthang, six miles distant, and that the Japanese were successful. Many Chinese refugees arriving at Newchwang have reported that nine Japanese gunboats from Port Arthur have arrived at Tahtingshan.

Japs Lost 280.

Chicago, July 25.—A special cablegram to The Daily News from Nagasaki, Japan, says: Despatches from Omura state that the strong Russian position at Shimoucheu, ten miles east of Liaoyang, was captured by the Japanese troops July 19. The Mikado's men lost 280 in the attack.

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL.

Cabinet Will Ask For An Appropriation to Begin the Work.

Ottawa, July 25.—The Cabinet worked overtime on Saturday fixing up the supplementary estimates. These were practically ready for submission to the House last week, but at the last moment, almost, it was decided to ask an appropriation for the commencement of work on the Georgian Bay Canal. The Prime Minister, however, judged it to be well that the Government should have an intimation from the transportation commission as to the advisability of this undertaking, and it was to secure this that the estimates were delayed beyond Friday last. It is understood that this desideratum was furnished on Saturday, and Council sat until late Saturday night re-arranging the estimates so as to include the new canal grant. The policy will probably be announced of making a commencement at the Georgian Bay outlet and deepening the French River and eastern end of Lake Nipissing so as to give a deep water terminus at North Bay. The work could be finished in about three years, and would cost a couple of millions. Preliminary surveys for this work are on file in the Public Works Department.

THEIR ANNUAL EXCURSION.

What promises to be the most popular trip on Civic Holiday is St. Peter's Court Catholic Order of Foresters Excursion to Orillia per special train. Tickets $1.15 and 60c. Good to return the next day. Train leaves G.T.R. station at nine o'clock. Tickets may be procured at Lane & Lane's Furniture Store and members of committee.

RUSSIANS ENTIRELY ROUTED

Japanese Are Now Aiming to Go Into Newchwang.

RUSSIANS LOST OVER 400

Battle on Sunday Near Tatchekiao Will Drive the Russians to Liaoyang --Heavy Losses on Both Sides-- 14 Hours' Battle.

London, July 26.—Cabling under date of July 26, The Daily Mail's Newchwang correspondent describes a fourteen-hours' desperate battle with heavy losses on both sides, and which resulted in the Russian position at Tatchekiao being rendered untenable, by reason of which the Russians will be compelled to retreat towards Haicheng.

"The battle began at 6 o'clock in the morning," the correspondent says, "the Russians resuming the attack on the Japanese position on the heights east of Tatchekiao. After a few hours the Japanese left flank, from Taping Mountain, captured the Village of Tanghudituen, compelling the Russians to retreat to Tienghuaiteun, six miles from their base.

"The Russians, now reinforced, maintained the position until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when the Japanese right flank made a sudden appearance on the hills south of Tatchekiao, and by a tremendous fire forced the Russians to retreat.

"The Japanese firing line extended fifteen miles.

"After two more hours of an incessant storm of shot and shell they swept the last hill and the plain clear of Russians."

The Russians Routed.

Paris, July 26.—A despatch to The Matin from Newchwang says that heavy firing continued all day long on July 24. The battle lasted for sixteen hours. The Russians were driven back on the east side, and were reported to be utterly routed on the north. The despatch says that the Russians evacuated Newchwang, of which the Japanese will probably take possession on July 26.

Battle on Sunday.

Newchwang, July 26.—A battle took place Sunday east of Tatchekiao, which resulted in the Russians being driven back, and it is believed they will have to retire to Liaoyang. The battle lasted all day.

Russians Get Out.

Washington, July 26.—Minister Conger, at Pekin, has cabled the State Department under yesterday's date that he has been informed that the Russians yesterday evacuated Newchwang.

Japs Not in Yet.

Tientsin, July 26.—Information has been received here to the effect that the Japanese have not entered Newchwang. The Russian civil administration departed Sunday night, and the destruction of Russian Government property began yesterday morning at the instance of the administration. The fighting reported Sunday took place between Newchwang and Tatchekiao, and Japanese troops from Kaichou were engaged. No engagement has taken place at Tachekiao.

Russians Lost 400.

London, July 26.—A despatch to a news agency from Liaoyang reports heavy artillery fighting there all Sunday. The Russian casualties, it is alleged, were thought not to exceed 400, while the Japanese are said to have lost more men. The Japanese, who were attacking the "southern detachment," according to the despatch, were forced to retire precipitately, leaving their dead and wounded on the field. The despatch lacks convincing details and names of places.

Japs Protest.

St. Petersburg, July 26.—It is reported that Japan officially protested to the Russian Government against violations of the rules of war on eleven counts, viz.:

Several Russian battalions hoisting the white flag at the battle of Vafangowand, inducing the Japanese to cease firing.

Abuse of the Red Cross flag, stabbing, shooting and mutilating the wounded, etc., as contained in Gen. Oku's report, already published.

The protest was presented by the United States, which, however, made it clear that the United States did not share in the protest, but acted only as the medium for its transmission, and, as such, would agree to forward any reply Russia cared to make.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

Vladivostock Squadron First Transferred the European Passengers and the Crew—Crew Is at Yokohama.

Tokio, July 26.—The British steamer Chinan has arrived at Yokohama with the crew of the British steamer Knight Commander, which was sunk by the Russian Vladivostock squadron off Izu. The Knight Commander's cargo was a general one. Her European passengers were detained by the Russians and her crew of 21 were transferred to the Chinan, which also reports that the Russians sank two Japanese schooners.

The Vladivostock squadron also captured a German vessel believed to be the Arabia, with 30,000 tons of flour, and an unknown British steamer. The two vessels were sent to Vladivostock in charge of prize crews. The American Trading Company are the agents here for the Knight Commander.

Railway Material Contraband.

London, July 26.—It is pointed out in shipping circles at Liverpool that in Russia's contention that railroad material is contraband of war, the presence of bridge work for Japan among her cargo accounts for the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander. Her crew numbered 68, including natives. She was insured against war risks.

Ardova Released.

Suez, July 26.—The British steamer Ardova, which, after being fired at by the Russian volunteer fleet steamer Smolensk, was seized by that vessel, has arrived here. She is flying the Russian naval flag and has a prize crew on board. It is declared her destination is a Russian port. The British cruiser Venus is anchored close to the captured steamer.

The British steamer Ardova, which was seized by the Russian volunteer fleet steamer Smolensk, has been released and her prize crew has been landed.

Squadron Sighted.

Tokio, July 26.—The Russian Vladivostock squadron was seen to the eastward of Kasuza Province at two p.m. yesterday. It was steaming to the east. Kasuza Province is on the east side of Tokio Bay. Kataura lies almost due east of Tokio.

Stopped a German.

Berlin, July 26.—The German steamer Lisbon of the Oldenburg-Portugal Line, has been stopped and searched by a Russian warship in the Gulf of Finland. She was then released.

Vigilant British Ship.

Constantinople, July 26.—Vessels arriving here report that a British warship is patrolling off Cape Helas, 15 miles south of the Dardanelles. She is using her searchlights, with the supposed view of intercepting any British ships which may have been captured by the Russian volunteer fleet steamers, if they attempt to pass the Dardanelles.

Called Home.

St. Petersburg, July 26.—The Associated Press is informed that the Russian volunteer fleet steamers Smolensk and St. Petersburg have already been ordered home, and that instructions for them to return have been cabled. The assurances given Great Britain on this point are declared to be satisfactory.

BRITAIN URGED TO ACT.

To What Purpose Does Britain Maintain a Large Navy.

London, July 26.—Answering half a dozen questions based on the seizure of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Malacca and other ships by Russian volunteer fleet steamers, Premier Balfour in the House of Commons yesterday, after referring to the diverse character of the questions, went on to say:

"The difficulties, I may say great difficulties, I do not wish to minimize them, arising from these captures deal with a problem which has given and is still giving the Government great anxiety, but of which I may say the signs portend a favorable issue. More than that, I think it would be inexpedient to say."

Situation Still Grave.

The British Cabinet will meet again to-day to consider the case of the steamer Knight Commander and

TUESDAY, JULY 26, 1904.

WHAT IS THEIR POLICY?

At the Coronation Conference of Colonial Premiers and other Ministers, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the other representatives of Canada took a new departure in regard to preferential commerce. Before then they had taken the position that the preference accorded by us to British goods was in the nature of a favor, not a bargain and that we asked nothing in return. At the Conference Sir Wilfrid Laurier distinctly abandoned that policy and asked for a reciprocal preference. He went further than this for he undertook to recommend that if the United Kingdom accorded us a preference, Canada should increase the advantage already given to British commerce, suggesting various methods by which this might be accomplished. There was also something very like a threat or at least a warning that if the British authorities did not thus respond to our advances we might reconsider our policy in this matter.

Has the Laurier Administration adopted a different policy since then? We are aware that they have curtailed the British preference on woollen goods, but we hardly regarded that as an avowal of a change of policy, looking upon it rather as a fresh instance of their unfortunate habit of muddling the tariff, and making empirical alterations here and there without any consistent plan or any apparent knowledge of the effect of their pottering procedure.

The House is now in session, and if the Government has resolved upon a change of policy they should announce it in a constitutional manner to the representatives of the people. Instead of this we have, as has now become so common, a hint, indeed more than a hint of such a change through the unconstitutional and unsatisfactory channel of an intimation from a member of the Administration to a press favorite. Both the House and the people have a right to know from Sir Wilfrid Laurier whether the declaration by the Solicitor General against any reciprocal preference is the new policy adopted by the Ministry. Till Mr. Lemieux is disavowed, Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues are responsible for his utterances and he must be taken as voicing the views of the Ministry as a whole. It is not a matter that can be considered an open question. If Mr. Lemieux is really speaking for the Administration he is making a very serious announcement in an irregular and unconstitutional manner. If he is speaking merely for himself and without accord with the Ministry, there should certainly be an official disavowal, and if necessary a demand for his resignation.

His further expression of opinion in the nature of a threat that Imperial action in this matter may lead to Canada severing the tie with the Empire is even more portentous, but for obvious reasons we do not care even to discuss it till we have heard from Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Cabinet.

The Pioneer, the Ross-Temperance organ, is still working for its double barrelled cause, Ross being the right barrel. It says That the temperance men outnumber the liquor party. Is that why they have banded with the liquor men to keep Mr. Ross in office, and are still pursuing the same tactics?

According to the Ottawa Free Press it is "a malicious and diabolical invention," that Mr. Fitzpatrick was about to accept the solicitorship of the G. T. P. after his work for it in the House. Yet the Minister of Justice perpetrated this "diabolical" act when he placed Mr. Fraser of Guysborough on the Bench to reward his unscrupulous partisan assistance in putting through this graft.

Mr. Monet is withdrawing from Parliament because he says he could not run without aid from the party campaign fund and could not remain independent if he took it. As he is the only Ministerialist who is taking this step, we may safely conclude that all the rest of them are selling their independence for a share of the corruption fund, obtained from grafters enriched at the expense of the people.

Commenting upon the charge of inciting racial prejudice made against Lord Dundonald by the agents and allies of the Laurier administration in England the Liberal Montreal Witness says:—

"If there is any race question in the episode it is largely due to the insinuendoes of Sir Frederick Borden, for which we do not believe there was any sort of foundation. There is nothing so easily appealed to as race feeling, whether French or Scotch, and when the appeal is made to the prejudice of any man or cause nothing is more ignoble."

The Vankleek Hill Review says:—

"If this C. F. J. had published all the editorials received upon this Dundonald trouble received from the department of agriculture at Ottawa we would have appeared just as foolish before sensible thinking people as do the pap-fed Montreal Herald and Toronto Globe."

What is this? Is it from Mr. Fisher that come the editorial charges going the rounds of the Ministerial Press that Lord Dundonald is a druckard, a liar, a poor soldier, and insubordinate to the Minister of Agriculture for protesting against his corruption, his inciting to mutiny and his forgery over the signature of the General?

Lord Dundonald's report was not suppressed; the Kingston Whig says, but was withheld because it contained information which the Minister of Militia did not feel inclined to give out. The Minister in fact preferred to adopt some of the recommendations and then through his hireling organs make the dishonest false pretence that they were his own ideas. Some of the changes were made only on paper, so that we have a militia force, with only a rifle for every other man and only enough ammunition for this half to carry personally on active service. His dealing with the suppressed report was as dishonest as his disgraceful falsehood that it was marked private. He is about as honest as his murderous emergency rations.

About Your Complexion

A yellow, muddy complexion tells of derangements of the liver, and indicates the presence of bile poison in the blood. Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills set the liver and kidneys in action, purify the blood, cleanse the system, and assure a healthy glow to the complexion. As a family medicine Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are of inestimable value.

TEXTILES FROM WOOD PULP.

A New Process for Making Silk From Timber.

Artificial silk made from pulp is now a staple on the market, and the demand is greater than the supply, according to the statements of those who are engaged in the business.

We are now to have an extension of the field of the pulp maker, and by means of recent discoveries and improvements practically the whole range of textile work is opened to him as a market for the disposal of his raw material. Recently we printed in The Paper Trade Journal a somewhat lengthy notice of a book written by Professor Pfugl, of Riga, Russia, in which that writer reviews the work that has been done in the way of making pulp wood available for textile work. He gave it as his opinion that Kron had outstripped his fellow workers in the same field and had made progress sufficient to demonstrate that the yarn for any kind of textile could be spun directly from moist pulp wood, an advantage which was not possessed by the methods of other inventors. It is claimed that by Kron's method there is produced not only a stronger yarn but that the output is greater.

Kron calls his product silvalin, and there has just been incorporated in this country the American Silvalin Company, formed for the purpose of acquiring the option on the American rights under the Kron patents. The option is held at $40,000, while the full American rights under the patents are held at $2,000,000, the option price, of course, being deducted from the purchase price when the transaction is closed.

The patents are regarded, as may be judged from the asking price, as very valuable and as being the foundation upon which may be built the industry of manufacturing textiles from pulp wood. The possibilities are large, and time alone can show whether they will be realized. — The Paper Trade Journal

RIOTS IN IRELAND.

Orangemen and Catholics Clash at Armagh Cathedral Opening.

Armagh, Ireland, July 26.—An enormous concourse from all parts of Ireland was present Sunday at the ceremony of the re-opening of Armagh Cathedral after four year's work of re-decoration, which included the covering of the entire walls with mosaic pictures. Cardinal Vannutelli as the legates of Pope Pius and many Irish and foreign prelates; the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, John Redmond, John Dillon, Timothy Healy, and other prominent persons were present. Some rioting of Orangemen and Catholics followed the ceremonies. Shots were fired and the police were stoned.

Stopped After First Round.

Buffalo, July 26.—The fight between Carley Supples and Kid Fredericks at the International Athletic Club, Fort Erie, last night, was stopped after the first round by Provincial Detective Greer, representing the Canadian Attorney-General's office and Chief of Police Griffin of Fort Erie. Both officers claimed the bout was not a boxing contest, but was developing into a prize fight. Supples had the better of the round all through and got the decision. The attendance was large.

Short $900 in Accounts.

Stratford, July 26.—A few days ago H. Milton Moir, agent of the C. P. R. and Dominion Express Company at St. Mary's, was arrested on a charge of embezzlement laid by the latter company. He had been found to be $900 short in his accounts. The preliminary hearing took place on Friday before two St. Mary's justices of the peace. The prisoner was sent up for trial. He is now out on bail.

THE GREGORY INQUEST.

Local View of the Second Dragoons Case—A Sham Enquiry.

The Government, it appears, intends holding an inquiry into circumstances connected with the resignation of Lieut.-Col. Gregory from the command of the 2nd Dragoons. This is quite right on the face of it; but the pity of it is that we cannot rely upon the good faith of the Government in this or in any matter where the conduct of their partizans or heelers comes into the question. In the Gregory case the partizan influence of Mr. German comes very distinctly into play. If it is intended to give the inquiry the semblance of honesty it will be well to examine those who were present and heard Mr. German's speech in the New Murray in this city on the occasion of the annual dinner of the Dragoons held last winter.

How, with regard to the inquiry itself, the first question is, by whom will it be conducted? The answer will in all probability be, by some Lieutenant-Colonels of the Militia, and these Lieutenant-Colonels of the Militia will, in civil life be Grit lawyers, or lawyers with Grit expectations. Lieut.-Col. Gregory is now free from all responsibility of military Grit etiquette, and he ought, in all fairness, to publish whatever correspondence he may have in his possession, and likely enough it is the fear that he will do this which has given birth to the inquest which has been heralded with so much ostentation by the Globe.

Col. Otter has denied any partisan feeling, and so far as his denial goes there is no reason why it should not be accepted; but it will take some very unmistakable evidence to prove that he was not seeking to carry out the wishes of the Government in his very persistent pressure to have Major Glasgow's nomination endorsed.

Col. Aylmer has, we believe, spoken strongly about the impropriety of the "Round robin," but perhaps Lord Aylmer would not mind telling us wherein such a proceeding differs from the appeal which he himself once made to the officers of the 33rd to advocate his personal advancement. For our own part, we see nothing alarmingly wrong in either case, and it is folly to make a molehill into a mountain.

An inquiry such as is proposed is by no means satisfactory, and for the simple reason that there is no general right of cross-examination or legal representation allowed, and this so-called Court of Inquiry is probably the most convenient instrument for not inquiring that the wit of man could devise. If Col. Gregory steps into this fly-paper he will deserve all the justice he is likely to get out of it or in it. That's all we need to say at present. St. Catharines Standard.

BETTER IN THE UNITED STATES.

Like the United Kingdom They Set Us an Example.

Just as we are hearing Ministers of the Crown at Ottawa rising in their places at Parliament and expressing their entire approval of a strictly partisan use of government patronage, we find the political parties in the United States taking their stand more and more distinctly in favour of Civil Service reform. The platform adopted by the Democratic convention at St. Louis contains the following clause:

"The Democratic party stands committed to the principles of civil service reform, and we demand their honest, just and impartial enforcement."

The Civil Service law in the United States is a very different one from ours. With us, under the rule of one party, it is hardly worth the while of anyone not belonging to that party, or commanding influence in it, to pass the Civil Service examination, seeing that, when vacancies occur, only those possessing political influence are chosen. In the United States whoever stands highest in the list of passed candidates—the grading being according to points made — has the first call for appointment. At least, in a given case, the two or three names that stand highest on the list are "certified" to the Department requiring an additional clerk, and one or other of them has to be taken—that or none. With us a candidate who had only got on the list by the skin of his teeth would be taken in preference to one who had made 100 per cent., if he had the greater political pull. This is the system which an ex-Vice Chancellor of Toronto University, with the approval of his colleagues, devotes his ingenuity and his eloquence to defending. If these are the fruits of culture, culture had better go and hide itself.—Montreal Star.

OUR SPECIAL OTTAWA LETTER

Interesting Notes and Comments From the Dominion Capital

THE WEEK IN PARLIAMENT

Undesirable Immigration — The Able General Must Go, the Party Healer Remains—Rudolph Lemieux, the Critic—Sifton Squanders Our Assets—The Grafters in Their Glory—United States Engineers.

THE WEEK IN PARLIAMENT.

Mr. Sifton's estimates were on the carpet in Parliament during the week. It was shown that the Minister had permitted the illegal transfer of 150,000 acres of public lands to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, out of which thousands of dollars have been made by the concessionaries. Mr. Sifton professed ignorance of the whole transaction, showing how badly his department is managed.

Mr. Sifton's immigration policy was also exposed. It has resulted in the immigration of many undesirable settlers, who are a menace to the health of the country and the cause of much crime.

The action of Hon. R. Lemieux in discussing the preferential tariff in England and condemning the policy of Mr. Chamberlain at a meeting violently partisan in its complexion were criticised. So also were the denunciations of Lord Dundonald by Mr. Lemieux and Chief Justice Taschereau. The Government made a half-hearted apology for their henchmen.

A vote of censure on Mr. Fisher was moved, regretting his course in publishing statistics in his annual report which the report of the Auditor General shows were false. Mr. Fisher represented that the experimental farms had cost the country $84,128 during the fiscal year 1903. The Auditor General places the cost at $103,273, or a difference of $19,145 against Mr. Fisher.

Another vote of censure was directed against the Government for the scandalous manner in which they allow cheese to be weighed at Montreal, to the disadvantage of the farmer. The motion was defeated by the reduced majority of 29, the vote standing 75 to 46.

A motion by the opposition to increase the protection on tobacco, and further encourage that industry was defeated on a party vote division by a majority of 31.

The leader of the opposition made a strong plea for the protection of the Atlantic fisheries by the destruction of the dogfish pest.

LORD DUNDONALD TO LEAVE.

Lord Dundonald, the ablest leader the Canadian Militia forces have ever had, is shortly to leave Canada. He goes because he is an honest man and refused to close his eyes to the fact that the money of this country is being squandered for political purposes, under the cloak of the Militia Department. But he has earned the admiration of those in both political parties, who have in their minds the best interests of the country. He has been acclaimed on all sides. He is to receive further tributes from Canadians ere he bids "good-bye" to the land, whose sons he led to victory on the hard fought fields of South Africa. In contrast with his treatment is that of his bitter opponent, Hon. Sydney Fisher. Canada has not taken any particular pains to show its appreciation of the narrow and bigoted conduct of the Minister of Agriculture. He has reaped little but ridicule. The independent press of the whole of Canada has nothing but words of condemnation for the person who is responsible for the introduction of straight machine politics into our militia. Fisher, the despised of honest men, stands silouetted against the manly, brave and honest Dundonald. Men who admire the qualities abjured by the one, and possessed by the other, will see, that after Dundonald is gone, evenhanded Justice is meted out to Mr. Fisher. The thanks of Canada will be due to the people of Brome, if at the next election, Fisher is numbered among the slain.

ONE OF DUNDONALD'S ENEMIES.

It is just as well to keep the public posted as to the real character of at least one of Lord Dundonald's detractors. The Solicitor General, Hon. Rudolph Lemieux, happens to be in England at the present time. He told the people of the Mother Country that the ties which bind Canada to Great Britain would be weakened. This same Mr. Lemieux has a past. It was he, who, in his first fight for a seat in the Commons, induced his own father to act as a scrutineer in his behalf in the constituency of Gaspe. The father, being a civil servant, did his work under an assumed name. He swore he was somebody else. He committed perjury, and had he gone the way of many perjurers, a term in the penitentiary would have been his portion. He was even addressed by his assumed name by his son, the same Mr. Lemieux, who is engaged in educating the British public along altruistic lines. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, from his place in Parliament, defended the conduct of the Lemieux. The Premier of Canada, too, saw, that the perjurer's position under the Government was improved by many hundred dollars per annum. The real beneficiary of the whole transaction is the Solicitor General, and this suborner of perjury is the man who is now condemning in England the man who relieved Ladysmith. The Liberal party have been unfortunate in the selection of the emissary to blacken Dundonald. A criminal can never hope to down an honest man in the long run.

THE INNOCENTS ABROAD.

If the story told by Hon. Clifford Sifton of the sale of lands to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company is correct, the sooner he and his deputy are retired to a sphere where they can do less harm, the better it will be for Canada. Under the terms of the transfer, the Company agreed to take over 250,000 acres of land at $1 per acre. There was this about it, however, that the company undertook to settle two-fifths of each township before the patents for the land should issue. A year ago, Mr. Sifton expressed the opinion that the company would not be able to live up to its bargain. That meant that they would not be given a title to their holdings. Last December, notwithstanding what the minister had said, patents for 150,000 acres were granted. The company had not met the terms imposed on it by the Government. In some mysterious way, however, they were able to land the goods. In the Commons, the minister was unable to say how the deal was pushed through. His deputy was just as ignorant as he. Were these gentlemen to concern themselves with a mere matter of 150,000 acres of public lands? Perish the thought! Mr. Sifton is making money these days and perhaps he may not be long in politics. Before he came to Ottawa he was encumbered with embarassing judgments. These have disappeared in the bracing atmosphere to be found at the Capital, and to expect Mr. Sifton to pause in his money making, long enough to look after a trifle like 150,000 acres of land, is asking too much. But there is this about it that the deal seems a little mysterious and both gentlemen if they have not time to keep an eye on public property should hand over the responsibility to those who are not so deeply engaged with other matters.

THOUSANDS FOR THE FAITHFUL.

These are great days at Ottawa for the grafters. They are to be seen in clouds about Parliament Hill and if they are on to the ropes there is no need of their leaving without a nice fat wad. Take the case of the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company. One of its directors, Mr. Adamson, is the Liberal candidate in Humbolt. Another party who is alleged to be closely connected with the company, Mr. Turriff, is running in a second Western riding. That brings the matter pretty nearly home to the Liberal ranks. What did the company get? For $1 an acre they were given the privilege of purchasing 250,000 acres of land along the line of the Long Lake and Quepelle Railway. Moreover, they were authorized to pay for it in scrip, which is purchased from the half-breeds at ridiculously low prices and does not represent dollar for dollar. They paid $98,000 in this currency. The lands purchased are today worth anywhere from $5 to $10 an acre and at the lower figure the company has made a cool million. At $10 an acre they stand to gather in $2,250,000, which could have remained in the pockets of the people of Canada, had the persons so solicitous in securing the concessions not been of the Sifton-Liberal-candidate type. It is well to know these things, in the days when the Auditor General is being driven from office by a Government willing to allow private parties with a pull to exploit the treasury for such amount. This case should be treasured up in the minds of all who believe in Canada, and not the man who knows the ropes at Ottawa.

FOREIGNERS HAD TO GO.

In answer to a question in the House of Commons Sir William Mulock announced that the following engineers employed on the Grand Trunk Pacific are to be deported as aliens:

Cassius C. Van Aradol, division engineer.
Edward R. McNeill, district engineer.
Walter Earl Colladay, assistant engineer.
Thomas C. Taylor, assistant engineer.
Charles F. Gailor, assistant engineer.
James H. Bacon, harbor engineer.
Edward McD. Mellen, chief clerk.
Walter M. Anderson, topographer.
Peter Talbot, topographer.
Herbert Mark Goodman, draftsman.
Sherman Hurd Mason, draftsman.
Amos A. Meador, draftsman.
John C. Baxter, transitman.
Frederick W. Fink, transitman.
Luther Collins Gunn, transitman.
John A. Green, leveller.
Frederick O. Parsons, leveller.
Stanley J. Mayo, rodman.

The deportation of these gentlemen is due to the fight made in behalf of Canadian engineers by the Conservative party in the Commons. For weeks the Amalgamated Society of Civil Engineers vainly endeavored to have the matter investigated, but the Government contented itself with securing a statement from Mr. C. M. Hays, to the effect that two American engineers were engaged on the surveys. This, as shown by the list of the deported, was a gross misrepresentation of the facts. The Opposition was not so easily put off and commenced a campaign which ended in the naming of Judge Winchester as commissioner to investigate the whole case. Canadians have to thank the Conservative party for the steps which led to the ousting of foreigners from positions, which will now be given to Canadians.

Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New for the Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

YOU PAY ONLY IF CURED.

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write for It This Very Day.

A Detroit specialist who has for years been one of the most successful and celebrated physicians and surgeons in his profession, and who has served on the boards of leading examining boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes, so that those suffering may be put entirely in the hands of any man that he has both the method and the ability to do as he says. Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have sufferers that they have been unable to get cured, of prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotency, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but liberates all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him, and if he accepts your case for treatment it is equivalent to a cure, as he does not undertake any case unless he can accept incurable cases for treatment; and remember, if he does accept your case you may pay when you are cured. He sends the method, as well as his booklet on the subject, containing the 16 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply

ARGENTINA'S WHEAT AREAS.

Enormous Extent and Prospects—Outgrowing the United States.

The increase of Argentina's exports of wheat and corn, now larger than those of the United States, is a matter of particular concern to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, which has been having a special agent, Mr. Frank W. Bicknell, make personal investigation of the agricultural resources and conditions in the South American republic, whose exports so far this cereal year (beginning January 1) have been nearly 67,000,000 bushels. Mr. Bicknell's report has just been issued by the Department in the form of a pamphlet of one hundred pages.

The present area devoted to wheat in Argentina is 10,000,000 acres, and Senor Romaldo Tidblom, who is quoted by Mr. Bicknell as an Argentine authority in agricultural matters, says that "there are more than 60,000,000 acres in the republic that could be immediately devoted to successful wheat farming if we had the farmers to do it." And beyond this immediately available land is a great area stretching southward into the territory that used to be called Patagonia.

Mr. Bicknell writes:

"Finally, it is quite impossible to estimate closely the present or future wheat area of Argentina. We must wait several years to do that. All we can safely say now, is that the acreage of the crop of 1903-1904 will probably be 10,000,000 acres or more; that it is rapidly increasing and getting into a region of very great extent and of an adaptability superior to that of the region in which it was started; that the growing of wheat will increase in proportion to the population and the extension of the railways and river navigation. If we see settlers—farmers—going to Argentina in large numbers and staying there; if the government offers sufficient inducements to get the right sort of men to come and to stay—then we may look for a tremendous production of wheat. The railway service will be provided as fast as there is a demand for it. The Southern Railway, which dominates the Province of Buenos Ayres and all the southern part of the country, is enterprising, has practically unlimited resources, and will extend its lines to secure new territory years before it will pay any dividends. It has repeatedly done this. The same may be said of the Western and Pacific Railways, which are developing the country to the west, only not to the same extent. Most of the Argentine railways are owned by the same group of English capitalists, and they work quite harmoniously together.

It is British capital that is developing Argentina as a wheat-growing area, and developing it on such a scale that that country has already outstripped the United States as a grain-exporting country. The methods of farming are described as being somewhat backward, the grain-growers being slow to avail themselves of labor-saving agricultural machinery. However, such machinery is coming more and more into use.

One great advantage possessed by Argentina for growing grain for export trade, which is dwelt upon by Mr. Bicknell, is the proximity of the wheat-growing area to the seaboard. The average railroad haul to tidewater for the country now under grain cultivation is only about 150 miles, and for the remote interior points only 300 miles. These are small distances compared with what the bulk of the wheat grown on this continent and exported has to pass over before reaching the seaboard. The water haul to Europe is, of course, much longer from Argentina, but the far more expensive land haul is for the great agricultural regions of that country a matter of comparatively slight importance. But the immigration problem is a serious one. Settlers such as those who are attracted to this country in such great numbers and who come to Canada to make homes for themselves are what Argentina needs, but does not get. The immigrants to that country rent land instead of acquiring ownership, and after a few years, having accumulated some money, turn their attention to the matter of returning to Italy or Spain. The climate is described as temperate throughout a considerable part of the country; but the modern races seem to prefer the north temperate zone to the south, and to be averse to approaching the equator even for the purpose of crossing it to try a climate in the southern hemisphere like that of their northern homes.—Canadian Trade Review.

THE STORY OF LIFE.

Making the best of life is getting the best health you can out of it—good digestion is the key. What you eat may or may not do you good. It depends upon how it is handled by the digestive apparatus of the stomach—If it is deranged, the blood, instead of taking new life and strength to the various organs of the body, takes poison which clogs the kidneys, irritates the nerves, distresses the heart, causing headache, sleeplessness, weary, dull feeling, backache, rheumatism, neuralgia—makes the complexion sallow—causes biliousness and constipation. The great, new discovery ANTI-PILL has a marvellous influence in correcting a crippled or sluggish stomach, and the results that follow—ANTI-PILL is the most prominent here to have when you feel wrong, out of spirits, sick or getting sick. It brightens you up—makes you feel better. 25 cents per bottle at druggists or Wilson-Pyle Co., Niagara Falls, Ont.

MOONLIGHT EXCURSION

Greatly Enjoyed Until the Sad Accident Happened.

The moonlight excursion under the auspices of the Young Men's Guild of Charlotte-st. Church was well patronized, a limited number of tickets being sold, and nearly a hundred people being refused tickets on account of the limited accommodation. The trip was a beautiful one, and but for the very regrettable accident that happened, would have been one of the most enjoyable of the season. The male quartette was on board and rendered several selections on the trip down.

NEED OF BATHING ACCOMMODATION

Fact Brought Home by Last Night's Accident.

It has always been a regrettable feature about our town, and the result of which was very noticeable at last night's accident on the steamer North Star, that a proper bathing and swimming place is not provided for our boys and girls to learn to swim, and indulge in the healthful pastime during the long summer months, and thus learn to protect themselves in times of necessity. Last night several young men were on board, and only one swam to the unfortunate child's rescue, and his attempt was futile. While perhaps there was not much chance of reaching her, there was also a possible chance of saving her, and a few good swimmers might have produced different results. In Toronto last week no less than 18,134 children took advantage of the different free baths there, and there is no reason in the world why Peterborough should not have similar places for bathing purposes. Quite a number of the young boys run a great risk and go bathing in Little Lake and other dangerous places, and this state of things should not be. While we may boast of our pretty parks, our great manufacturing institutions, etc., we must reproach ourselves when we think of our poor accommodation for the helpful exercise of our younger populace.

CHARITY BOARD

OLIVE KIDD DROWNED

Fell Off the Bow of the Str. North Star.

BODY NOT YET RECOVERED

Parties Searched All Night and To-day But Their Efforts Were Futile—The Only Child of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kidd.

An exceedingly sad ending to what promised to be a very enjoyable moonlight excursion was that of the Charlotte street Young Men's Guild trip down the river, and the laughing, jovial crowd that left the wharf at 8 o'clock came back quietly and noiselessly, for a young life had been snatched away into a watery grave. The little girl, Olive Kidd, only 14 years of age, was sitting in the bow of the boat, talking and laughing with several other girl companions. The railing in the bow is constructed of an iron rail, supported by iron posts, and is not very substantial, and passengers are warned not to sit out there, but it is often done on account of the fine location. The little girl had risen and was standing by the railing, when one of the joints parted, and the little girl, finding herself going, made a catch for the iron post, but was unable to seize it, and tumbled into the water under the bow, and was never seen alive again. The accident occurred so quickly that the people on the bow did not see it, with the exception of two boys who were sitting beside the girl. They gave the alarm, and a couple of young men were preparing to jump in after the girl, when one one called down from the upper deck that she was up there are all right. A minute afterwards, however, this was found to be untrue, and a young man named Freid jumped into the river and attempted to find her. The boat was quickly stopped and reversed, and a boat lowered, but no trace of the girl could be found. Some on the boat say they saw her rise once after the boat had passed, but the supposition was that she had been hit by some part of the boat and did not rise, as after she tumbled in she was seen to be drawn under the boat. She did not utter a cry, and the people on the boat did not realize the situation until they saw the lift-boat being lowered, and then occurred a most pitiful sight. Mr. and Mrs. Kidd, the parents of the girl, were on board, and they were frantic with fear that their only child was drowned. Several ladies fainted, and the young men seemed to be helpless.

After searching around the spot for nearly an hour it was decided to leave the small boat and some men, who were attempting to find the body with grappling irons, and come to town for help, which was done, and a party of men returned with the North Star, but up to the time of writing no trace of the child had been found.

The accident occurred shortly before 10 o'clock and the boat had just started on its return trip, and was opposite the Stuart settlement. The remainder of the trip was made in silence, and the friendly calls of people in passing boats and in the camps along the bank remained unanswered, as everyone's heart was sad, and all their sympathy went out to the bereaved parents.

The drowned child was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kidd, 626 Bethune street, and was a great favorite among her associates.

Brevities.

—A meeting of the officers of the 57th Regt. is called for this evening at eight o'clock at the mess rooms.

—A little girl who was walking up George st. narrowly escaped being seriously injured by a bicyclist wheeling on the pavement yesterday at noon.

—At the Police Court this morning Jas. Stevenson, J.P., fined Robt. McNeely $1 and costs, amounting in all to $5.50, for being found drunk on the streets.

—The annual excursion of the employees of the R. S. Williams' Piano Works, Oshawa, will take place to Peterborough on Saturday next, about 700 excursionists are expected.

—It has been stated in a morning paper that about 400 people were on board the North Star last night. We have been asked to correct this error, as there were only about 135 people on board, and the boat's capacity is 165.

—We have received an invitation to the formal opening of the great bridge across the Fraser River at New Westminster. With it are some artistic illustrations giving a good idea of this important work and doing credit to those who devised this souvenir.

North Ops	88
Pine Grove	55
Reaboro	144
Bobcaygeon	220
Maple Leaf	175
Palestine	140
Red Rock	245

Mr. Flavelle opened with a bid of 7c. Mr. Fitzgerald made it 7 1-16, Mr. Gillespie 7 1-8, Mr. Flavelle 7 1-4, Mr. Fitzgerald 7 3-8, Mr. Whittom 7 7-16, Mr. Fitzgerald 7 7-12, and Mr. Whittom jumped to 7 9-16. This was not bettered and he called Red Rock and Omemee, both accepting. He then offered 7 7-16 for further selections, but Mr. Flavelle went one better and made the call 7 1-2, at which price he cleared the board.

The next meeting will be held Monday, Aug. 8th.

THE TRENT WATERWAY.

Items in Supplementary Estimates for Construction and Surveys.

The supplementary estimates brought down last night contain the following items:—Trent Canal—Construction, $300,000; survey of routes, $11,000; improvements to dam and lock at Peterborough, $16,000. It is to be hoped that this will allow of fresh tenders being invited and contracts awarded so that a new section may be undertaken and some progress may be made.

There is also an item of $250,000 for survey for waterway between Georgian Bay and Montreal via French and Ottawa Rivers.

Some smaller appropriations for these waters are:—Wharf at Burleigh, $1,200; to complete wharf at Gore's Landing, $1,000; wharf at McCracken's Landing, repairs and improvements, $900; Severn River improvements, $2,000, and removal of obstructions at Macdonald's chute, $3,400.

There is a vote for improvements in the Peterborough post office, including fittings, $4,000.

NEW G.T.R. TRAINS.

Combination Baggage and Passenger Car, First-class Coaches and Cafe Parlor Cars.

There arrived in Toronto on Saturday afternoon over the G.T.R. the first of a new series of International Limited trains. Three of these are about to be placed in commission.

The trains comprise a combination baggage and passenger car, first class coaches and safe parlor cars.

These new creations are the acme of artistic conception and comfort. The inside is finished in Mexican mahogany with figured veneer panels. The ceilings are of Empire design, with plain decorations. The seats in the passenger end are of the reversible type and upholstered in crimson plush.

The first-class cars are models of comfort and ease, and can seat comfortably 82 people. Reversible seats are used in the body of the coach, while in the roomy smoking compartment one long and three short sofas accommodate "the lovers of the weed."

The new cafe-parlor cars are most modern in all their equipment. At the end of the car is placed the ladies' toilet, combining closet and wash room, the whole thing being beautifully fitted up. In the next apartment the parlor is located, sumptuously carpeted with the finest Victoria Wilton. The parlor can accommodate eleven people. Between the parlor and the dining room is arranged a very comfortable smoking room with wash and toilet arrangements for gentlemen.

Passing through the passageway leading from the parlor one enters the dining-room, the interior of which is finished in mahogany and finely veneered panels. Accommodation is had for twenty-four persons. The chairs are upholstered in leather.

THEIR ANNUAL EXCURSION.

What promises to be the most popular trip on Civic Holiday is St. Peter's Court Catholic Order of Foresters Excursion to Orillia per special train. Tickets $1.15 and 60c. Good to return the next day. Train leaves G.T.R. station at nine o'clock. Tickets may be procured at Lane & Lane's Furniture Store and members of committee. 4d

A RUNAWAY MARL TRAIN.

It Piled Itself Up on Dock at Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, July 24.—A wreck in the Grand Trunk yards at 12.30 yesday afternoon was the culmination of a most thrilling experience. The excitement commenced at Bea Allen, seven miles out, when Engineer Henry Brown, of Palmerston, discovered that the speed of the marl which he was hauling was getting greater as they went down the grade. He whistled for brakes but the train kept moving faster and faster. He repeatedly whistled, until finally the signal could be heard from the local yards.

As the train approached the yards at a high rate of speed he reversed the engine, but the immense weight of the marl train only caused the wheels to skid. The brakes refused absolutely to respond. Like a flash the train passed the depot, and Fireman Johnston jumped for his life.

The engineer stuck by his train to the end of the rails opposite Agent Death's residence, when he, too, jumped. The locomotive ploughed over the roadway across to the dock, and finally half buried herself in the timbers of the wharf, and almost touching the bulwarks of the schooner Ida A. Olsen of Bay City. Five cars piled up on each other and were terribly wrecked, and broken timbers and wheels stuck indiscriminately from the muddy mass of marl with which they were loaded.

The engine is not seriously damaged and the loss to rolling stock is confined largely to the five wrecked cars and their contents. The wrecking crew will have the greatest difficulty in removing the locomotive.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL MEETING.

McMaster Evangelists Draw Big Crowds to Their Meetings.

The McMaster Evangelistic Band close their campaign in Peterborough to-night. They have taken hold of the town as very few evangelists have had the privilege to do. The church was crowded again last night and the draw seats were in requisition. The platform was unique. The veteran of many battles and victories in the centre, the Rev. J. Bastow, M.A., who closes his pastorate on Sunday next, surrounded by a band of young life, eager and panting for the fray, as one after another steps up and delivers his message in choice language, in earnest, solemn tones, full of pathos and power. The meeting increases in interest, the quartette at intervals putting in their effective work. A gracious influence rests on the meeting. The Christians are ready to stand and help, the anxious become deeply concerned about spiritual things.

Last night there was one design running through the addresses and a perfect understanding between the speakers. The topics for the four addresses were "The man behind the tree," "The man under the tree," "The man in the tree," and "The man on the tree." Mr. Noble dealt with the man behind the tree. Our Father Adam, created perfect, not only a living man, but immortal. "God breathed into him and man became a living soul." Temptation came, She looked, took, gave! They fell and we fell with them. Men have been falling ever since and they are falling to-day.

They hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God amongst the trees of the garden.

The quartette sang beautifully "Nearer my God to Thee."

The Man Behind the Tree was discovered by Mr. McGregor. Nathanael, Jesus Christ said, when thou wast under the fig tree I saw thee. He did two things. First, under the tree he thought. Second, at the feet of Jesus he acted. He confessed Christ. "Thou art the Son of God." The world to-day needs men of action. "The Wandering Boy" by request, was sung by the quartette very tenderly.

The Man in the Tree was pointed out by Mr. Huddlestone. "Zaccheaus ran before and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him." Here was a man who seized the opportunity. The success of life largely depends on how we improve the opportunity when it comes. A supreme moment comes to every man. The historic words of Napoleon were "Too late. The critical moment is past." Here Mr. Williamson sang "Face to Face."

The Man on the tree was graphically portrayed by Mr. Cameron. The crucifixion is one of the saddest scenes in the world's history. The mental and physical sufferings of Jesus were vivd. The grand and sublime doctrine of substitution was climched with the wonderful declaration of the Apostle, "He hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him."

Large numbers went into the inquiry room and workers were kept busy.

Remember the excursion down the river on Wednesday night at 8 o'clock by the Str. City of Peterborough, under the auspices of the R. T. of T. Tickets 25c. 24d

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

LACROSSE.

Montreal, July 25.—As far as can be ascertained at present, the Capitals will be cast into outer darkness by the National Amateur Lacrosse Union. A meeting of that body will be called immediately for the purpose of taking some action about their match with the Tecumsehs, who, according to the statement of their own manager, are out and out professionals. It is considered that Mr. Foran did a hasty and not very polite thing in taking the action he did to deliberately professionalize his club without consulting the N.A.L.U.

At the same time the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Athletic Union has decided to call a meeting for August 3, at which the suspension of the Canadian Lacrosse Association clubs which has been held in abeyance pending the meeting in Toronto of last Saturday, will be made permanent. If the Capitals are not turned out by that time by the N.A.L.U. they will be turned out upon that occasion by the Athletic Union.

Mr. Brown, the secretary of the Union, says that the Union is assured of the support of the Ontario Rugby Union and the Ontario Hockey Association.

Any clubs, he says, playing in the meantime with C.L.A. clubs or the Capitals will professionalize themselves.

THE RING.

Interest in the fight between Jim Jeffries and Jack Munroe in San Francisco on August 26 has been revived by the announcement that the men will both go into active training within the next ten days. Munro will wind up his theatrical tour this week and start at once for the coast, accompanied by his trainer, Tim McGrath, and Manager Harry Pollock.

BASEBALL.

Cobourg have signified their intention of coming here on Saturday next, and a good game will be seen. The locals are practicing hard and intend to make the Lindsay manager lose his fur coat.

Everyone should see the greatest game of the season tonight at the Oval between the Examiner team and the Auburns. We heard at noon today that the Exam. manager was trying by threats, etc., to but the Auburns off, but they refused all offers. The game is called for 6.45 sharp.

It is quite probable that the Toronto's former manager, Lucky Burrows, will take charge of the team again. He is the right man in the right place, and the Torontos need him badly.

Toronto won a game of baseball yesterday!

Oshawa defeated Port Hope in a Midland League game on Saturday at Oshawa by the score of 11 to 2.

An important paragraph has been added to section 8 of the rules governing scoring, and one which will be hailed with delight by catchers. The new ruling is as follows: "Rule 85, section 8—In case a base runner advances a base through the failure of a baseman to stop, or try to stop, a ball accurately thrown to his base he shall be charged with an error and not the player who made such throw, provided there was occasion for it. If such throw be made to second base, the scorer shall determine whether the second baseman or the shortstop shall be charged with an error."

This amendment to the scoring rules is based on justice and common sense. Every fan recollects innumerable occasions when a catcher's perfect throw to head off a steal has gone sailing over second base and far into the outfield because no one covered the bag, while the runner continued on to third, and frequently scored. Obviously, it were manifestly unfair to penalize the catcher for his good work, and allow the shortstop or second baseman to escape any consequences of his inexcusable neglect to make an ordinary play, yet this ridiculous thing is just what has been done for years, and a catcher's fielding average has been practically at the mercy of infielders. In future the error will be placed where it belongs—at the door of the player—who, dreamily erecting culinary air castles and counting the minutes to supper time, allows the throw to pass him. This equally applies to other basemen who do not cover their bags.

Schedule for to-night.

Armstrong vs. Moore.
Stratton vs. Runnals.
Cox vs. Frost.
Ferguson vs. Greer.

Three rinks of local curlers went to Millbrook this morning and will play games there this afternoon. The following gentlemen were the skips:—Messrs. S. T. Medd, Harold Armstrong and Dr. McClellan.

GOLF.

The following team will go to Port Hope tomorrow and play a game with the Port Hope nine there:—Messrs. Lawrence, Burnham, Ray, Burnett, Neill, Eastwood, Stratton, Hamilton and Richie.

FOOTBALL.

The Galt team that was defeated a short time ago by the Scots, of Toronto, have decided not to go to St. Louis until they have won back the championship. It is not likely that they will see St. Louis if they abide by their resolution, as the Scots have disorganized for the season, and refused to play the Locust Hill team, the winners of the Midland Football League, a short time ago.

How Babies Cry When They Are Ill.

Mothers are often worried as to what the cries of their infants mean when they seem to be sick or in pain and frequently are apt to diagnose the case wrongfully. As a matter of fact, when an infant is dangerously ill it seldom cries, so that when it begins to cry a great deal during a severe illness it is usually a sign of amendment.

When a child suffers from inflammation of the lungs it moans, but rarely cries. When suffering from bronchitis the cry is gruff and rattling. When suffering from croup the cry is sharp and fretful. When hungry it is fretful and wailing.—New York Press.

Impartial.

When King Edward visited Kilkenny, the corporation of that famous Irish city presented an address to his majesty. On the same day, with strict impartiality, the councilors granted the freedom of the city to John Daly of Limerick, lately discharged from prison, where he had served a term for using dynamite.

A Horse Story.

A Frenchman who is a great admirer of good horses, and especially of their good sense, tells this story about one horse's intelligence:

At Vincennes, in my childhood, he writes, my mother had two spirited horses of fine blood. One day while one of them, Prunelle, was passing between two walls with my little sister on her back, the child slipped and rolled between the horse's feet.

Prunelle stopped instantly and held one hind foot in the air. She seemed to fear to lower that foot, lest she should step on the child. There was no room for the horse to turn nor for a man to pass in.

In that uncomfortable position, with lifted foot, however, the horse stood patiently while an attendant crawled between her forefeet and rescued the child.

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

Copyright, 1903, by F. R. Toombs

"The most important port on the Bokharan shore. It is not a Zannuck village, nor do the people like the ameer. They are for the greater part exiles from Khiva."

"We have had you brought here to have a businesslike talk."

"Then they will not fight for the ameer?"

"No, nor against him. They wish only to be let alone."

"How long would it take the boat to reach Siloon?"

"Two days. By this time they are at Siloon, and we could not overtake them, as the finest camels of the ameer would be in waiting for them, with a guard of his best soldiers."

"Is it not possible that a caravan of rich goods will take advantage of this escort and go to Bokhara?"

"It would be so."

"There would be some delay getting started."

"The ameer's soldiers would be afraid to linger."

"Then what can be done, Palpak? We put the matter into your hands."

"Excellent sirs, you promise me much. One of you saved my life; the other, a Russian officer, releases me, and I can take the treasure to my starving people. I am grateful. I will do all I can to assist you in winning back the young women. From Siloon the road to Bokhara is winding. It runs through what is called the Siloon pass. We are now in what is known as the Kharaboghas. A short sail from here is a small village on the coast belonging to my people. By going there and taking the trail over the mountains we can reach the Siloon pass at a point where it will be four days' journey for the caravan. It will take us only three days."

"Good!" said Harvey. "What then?"

"The Zannucks have many causes to hate the soldiers of the ameer. They will have fine camels and horses. There will also be many valuables going to Bokhara. If there is to be a wedding of a prince, there will be great feasting, and the ameer will distribute gifts. Some of these will be in the caravan. My people will follow me to the Siloon pass."

"By the Kharaboghas do you mean the Scythian gulf?" asked Harvey.

"Yes. It is what we call the gulf."

"Then our plan is clear. Orskoff, you and I will go with Palpak in his boat to this village of his people and accompany his warriors to the pass. Send Nevisky to Siloon with all speed. If he finds the caravan there, let him attack and rescue the girls. If the caravan has gone, let him wait there for our return. We must go back to Siloon if we rescue the girls or there will be no way of leaving the coast."

"I will explain the plan to Nevisky," said Orskoff.

Nevisky listened with many misgivings. A Russian officer to release prisoners in this manner and to set foot on forbidden soil! But Orskoff was his superior officer. He could do nothing but obey.

The treasure was placed in Palpak's sailing vessel, and the four robbers, with Harvey and Orskoff, the latter fully armed from the stores of the gunboat, went on board. The gunboat steamed away for Siloon, and the other boat, with all sail set, started for Palpak's little village.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE RIDE TO SILOON PASS.

THE people of the village swarmed to look at the strangers, who seemed to be of a race they looked upon as enemies, yet their chief, Palpak, treated these men as friends. Palpak was a chief who gave no explanations of his acts, and when he demanded horses for himself, his brothers and his friends they were at once forthcoming.

Domitan, the brother who had been so eager to kill Palpak, was morose and showed but little favor to the guests. The latter, confident that their plans would be successful, treated him considerately. They thought not of the risk they ran in going, with robbers for escort, into a country from which few travelers had ever returned. The moving power was love, and love laughs at danger.

From the village a winding path led from the low shore land to a distant range of hills. Along this their progress was rapid; but, arriving at the hills, they found a rugged, rocky road over which traveling was slow. The small horses of the Zannucks were sturdy animals and went unshod over the jagged stones that covered the narrow path.

The natives stared at them in amazement. A Russian officer in uniform, accompanying their chief on terms of friendship, was a scene they had never contemplated. Some thought Orskoff was a prisoner, though he did not act like one. Harvey seemed actually to be the leader.

Hidden among great knolls and sequestered in fertile valleys were little villages seemingly devoted to peaceful pursuits. Flocks of the world famous sheep, the skins of whose lambs are sent to Persia, where they are made into garments or cured and sent to Europe and America, were browsing on the hillsides.

All the herdsmen bore arms. One would have a rifle; another wore a belt in which two or three pistols were thrust; some carried the old time spear. Their garb was most picturesque. The turbaned Turk, the jaunty Circassian, the jacketed Greek, none of these could match the gay dress of these hillmen.

The road grew rougher and more difficult. They climbed laboriously, stopping often to give their horses a breathing spell. On either side the jagged rocks rose to great heights and the mountains stood majestically about them.

"No wonder these people cannot be subdued," said Harvey. "Nature has built for them a fortress that no guns can batter down."

"The trouble is," said Orskoff, "that nature does this only where a fortress is not necessary. When it comes to guarding a city, placing a battlement upon a passage between two seas, nature may be gracious enough to bestow a rock or two, but they must be fashioned by the hand of man to suit the purpose of defense."

"The reason is not that nature is grudging," said Harvey. "It is that man is so stubborn that he establishes his cities in places where they can be established. Nature's fortifications are in places where no one ever wants to go."

"Except ourselves at the present time. Hello! There is a big town."

They had reached a high point in the road and looked down a sloping stretch into a valley, where a town was laid out that called forth exclamations from both. Amid green and luxurious surroundings, on the banks of a little river that found its devious way into the Scythian gulf, this city of the Zannucks was laid out with a precision that would do credit to an English or American town. Following the almost straight line of the river, the main street stretched a half mile. On this were the principal bazaars and market places, with drainage directly into the river. At right angles to this were other streets, with houses of stone or wood, ornamented according to the taste of the owners, each having a little patch of green and fruit trees and garden.

"Orskoff," said Harvey, pointing to an elevation back of the town, "probably the only thing this town lacks is good drinking water. I'd like to put up one of my windmills and a pump right there. I'll ask Palpak for a concession when the other business is over."

"So confident are you in the success of the expedition that you can talk of windmills!"

"I've talked windmills all my life. I made them when I was a boy. I can pick out a likely spot for one with my eyes shut."

Harvey was interrupted by the impetuous welcome given to the returning chief.

"Hail, Palpak, chief of the Zannucks!" cried the people, men, women and children rushing to surround the party. "What hast thou brought to pay the terrible tax the ameer has put upon us?"

"Listen, O my people!"

"Much treasure, my children! It is well. These are my friends, to whom you must show hospitality."

"We will! We will! Thy friends are our friends, O Palpak!"

"There is much to be said. The treasure will be guarded until the tax of the ameer is paid. But there is something to be done now. Let my captains come to me while we eat and rest. We must hasten away to obtain more treasure and perform a service for my friends."

He led them to the finest house in the place, where women waited upon them. Wine and food were brought. When they had finished, Harvey and Orskoff smoked and listened to the parley between Palpak and his captains. There were ten of these, including the brothers of Palpak. Domitan was second in command by reason of his relationship as next eldest brother of Palpak.

"Is war declared?" asked one of the warriors. "Have the hated Muscovites again threatened us?"

"No; it is not war against the Muscovites."

"What, then, O chief? Inform us that we may fight as becomes the Zannucks."

"A caravan conveying much treasure and that which is greater than treasure, of more value than gold or gems, will pass on the way to Bokhara. It will be composed of the servants and soldiers of the ameer, who has so frequently sent soldiers to murder us and steal our children and compelled us to pay tribute. These soldiers of the ameer have stolen two beautiful girls, who were to be the wives of my two friends. I was in difficulty, and this one, the American, assisted me and saved my life. The other, a Muscovite officer, had us in his power, but released us that we might bring the tribute to you, my people. In return I have told them that we would go to the Siloon pass and rescue the young women they love so well."

"We are ready! Horses will be brought from the fields! Great is Palpak, chief of the Zannucks!"

Palpak waved his hands for silence and, assuming a serious mien, said:

"Listen, O my people! Before we start I have something to submit to my captains. It was at the cave where we hid the treasure. I had divided it according to my custom—a portion to each of my brothers, a portion to myself, and the greater bulk to be brought here and divided among my people and to pay the tax demanded of us by the ameer. My brothers rebelled against my decision and, led by Domitan, attacked me to take my life. I was assisted by the American, as I have said, and then the Russian soldiers came and captured us all. But the crime of Domitan remains. It is the custom for the captains to settle upon a punishment."

"Kill him! Fasten him on a spear and place him high!"

These cries came from all sides. Domitan turned pale. He looked appealingly at Palpak, but the face of the chief was as stone.

"O chief!" said a captain, rising. "It is well that the Zannucks know their chief to be always safe. If he is in danger from his own brothers, then what may we expect from others? If these brothers have attempted to kill thee, they should be punished. It is the will of the people that he whom they love shall be protected and those who seek to kill him shall themselves be slain."

"It is so," said another captain, "but this took place far away. Let us give Domitan and the other brothers of our chief an opportunity to explain their conduct."

FALL ELECTION SIGNS

Supplementary Estimates Supply Evidence in This Direction.

Total Amount Asked For By the Government Is Nearly $12,000,000 For the Year—Sir Richard Cartwright Admits That the Railways Own Express Companies—Pte. Perry Formally Thanked For the Honor Brought to Canada.

Ottawa, July 26.—Autumnal elections are foreshadowed in supplementary estimates amounting to $11,939,270, which were brought down by the Minister of Finance last night. This brings the total estimates for the year up to $76,776,608, of which $12,692,104 is chargeable to capital and $62,082,504 to consolidated fund. Few places in the list of applicants for Government assistance seem to have been neglected.

The Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal gets $250,000 for a survey for waterway. No less than $2,850,700 is appropriated for the Intercolonial and Prince Edward Island Railway. Of this amount about three-quarters of a million is revote. The Trent Valley Canal gets $300,000.

In a discussion in the House yesterday it came out that the cattle guard commission cost $6,945, and what Mr. Holt, who was paid $150 a month and actual traveling expenses, wanted $1,000 more. Nothing was accomplished by the commission.

A long discussion took place over the use and abuse of private cars by members of the Government, and it came out that Sir William Mulock went to Mexico in one that cost $20,000.

When the estimates of the Department of Trade and Commerce were up, Sir Richard Cartwright stated unreservedly that the express companies were owned by the railways, and W. F. Maclean promptly put in an ear to induce the Minister to join in bringing express companies under the Railway Commission. Mr. Maclean also advocated a first-class express system in connection with the Government railways.

The honor which Private Perry won for Canada on the Bisley ranges was formally acknowledged by the House yesterday, and eulogistic speeches were made by Sir Fred. Borden, Col. Sam Hughes, Hon. W. S. Fielding and W. F. Maclean.

JUDGMENT RESERVED.

Sir. Henderson and A. W. Cockburn Heard in Their Defence.

North Bay, July 26.—The bribery charges brought out by John Bidgood of the National Hotel, Sudbury, against Dr. James Henderson of Warren and A. W. Cockburn of Sturgeon Falls, were given a hearing before Commissioner Gordon in the court house here yesterday.

"The second time I ever saw Bidgood," said Dr. Henderson, "he took me through his house and ended up by handing me an envelope. I returned it to him immediately, and he gave it back, and I kept it. I found out later it contained $125. Bidgood did not ever say anything about the money, and neither did I. After Detective Rogers interviewed Bidgood he came east to see Cockburn and myself. Bidgood wired us to keep silent."

"Ten minutes after I was introduced to Jack the Ripper," said Cockburn, "we were standing in a passage between the postoffice of Sturgeon Falls and the next building. He placed an envelope in my hands and said it contained $75. I never took the money out, and returned it some time afterwards."

John Bidgood, in contradicting the evidence given in Sudbury last week, stated he had given $125 to Henderson and $75 to Cockburn. The envelope which contained the money received from Cockburn was not the same as that in which he had given the bills to Cockburn.

The Commissioner reserved judgment.

Toronto Man Robbed in Kingston.

Toronto, July 26.—Treffle Andre of this city, went on the Kingston Old Boys' excursion on Saturday. Shortly after 2 a.m. Monday, while hurrying for the return train, two thugs severely handled him, robbed him of a gold watch, which he values at $60, $7 in cash and a silver mounted pocket knife.

WHAT CANADIANS WON

Individual Winnings and Members' Winnings For the Team.

Close of the Bisley Rifle Meet—Financial Tribute As Well As Glory They Will Bring Back Home—The Commandant and the Adjutant Remembered By the Team—Col. Peters' Electrical Target.

Bisley Camp, July 26.—(C.A.P.)—The members of the Canadian team in recognition of the kindness and attention shown them by Lieut.-Col. Anderson and Major McDougall, the commandant and the adjutant, presented the former with a handsome carving knife and fork.

The Marquis of Lorne wired Col. Anderson his congratulations on Pte. Perry's success.

Col. Peters' electrical target was a great attraction during the last week of the meeting. The Prince of Wales and Lord Roberts showed great interest in Col. Peters' examinations.

Perry's Movements.

Pte. Sam J. Perry, winner of the King's Prize at Bisley will visit Toronto and the United States before returning to British Columbia. He sails by the SS. Bavarian on Thursday next. He was born in Toronto in 1879. As a token of his work in South Africa he wears the South African medal with the Paardeberg clasp.

H. Kribs Scalded.

Hespeler, July 26.—Henry Kribs, brother to William A. Kribs, M.P.P., was badly scalded yesterday morning through the bursting of the six-inch pipe which conveys steam from the boilers to the engine at the R. Forbes Co.'s mills. Portions of his clothing were torn off so great was the force of the steam as the pipe carried a pressure of 115 pounds. As yet the extent of Mr. Kribs' injuries could not be ascertained.

On the Way to the Hague.

Clarens, Switzerland, July 26.—The body of the late President Kruger was placed on board a train yesterday, bound for The Hague. The funeral car was decorated with flags and flowers, and the coffin was covered with the flag of the late Transvaal Republic.

TRIBUTE TO LOU SCHOLES.

Covered With a City's Tribute in Miles of Smiles, Cheers and Acclaim—20,000 to Queen's Park.

Toronto, July 26.—If "one crowded hour of glorious life is worth an age without a name," Toronto is rolling up the debt of ages rapidly, and there are some more still in prospect. Probably no young a man never before received such a magnificent ovation, and if for no other reason yesterday's reception to Lou Scholes, winner of the Diamond Sculls, amateur rowing champion of the world, may be historic. The city spoke for the nation, and there is not a township in the Dominion, not a spot where the wire runs or the lagging post bears its message, but sympathetic hearts will thrill to know that the city of the people gave her warmest welcome from her own heart, and from the heart of the Dominion, to the latest home-coming hero of Canada. Not mere village eclat inspired the enthusiastic pageantry of the occasion, but the consciousness that Lou Scholes had added another lustre to the Maple Leaf of the two oceans.

The Welcome at Buffalo.

At Buffalo, when the Toronto-bound party arrived, they were taken in hand by Sheriff Harry Kaiser, Duncan McLeod and John D. Kammon, entertained at breakfast and then driven around the city.

When the train reached Lewiston Lou got a great welcome from the railway and customs officials there, as well as from the number of tourists awaiting the boat.

Corona Was Crowded.

The Corona presented a pretty spectacle as she approached the dock. The decks were alive with a gaily dressed crowd, flags and bunting waved and the Highlanders' band struck up the strain that everybody wanted to hear—"See, the Conquering Hero Comes." Lou, looking rather embarrassed at the friendly ordeal that he was to face, strode down the wharf stairway bearing the oars with which he had pulled to victory, and modestly bowed acknowledgment of the cheers.

Several hundred people had taken advantage of the special trip to welcome the home-comer, and E. F. Clarke, M.P., and J. J. Foy, K.C., also delighted to do honor. Lou also received the congratulations of his sisters, the Misses Scholes, and Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Jack Scholes and of Miss Tozer, his charming betrothed. At Niagara-on-the-Lake a big crowd at the wharf cheered itself hoarse.

In Toronto Bay.

The aquatic feature of the civic reception was a success. Viewed from the Corona, the flotilla of steam craft, yachts and small boats of various kinds, decked with flags, had a fine appearance. The small gun on the Cruiser boomed out a salute, which was taken up on the steam whistles of the Chippewa, Lakeside and several other boats, while the occupants of all raised their voices in cheers and song. The band played patriotic airs, and then drifted softly into the strains of "Home Sweet Home," in which many joined in the singing.

When the Parade Started.

Nearly an hour was spent at the wharf while salutations were exchanged and congratulations given. The crowd meanwhile grew denser, and it was with difficulty that a narrow lane was preserved by the police.

By 6 o'clock the procession got under way, the official program being honored in the breach. Mr. Scholes and his father came first, and the champion was generally recognized, a storm of cheers greeting him all the way up to Queen street. Beyond this the cheering was gusty and fitful, bursting out from time to time, where men were more thickly gathered. The ladies were everywhere, and waved their good wishes in dainty lace and lawn.

In the Park.

Arrived at Queen's Park there was a demonstration round the pavilion. Fifteen or twenty thousand people surrounded the enclosure, and representative people of all classes mingled with the throng. Acting Mayor Ramsden made the presentation of a cabinet of silver on behalf of the city and read the address. Lou made a very modest reply. Ald. Jones, Coatsworth, Hay, Ned Hanlan, John F. Scholes, the champion's father, Mulqueen, his trainer, Ed. Durnan, and E. F. Clarke, M.P. This closed the speaking and the public functions, and then the champion and his family went home.

Long, Bitter Fight.

Chicago, July 26.—With all peace negotiations broken off and with all the allied trades unions employed at the different plants, with the exception of the teamsters and the stationary engineers, out on strike in sympathy with the butcher workers, who quit work two weeks ago, the stock yards strike last night has settled down to what promises to be a long, bitter fight.

Railway Taxation Commission.

Toronto, July 26.—Secretary Wilkinson of the Railway Taxation Committee is in his office again. H. J. Pettypiece, M.P.P., is expected to-day. Prof. Adam Shortt went home direct to Kingston, and Judge Bell also returned home. The Commission will start out again next Monday for Augusta, Maine, Boston and New York.

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

BECLOUDING THE ISSUE.

Had Lord Dundonald No Cause for His Action?

It is unfortunate that a certain section of the Liberal press continue their attempt to becloud the very grave issue which Lord Dundonald has raised with respect to the condition of Canadian defence with the dust of partizan attack. The whole question is too vital a matter for us to permit it to fall into the party arena. We cannot afford to have our people lined up on either side of it as Liberals and Conservatives. In the public interest, it is necessary that they approach the situation thus created as citizens, and citizens interested in the self-respecting safety of their country.

Some of the attacks which are made upon Lord Dundonald are so foolish, however, as to cause the poverty of the partizan position. The Toronto Globe, for instance, tells us that out of his own mouth he has shown that he had no public grievances against the Government of sufficient importance to justify his action. And it proves it by quoting an extract from his Toronto speech as follows:—

"Gentlemen, the most extrordinary feature of the controversy with regard to the recommendations in my report for 1903 is the very remarkable fact that the main features and recommendations in it, so far as paper organization is concerned, have already been adopted and are now in force in Canada."

This the Globe argues is a confession that his famous suppressed report was not "ignored" by the Government; and that therefore his grievance on this point breaks down. He had nothing to complain of; for was not the Government carrying out "the main features" recommended by him? That the Globe should honestly take such a position with the report of the whole speech before it, is too great a strain for ordinary credulity. To begin with, the extract itself contains a clause which betrays the truth. "So far as paper organisation is concerned," he said. And who does not know how worthless an army on paper usually is?

But the Globe could hardly have missed the very next paragraph to the one it quoted. It ran as follows:—

"But the publication of this report would have shown the people of Canada that in addition to the recommendations which have been carried out, other matters which urgently call for attention should ere this have receive attention from the Government."

Then Lord Dundonald began to mention details. The ammunition supply of the country is wholly inadequate. There should be a store of it ready for emergencies, whereas there is hardly enough to commence serious military operations. Then—if we may proceed to quote—

"As regards rifles, we are just as badly off now as then. There are not enough in the country to arm even the present peace strength of the militia, while there are none for the second line of defence or for the rifle clubs, and indeed many of the rifles we now have require replacing by new ones. I have only to mention that there is practically no engineering equipment, no ammunition carts, no pack saddles for carrying ammunition, no water carts, practically no machine guns, and most other essentials are equally lacking, to show how inadequate and unsatisfactory is the equipment of the militia."

Yet the pretence is set up that Lord Dundonald made it clear by his Toronto speech that he knew of no sufficient ground of complaint for his action. It is hard to say how he could have brought a graver charge of unpreparedness against our militia organization unless he had been able to say that there were no men in the country ready to bear arms. At every point, he charged inadequate equipment. Yet the Globe says that he was driven out of his position by "his own admissions." This is not serious discussion of a serious matticonal question. It is merely an exhibition of unscrupulous party spite. —Montreal Star.

A RETORT.

Lord Dundonald Only Replied to False Charges by His Accusers.

The reception given to Lord Dundonald in Toronto proved precisely what might have been expected. Lord Dundonald was dismissed by the Canadian Government, and retorted with a damaging public statement. Immediately afterwards he was invited to be the guest at Massey Hall meeting. Could any man imagine that he would refrain from discussing the circumstances under which he is leaving Canada? Would Lord Dundonald for one moment think that the invitation bore no relation to the events of the last month? So far as the committee in charge was concerned the address of welcome deliberately avoided the subject of which every person in the hall was thinking. No attempt was made to limit the range of Lord Dundonald's remarks. As a matter of fact, the elaborate professions of "non-partisanship" were a trifle excessive.—Toronto News, Indep.

A BETTER METHOD NEEDED.

Hints for Agricultural Societies—Apple Barrels Plentiful.

Some very interesting information is being gathered by H. B. Cowan, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, who is making an investigation of the work being done by various agricultural societies of the province. It has been found that as a general rule the exhibitions that are paying out the largest sums for special attractions are giving the least for agricultural purposes. Many of the township societies in the province receiving small grants are holding much better exhibitions and doing more for the cause of agriculture than a large number of district societies are doing, while there are many township societies which hold such poor exhibitions that they should be closed up or utilize their funds for other purposes. In quite a few counties in the province there are so many exhibitions that they conflict with each other seriously. Fewer but better exhibitions would be a great improvement in these counties.

It has been found that a township society near Toronto paid out in 1902 over $2,300 in agricultural prizes, being the largest sum paid out by any society, either district or township, in the province for that year. Of the four societies which paid out the most for agricultural purposes, two are township organizations. One township society receiving a grant of $80, paid out over $1,000 in agricultural prizes, while a district society receiving a grant of $800, paid out only $1,128. One district society receiving a government grant of $520, whose total receipts were $4,420, paid out less than $900 for agricultural purposes. Another district society receiving a grant of $380, with total receipts of over $1,200, paid less than $250 for agricultural work.

Among the township societies, one which received a grant of $121, paid out only $72 for agricultural prizes; another one receiving $90 for a government grant with total receipts of $1,200 paid out but $15 for agriculture. A third society receiving a grant of $140, paid $85 for agricultural work. A large number of cases of this kind have been discovered. The suggestion that has been made that the Government grant shall be distributed to societies in proportion to what they actually expend for agricultural purposes, is being advocated strongly in many sections. A detailed report concerning the work being done by different societies will be presented by Superintendent Cowan at the next annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Fairs and Exhibitions.

APPLE BARRELS PLENTIFUL.

The Canadian Horticulturist in its next issue will announce that as a result of careful investigations made throughout the province, it finds there is not likely to be any shortage of apple barrels this season. Last year, it will be remembered, thousands of bushels of apples rotted under the trees owing to the scarcity of apple barrels.

Coopers this year have been able to obtain more supplies and are prepared for the demand. In some sections of the province the apple crop is going to be a little lighter than last year, which will stand to increase the supply of barrels. The average price this year will be 40 to 50 cents each.

SAN JOSE SCALE SPREADING.

Reports received by the Canadian Horticulturist from township San Jose Scale inspectors, an account of which will be published in the August number of that magazine, show that in some sections of the province the San Jose scale is spreading. In a number of townships growers appear to have given up fighting this pest, with the result that great damage is being done trees. In other sections where spraying has been energetically carried on, the scale is practically under control. The inspectors report that the lime and sulphur, the crude oil and the caustic soda washes are giving satisfactory results.—Ontario Agricultural Department.

PARTISAN INSULTS.

Calumniating Lord Dundonald—Ministerial Incitement of Racial Prejudice.

The independent Ottawa Journal has the following:

The Free Press of this city, which used to have a reputation for being scurrilous but of late has been more celebrated for being silly, has combined both scurrility and foolishness in a violent personal attack upon Dundonald which the Journal reproduces on another page. It calls him "a disgraced official" "a cold mannered lord," refers to him as an insulter of Canadians, and imputes to him and to those who wish well to him "cowardly efforts to arouse racial and religious strife." All this is done in an effort to discredit and defeat the approaching Ottawa farewell to the general. The scurrility of the thing is illustrated by the phrases and tone of the article which are of a style that no other newspaper in Canada has disgraced itself by using in reference to the general. The silliness is apparent from the fact that should the Dundonald farewell, which was not of a partisan plan, be a big affair, as we fancy it will be, the Free Press will have catalogued it in advance as a good exemplification of the strength of Conservative sentiment in Ottawa. And a final foolishness is palpable in the attempt by the Free Press to impute to Lord Dundonald or to Conservatives the blame for racial feeling when the evidence is clear that whatever racial recrimination is going on began with a Liberal minister in the house of commons, and that all further exploitation of the subject must only tend to fasten firmly that responsibility upon a member of the government.

A WHOLESOME WARNING.

Canada Should Learn from History—A Fool's Paradise in Greece, France and Great Britain.

The Ottawa Free Press says:

"A stranger to our country, its customs and its self-reliant people, Lord Dundonald boldly averred that we are fools living in a fool's paradise, that we are men who lack good manners and etiquette."

We ask nobody's pardon for saying that the above paragraph contains a falsehood. Lord Dundonald, as the writer of the paragraph very well knows, never said Canadians were "fools." This turn is given to the statement he actually did make in order that the Free Press might be able to represent it as an insult to the people of Canada. That there was no insult involved in saying, as His Lordship did, that if we supposed we had a militia system in any way adequate to the defence of the country, we were "living in a fool's paradise," no one with even an elementary knowledge of the current phraseology of the English language needs to be told. The "Standard Dictionary" defines a fool's paradise as "any state of deceptive happiness or bliss founded on vain hopes." We need only add to this definition the words "erroneous assumptions, or imperfect information" to make it fit precisely the application Lord Dundonald made of the expression. And yet it is in regard to this that the wriggling organ says: "When he (Lord Dundonald) calmly considers his insult to Canadians, he will be ashamed of himself." If Lord Dundonald should be ashamed of himself for giving us warning, what loads of shame should oppress the memory of Demosthenes, who was continually giving such warnings to the people of Athens, but whose words unhappily came only too true when Athens liberty sank to rise no more on the field of Chaeronea. The French Monarchy was living in a fool's paradise up to the very verge of the Revolution, and Napoleon III. was lodging in much the same quarters when he fondly believed that his military organization was more than a match for that of Germany, and when Paris was resounding with cries of "A Berlin!" No one can doubt that Great Britain herself was dwelling in a fool's paradise as regards the efficiency of her army at the time when war broke out in South Africa. Could anyone have waked her betimes — as Lord Dundonald has sought to awaken the Canadian people—from her delusive dreams, the history of the Boer war would have been very diffferently written. If the expression "fool's paradise" has been used once to designate the state of security in which the British people were luxuriating until disaster after disaster overtook them, it has been used scores of times; but that any insult was ever meant by it, no one was ever ignorant enough to suggest. — Montreal Star.

Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"YOUNG WOMEN:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstruation periods. I am most grateful."—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 28 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She will hold your letter in strict confidence. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free.

RUSSIANS ENTIRELY ROUTED

the general situation arising from the action of the Russian warships.

The report of the captain of the Malacca was presented at the foreign office yesterday, and the demand of the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Co. for compensation will probably be considered.

The London newspapers this morning consider that Premier Balfour's statement in the House of Commons proves that the situation is still exceedingly grave, and they insist that the Government shall act promptly in demanding an explanation of the Knight Commander incident, which is characterised by The Daily Graphic as an outrage of the most gratuitous and barbarous kind.

The Morning Post, in an ironic editorial, asks to what purpose Great Britain maintains a large navy, if such things are to be permitted?

MR. LEMIEUX' MISCHIEF.

Used to Misrepresent Canada and Disunite the Empire.

London, July 25—Hon. R. Lemieux's recent speech, urging England to "let well alone" in relations with the Colonies, is being used by Liberal candidates to prove that the Colonies are opposed to Chamberlain's preferential suggestions.

Mr. Tomkinson, the Liberal candidate for Hornsey division, speaking last week, said: "The Colonies are against the Government in the preferences which Chamberlain proposes to give them. The case has been very well put by the Soliciter-General of Canada, who said 'the relations between Canada and Great Britain are excellent today, but once you put your feelings into the statute book they will be in the statute book, but not in the heart.'"

Mr. Tomkinson strongly denounced the whole preferential proposal as calculated to alienate Colonial feeling.

THE RING.

Buffalo, N.Y., July 25.—The fight between "Curley" Supples and "Kid" Fredericks, at the International Athletic Club, Fort Erie, to-night, was stopped after the ifrst round by Provincial Detective Greer, representing the Canadian Attorney-General's office, and Chief of Police Griffin, of Fort Erie. Both officers claimed the bout was not a boxing contest, but was developing into a prize fight. Supples had the better of the round all through, and got the decision. The attendance was large.

CRISIS IN RUSS-JAP WAR

Kuropatkin's Army is Caught in a Trap

JAPS OCCUPY NEWCHWANG

Russian Retreat to Haicheng Means That They Must Meet the Japs in a Pitched Battle—Japs Enter Newchang at 6 o'clock on Monday Night.

St. Petersburg, July 27.—Despatches just received by the War Office announce that the Russians have retreated to Haicheng.

They decided to withdraw from Tatchekiao Sunday evening. Gen. Stakelberg senior resolved to take this step, as the Japanese were turning the flank.

The Japanese forces are believed to include the whole of the armies of Generals Oku and Nodzu. More than seven divisions of Japanese are engaged. The rear guard action between Datchapu and Tatchekiao continued until 11 at night, when the Japanese were within sight of the Russian entrenchments. The Russians withdrew in perfect order, favored by moonlight.

Gen. Kuropatkin reports that the Japanese column in the vicinity of Saimatzsa, which is believed to be two divisions strong, is marching along the Valley of the Tatitse with the obvious aim of cutting the railroad above Liaoyang.

The evacuation of Tatchakiao was prepared for long ago by the Russians. The retirement is not regarded as materially altering the situation. The Russians had strongly fortified Haicheng in view of this contingency.

Japs Occupy Newchwang.

Tientsin, July 27.—The Japanese occupied Newchwang at 5 o'clock Thursday evening.

Lloyd's agent at Newchwang wires that fifty Japanese cavalrymen have entered Newchwang. The French flag is flying from all the Russian buildings. The town is quiet.

It is reported here that heavy fighting has occurred between Liaoyang and Mukden.

Japs Repulsed.

The Japanese attack on the centre of the Russian position was repulsed, but the Russians were ordered to retire Monday and occupy the heights five miles north of Tatchekiao. This movement was carried out in good order.

Lost Several Hundred.

St. Petersburg, July 27.—Gen. Kuropatkin's telegram recording the withdrawal of the southern army from Tatchekiao to Haicheng, fails to give details of the continuous rear-guard action preceding the retreat, but the war office thinks the losses were several hundred, which would indicate severe fighting.

It is stated that the Vladivostock squadron is now eastward of the Island of Formosa.

At Point of Bayonet.

Tientsin, July 27.—It is reported here that the Japanese lost 380 in killed and wounded in the fighting, which has taken place outside of Newchweng during the last two days. It is reported that the Japanese took the Russian position at Tatchekiao Monday night at the point of the bayonet.

Left For the Field.

Tokio, July 27.—The military attaches assigned to the third Japanese army left yesterday for the field. They will board a transport at Moji on Friday. The British attaches are Col. Apsley-Smith, Major Crawford and Captains Yates and Bannerman. The American attache is First Lieutenant Granville R. Fortescue.

Accused of Poisoning.

Mitchell, July 27.—P. P. Hamilton of Stratford acted as commissioner in taking the evidence of the invalid mother of Mrs. Jennie Wilson in the attempted cattle poisoning case. Mrs. Wilson was charged with sprinkling Paris green mixed with salt on the roadway near her house where the cattle of her neighbors, Mrs. Hodge and Mrs. Vivian, where feeding. Mrs. Hodge testified to having seen Mrs. Wilson scattering the stuff, and some of it having been analyzed as containing Paris green, the magistrate committed the accused for trial. Discovery of the deed was made in time to prevent the cattle eating the poison. The trial comes off Saturday next.

BALFOUR IS RETICENT

Cabinet Reviews the Sinking of the Knight Commander.

Premier, in the House, Said He Was Not Yet in a Position to Make An Authoritative Statement—Believes, However, That the Declaration of Paris in 1856 Contemplated the Abolition of Privateering.

London, July 27.—Premier Balfour, replying to a question in the House of Commons yesterday in regard to the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Russians off the coast of Japan, said enquiries were being made on the subject, but he was not yet in a position to make a statement. Replying to another question, the Premier said the Government was not aware of any convention concluded in 1901 between Turkey and Russia providing special conditions for the passage of the Dardanelles by Russian ships.

Abolition of Privateering.

Mr. Balfour, while disclaiming that he was giving an authoritative decision, said that he believed the declaration of Paris in 1856, contemplated the abolition of privateering, and that a neutral flag covers an enemy's merchandise, except when contraband of war. Dealing with the question of whether the Russian volunteer vessels being private ships commissioned by the State were different materially from privateers, the Premier said that the whole question of the status of the volunteer ships was now under discussion between Great Britain and Russia, and that it would not be desirable to discuss that point in the House of Commons at present.

Meeting of Cabinet.

London, July 27.—The sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Russian cruisers off Japan was discussed at a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday, held at the Foreign Office. Before the meeting Count Benckendorff, the Russian Ambassador, was closeted with Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, and discussed in detail the operations of the Russian cruisers in connection with neutral shipping, but as the Russian Embassy had not been officially informed by the Russian Government of the destruction of the Knight Commander, the Ambassador was unable to make any statement to the Foreign Secretary. The Knight Commander incident is attracting close official and public interest.

Notice Not Delivered.

London, July 27.—The Foreign Office had not heard of the seizure of the steamer Formosa yesterday afternoon, and while expressing regret, it says the only possible explanation consists in the fact that the Russian Government's orders to cease interfering with neutral vessels, have not yet reached the commanders of the volunteer fleet steamers, as the Russian Government has given the most explicit pledge that there shall be no more Red Sea seizures. The Formosa left Suez July 23, bound for Yokohama.

Staff Notice Sent.

London, July 27.—While the negotiations between Great Britain and Russia, respecting the Red Sea seizures, have been carried on in the most conciliatory manner the Associated Press learns that in the representations to the St. Petersburg Government, Foreign Secretary Lansdowne declared that Great Britain could not, in view of her treaty alliance with Japan, allow any interpretation to be placed on treaties relating to the Dardanelles, which would permit of the free passage of vessels of the Russian volunteer fleet from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean, with the view of their subsequent employment for war purposes.

Caught in Red Sea.

Suez, July 27.—The Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company's steamer Formosa has just arrived here flying the Russian naval flag, and with a prize crew on board. She was captured in the Red Sea by one of the vessels of the Russian volunteer fleet.

Another Ship Seized.

Liverpool, July 27.—The owners of the British steamer Catchas, bound from Puget Sound to Japan, have received a telegram from Hong Kong, reporting that the Catchas has been seized by the Vladivostock squadron. The steamer Catchas, belonging to the Alfred Holt fleet of Liverpool, sailed from Tacoma, Wash., July 9, and was due to arrive at Yokohama Wednesday or Thursday. She carried a considerable quantity of flour, consigned to Japanese firm, and also had on board much other general freight.

British Government Acts.

London, July 27.—The British Government is taking energetic action in the case of the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Vladivostock squadron. All information received by the Government tends to establish in the official mind that an outrage has been committed for which no excuse exists in international law. Those aware of the feelings of the ministry said last night that all the members of the Cabinet are in accord regarding the principle of the inviolability of innocent neutral shipping, as well as upon the principle that a neutral ship cannot be destroyed even if carrying contraband of war.

Will Include Compensation.

The demands which will be made upon the Russian Government will include compensation to the owners of the ship and to the owners of the goods on board the Knight Commander, an apology for the action of the Russian cruisers and an agreement that instructions be given which will prevent a repetition of such action. British ship-owners are up in arms over the dangers which shipping is now running, and are bombarding the Government with representations looking to the thorough protection of their interests.

Papers Grow Angry.

A majority of the morning papers, however, print editorials in an angry strain on the further reported seizures by the Russians and the delay in the release of the Malacca.

The Daily Mail's Suez correspondent says that the steamer Formosa will be released this morning.

It is rumored that Japanese warships have arrived in the Red Sea.

A Good Idea.

It is a good idea to keep in one's purse a list of the more imperative needs of the house—viz, the quantity and color of furniture covering needed for a chair that must soon be reupholstered, so that when a suitable piece of corduroy—which, by the way, wears like iron and is always handsome—or fax velours is found it need not be lost through a doubt of its availability.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1904.

KRUGER AND SIFTON.

Though the late President Kruger was looked upon as old-fashioned, bigoted, ignorant and even brutal, there were many who were inclined to give him credit for being well meaning and personally honest. His death, however, leaving behind him $5,000,000, has put an end to this charitable interpretation of his conduct, and has reduced him to the level of a rifton. Oom Paul, like the Minister of the Interior, was poor even to penury when he took office, and he had not a salary, a business, or any honest means of making money that would have paid his current expenses and enabled him in addition to accumulate millions. The wealth of the ex-president is explained by the fact that he had the power, not unused, of blackmailing the mining companies. Sifton has had dealings in kind of an unscrupulous character and very suspicious transactions with the railways. All this accounts for his ill-gotten wealth and illustrates the parallel.

Kruger in this aspect of his career was much on a par with a common variety of president of a South American republic. Some penniless adventurer by a successful revolution usurps the dictatorship and soon becomes a millionaire. In Canada it is only lately, since the coming of the new Liberals, that we have sunk to this level. Under Conservative rule, and during the administration of Mr. Mackenzie, there was no instance of a politician going into office poor and becoming wealthy in some mysterious manner while in power. Under the new regime such cases have been notorious in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec and in the Dominion arena. The grafters have flourished, and they who could provide the graffts have flourished with them. It is a sad state of moral decay to which our country has been degraded. All honest men must wish for a change that will sweep away this reproach.

The Ottawa Free Press has another bad attack of the cancerous growth which it describes as afflicting our body politic.

How long does the Minister of Militia intend to suppress Lord Dundonald's report, that he may pilfer the General's ideas and brag of them as being his own.

The Liberal Lindsay Post reprints the editorial from the Port Hope Guide protesting against further "casual advantages" to Senator Cox and the other grafters.

The Toronto Telegram thinks that the Port Hope Guide's denunciation of Senator Cox as a "grafter" is inconsistent with the Port Hope Guide's support of the Government which has delivered Senator Cox with all the casual advantages of his power over the Liberal party in this country.

The fact that Militia bandsmen at Ottawa who belong to the civil service are afraid to turn out to play for their late general is a very practical condemnation of the Government. They have official leave to play but are afraid the Ministry will avenge themselves on anyone showing sympathy with the exposer of Ministerial corruption.

The Ministerial press is whining that Lord Dundonald is helping the Opposition and attacking the Ministry. What do they mean? Lord Dundonald does not care a straw about our parties and has not uttered a word of party politics. He has only told a few plain truths in reference to his own business and in answer to his calumniators. Are we to understand that to speak the truth is an attack on the Ministry.

THE RIGHT NAIL ON THE HEAD.

Even if With the Wrong Hammer—A Public Service Performed.

The London Broad Arrow says:—

"It is all very well to look virtuous and invoke the support of the constitution. Politicians who adopt this line are the men who ride through it with a carriage and pair. The very fact that they show so much temper is a proof that it the hammer was a wrong one Lord Dundonald had hit the right nail on the head. That they have "an axe to grind" and he has none must tell in the long run.

"A distinguished soldier whose guidence is characteristic, an able organizer, and a born leader of men, the possessor of an honored name and a great position, he can have no motive in exposing an evil except one inspired by pure patriotism. Nor is it suggested that he has. And therein lies his strength and the strength of the empire which produced him. For he has performed a service in the course of pure military organization which must bear fruit, not only in Canada, but in the country. It has brought the British empire nearer to the creation of that imperial council of defence which is the ideal of all reformers, because it would reduce the influence of the party politician in military affairs to a minimum."

AN ACCURATE ACCOUNT.

Not One Word That Is Not Borne Out by the Evidence.

The following quotation from an article in the Blackwood's Magazine is given by the Ottawa Free Press:

"Lord Dundonald resented, with perfect reason, the interference of a Canadian minister with a certain appointment, and, being outspoken, as his illustrious ancestor, he protested against the minister's action, on the ground that he was confusing politics and military administration. The Canada government, on the other hand, bitterly resented Lord Dundonald's protest, and having pointed out that being merely its paid servant he was not privileged to express an opinion, summarily dismissed him. Sir Wilfrid Laurier enhanced the amenity of the situation by declaring that the general officer commanding the militia in Canada was a 'foreigner,' and Lord Dundonald had no option but to return home."

This the Free Press describes as "a tissue of deliberate falsehoods." Well, we challenge the Free Press, or anyone else, to point out one word that is not true. It is a bald statement of the facts.

THE OLD LIBERALS.

A Step Downward to Sir F. Borden and Mr. Fisher.

A writer in the Toronto Mail and Empire has unearthed a letter of instructions sent by Mr. John Sandfield Macdonald in August, 1862, as a member of the Macdonald-Sicotte administration, to the commandants of the militia districts. United States naval officers had wrongfully boarded and taken from the British ship Trent two men who were regarded as enemies to the republic. The action was resented and it seemed for a time that war was a possibility. Then, as when President Cleveland issued his "shirt-sleeves" message about Venezuela, it was deemed well to prepare for eventualities. New militia corps were organized and old ones were improved. Mr. Macdonald notified the officers of each battalion of the vacant commissions in their corps and asked them to forward the names of men they could recommend for the positions, "at the same time mentioning the age of each, and his aptitude by education, judgment and activity to discharge the duties of any superior grade in the service to which he may hereafter attain." Mr. Macdonald added: 'In doing this I ask you to bear in mind not only the qualifications I have suggested as requisite, but that your recommendation shall not be affected in any way by party or political or other undue consideration."

Mr. Macdonald was a Liberal, and a member of the Liberal administration. His letter is the severest condemnation of the state of affairs existing to-day, when commandants of corps have their recommendations set aside, not only on political grounds, but because of the family connection of the men selected by them for commissions. There is a great step downwards from John Sandfield Macdonald to Frederick W. Borden and Sydney Fisher.—Montreal Gazette.

PROTECT YOUR CREDITORS.

Merchant Should Insure Goods and Not Leave Risk to Creditors.

If anyone should contend that creditors of Canadian retail merchants are a hard-hearted lot, we might point him to an occurrence of last week. A retail merchant at Wakefield, north of Ottawa, in business for twenty years or more, and reputed to be worth somewhere between $10,000 and $15,000, was burned out, and his creditors agreed to accept fifty cents in the dollar from him as in full. The fact of a compromise was not remarkable—we hear of that sort of thing almost every day in the week—but the circumstances of this one were remarkable. It turned out that the merchant in question had buildings estimated to be worth $4,500 and a stock of merchandise valued at $15,000; and upon these he had insurance of only $3,000 while he owed to creditors more than $6,000. Now, when his assets in goods and buildings are swallowed up by fire, he fails back upon the forbearance of creditors, pays them one-half of what he owes them, and gets a quittance. Is this fair to his creditors? The man knew that fires occurred; he knew that fire insurance companies existed; he should have reflected that if his shop and its contents burned he could not pay his debts in full. What excuse, then, was there for him not to carry more insurance? It was his duty to himself and to his creditors; for the ashes of houses and fragments of burned or smoke-damaged goods are poor assets with which to pay debts.—Monetary Times.

A RIVAL FOR WINTER FAIR.

Ontario Fruit Growers' Association A November Show.

The arrangements already made for the provincial fruit, flower and honey show, which will be held in Toronto during the second week in November, indicate that it is likely to prove as important an event in its line as the big winter fair held yearly at Guelph. No effort is being spared to make each feature of the show the greatest of the kind that has ever been held in Canada. The Ontario Fruit Grower's Association has drawn up a liberal prize list and will pay the transportation charges one way on all exhibits of fruit sent to the show.

Special prizes will be offered for the best exhibit of fruit made by any agricultural society. It is expected many of the societies in the province will send their total exhibits from their fall fairs to this show. Arrangements have been completed to keep this fruit in cold storage. In this way, it is hoped to have representative exhibits of fruit from all parts of the province. Demonstrations in packing fruit will be given and bulletins will be issued describing the special qualities of each variety of fruit and stating whether it is best for cooking or eating purposes. In this way, householders will be enabled to secure the best varieties of fruits for their purposes. On the last day of the exhibition a big auction sale of fruit will take place.

The money offered for flowers is over 100 per cent. more than has ever before been offered in Toronto. About $1500 will be given in prizes in this section alone. The arrangements are in charge of a floral committee of which Mr. Edward Tyrrel, president of the Toronto Horticultural Society is chairman. The honey prize list is also a liberal one. Several prizes are offered for commercial packages.

Among the important gatherings that will take place at the time of the show will be the annual meeting of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association and the Ontario Bee Keepers' Association, while a meeting of delegates from the various horticultural societies of the province will also be held. The Ontario government has made a grant of $1000 to aid the exhibition, which has been supplemented by a grant of $200 from the city of Toronto.

Particulars regarding the show may be had by writing to the Secretary, Supt. H. B. Cowan, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

SHOOTING PAINS THROUGH THE BACK

Not a Day Without Suffering Until Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. C Noyes, for many years section foreman, and now flagman for the G.T.R. at Peterboro, Ont., states: "For twenty-one years I was section foreman on the C.P.R. and was exposed to all sorts of weather. As a result my kidneys became effected and there was scarcely a day that I was not troubled more or less. At times I would have sharp shooting pains through my back and would get so used up that I felt like giving up work. During this time I was also a great sufferer from constipation. As I had heard so much about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for kidney disease and constipation I began using them, and can say that I was entirely cured of my old troubles in a short time. I cannot say anything too good about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and never lose an opportunity of recommending them."

THE FANATICS.

French Canadian Premier Must Be Supported Against Orangemen.

This is what Le Soleil, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's organ, has to say of the Premier:

"The Grand Trunk Pacific has as its author Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a French-Canadian Catholic.

"Sir Wilfrid is sustained by fifty French-Canadian Catholics.

"The Grand Trunk Pacific is going to aggrandise and put in the first rank the Province of Quebec, a French-Canadian Catholic province.

"This will not go in the Province of Ontario, the hearth of Orangeism.

"If Sir Wilfrid's project should fall, it would fall beneath the blows of fanaticism."

IN THE PENINSULA.

How a Civilian Contractor Was Dragooned by a General.

A good story is told of the Duke of Wellington in the Peninsula war. A contractor was failing, as contractors would sometimes, to carry out his contract. He had agreed to supply a certain number of head of cattle to a part of the army commanded by General Hill, and they were not forthcoming. The contractor came with a woeful story to the commander-in-chief. Lord Hill had threatened to hang him if the cattle were not there by a certain day. "Did he say he would hang you?" asked Wellington. "He did indeed," was the indignant reply. "Then I strongly advise you to have the cattle there," returned Wellington, "for Hill is a man of his word." That closed the conversation and the cattle were on time. Some fishy and corrupt man was not allowed to play his dishonest pranks in those days even if he did represent the civil power. And our soldiers were not expected to win victories on murderous emergency rations.

It was the same gallant soldiers of whom another amusing but less tragic story was told. The Duke had just left the palace after standing sponsor for Prince Arthur, now the Duke of Connaught, and he met Hall. "Well, Duke, what's your godson like?" asked his old comrade in arms. "Like? Very bald and very red—very like you, Hill," replied the Duke. The general had not much hair and had a decidedly red face perhaps from blushing at the memory of his threat to the defaulting specimen of civil corruption.

USE OF CANALS.

Trent Waterway Not Fully Appreciated—Should be Completed.

By placing a sum in the supplementary estimates for improving the waterway on the line of the Georgian Bay canal, the government has taken the first really important forward step towards the realization of that project. It is over fifty years since it was first proposed as a practicable scheme. The route was a familiar one to the early voyageurs, and was that used by the Hudson's Bay Company, whose mighty fleet of canoes used to start yearly up the Ottawa from Lachine and cross by that way into Lake Superior, and thence by the Lake of the Woods, Lake Winnipeg, and so forth, to the Mackenzie River. Colonel By, a singularly astute man, who was the chief engineer of the Rideau canal and founder of Bytown, now Ottawa, is credited with having been the first to conceive the idea of canalizing that route as a military work. Previous to confederation work was actually commenced by the government of Canada, and much money spent, but the most that was then accomplished was to improve the navigation of the Ottawa, work that was not lost. The project has been frequently discussed, everything being in its favor but the cost, which has been placed by some engineering authorities as high as eighty million dollars. Canada has the reputation of leading in the matter of canal construction, and wonder is often expressed at her enterprise not having taken this obvious direction. One reason given for this work not being undertaken is that the large cities and shipping interests on the lakes were against it. Meantime, the Trent Valley Canal, having a large population to back it, though very much less important than the Georgian Bay canal, has been undertaken and carried well on towards completion. Largely as railways have superseded canals, the latter have not ceased to be planned and carried out. Next to Canada, Russia has the most magnificent system of river and canal waterways in the world. Then comes the United States, where in recent years the water system from the Gulf of Mexico to Lake Michigan has been so improved that Chicago hopes soon to be a seaport for ocean-going ships. Via New Orleans. In France, the project of connecting the Atlantic with the Mediterranean by a canal and river waterway has been revived.—Montreal Witness.

When a Man's Bashful

By OTHO B. SENGA

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

Mr. William Stevenson, in the small side seat at the end of the car, waited for the girl. She came in at the next station. He feigned absorption in his newspaper, but really lost no movement of the graceful figure, and managed to get a glimpse of the fresh color in her cheek and the pretty wave of her dark hair.

"She grows prettier every day," he remarked to the advertising column, "and I'm a goner."

He looked down the aisle and encountered the gaze of the girl. Her quickly averted eyes and heightened color were balm to his soul.

"Allah be praised!" he whispered, seemingly scanning the paper again. "That's the first indication that my lady is aware of my existence and I've sat in this same seat and watched for her every morning for exactly 185 days. Hang the conventions! I'd like to walk up to her and say: "Madam, would you be kind enough to give me your address? I intend to call upon you to win your love and eventually to marry you.' I wonder what she'd say."

"What do you ride sideways for?" cried a voice at his elbow. "Why don't you sit over here?"

Billy made a quick resolve. Bob Tennessee knew almost every one in Boston and was as white souled and honorable as if his profession were preaching the gospel instead of detecting criminals.

"Bob, go out and speak to the brakeman. When you come back look at the lady in the fifth seat from the rear, on the left side of the car. See if you know her."

Bob complied unquestioningly, but when he re-entered the car and looked toward the seat indicated he hurried past the astonished Billy and took the seat beside the girl, who greeted him warmly.

When the train drew in at the South station Bob looked up and waved a farewell to Stevenson, who stalked grimly out to the street.

"Bob Tennessee is a blatherskite," he muttered savagely. "I'd like to punch his head!"

He was still chafing under his wrongs when Bob sauntered into his office.

"You did me a good turn this morning, old boy," said Bob blithely.

"Go away," growled Billy; "I'm too busy."

"Stop writing a minute," whispered Bob. "I want to tell you about her."

The pen went busily scratching on, and Billy made no reply.

"Her name is Murdock—Grace Murdock."

Mr. Stevenson is serenely unconscious.

"She is assistant editor on Brinsley's Magazine," pursued Bob. "I've known her since she was a child. At one time I was terribly sweet on her older sister, but," sighing, "she preferred Tom Frevers."

"Showed her good taste," interposed Billy vengefully.

"'Let dogs delight to bark an' bite,'" quoted Bob soothingly. "Only that I'm a second John Rogers I'd never tell you that I'm to be on that same train tomorrow morning, and she says I may introduce you."

"Oh, don't trouble," loftily. "I may take an earlier train tomorrow morning."

"That's gratitude for you!" wailed Rob.

"It doesn't at all matter," indifferently, "and if it did I might find some way to attract her attention."

"Oh, of course, you might," retorted Bob witheringly. "You might forge a fit and fall at her feet, frothing at the mouth! That would undoubtedly attract her attention.'"

But Stevenson was impregnable to his sarcasm, and Bob departed.

Billy was of many minds that day. He half resolved to take a different train and in some way to make the acquaintance of the girl without Bob's assistance. Then, remembering the dignity of her bearing, he shivered at his own audacious thought. Diffidence was his one weakness. How he longed to possess Bob Tennessee's ready ease and absolute assurance. The self conflict ended in his taking the usual train, weakly relying upon Bob's promised introduction.

When the girl came in, looking prettier than ever, he waited feverishly for Bob. A wave of indignation swept over him when no Bob appeared. His anger overcame his diffidence. Bob had taken unfair advantage of the situation. Even now he might be somewhere on the train, enjoying his friend's disappointment and discomfiture. This thought spurred him on. Taking his cardcase from his pocket, he wrote on a card: "Our friend Bob promised to introduce me this morning. In his absence, may I not come and speak with you?"

A half dollar and a whispered instruction to the train boy, and the thing was done. Billy suffered agonies in a brief minute. His heart thumped against his ribs, and his No. 16 collar seemed four sizes too small. The girl read the pleading line, looked deliberately down the aisle and nodded brightly. He made his way to her side, feeling like a man just rescued from drowning.

"Isn't this a delightful morning, Mr. Stevenson?" as if they were old friends.

"You are very kind, indeed," irrelevantly. "I particularly wanted to meet you today, for I am going away tomorrow, and I want permission to write to you."

He took the plunge like a hero—not the slightest trace of the timidity that had given him the title of Bashful Billy among his college mates.

The girl caught her breath, but answered demurely, "I read all manuscripts that are sent to me."

"Yes, I know, but these will not be offered for publication, and I want something more than a printed slip in reply."

"And Bob calls this man bashful," thought the girl, but she only said, "I will consider the matter."

There was time for little else. The train came to a standstill, and Miss Murdock hurried away. Still, Billy felt that he had made good progress for a bashful man.

Late that afternoon Bob came hurrying into his office with apologies and protestations of regret.

"I had no chance to send a line to either you or Grace," he said, "and somehow, old fellow, you've made a good impression on her. She really wants to meet you."

"Never mind, Bob," answered Stevenson kindly. "I leave tomorrow for a three months' trip abroad. It will do just as well when I return."

"Oh, better, much better," returned Bob in a relieved tone. "She would forget all about you in that time. When you come back, I'll give you an introduction and a recommendation besides."

"You might put in the recommendations while I'm gone," poking his head into a closet, pretending to look for something, "and I say, Bob, make 'em strong. Tell all the good you know; the bad keep to yourself."

"No one could say anything but good of you, Billy," said Bob, with wonderling earnestness, "and if you weren't so confoundedly bashful you'd say it for yourself."

Billy had a very positive conviction that Miss Murdock would not mention the circumstance of the morning to Bob, and subsequent events proved the conviction well founded.

From London and Edinburgh, from Paris and Berlin, came long, bright letters over which Miss Murdock laughed and cried by turns as the writer touched upon the varying phases of life seen from the viewpoint of a keen understanding and a quick sympathy with humanity.

Her brief replies were not encouraging, but Billy's bashfulness was exceeded by his tenacity, and a foothold once gained he kept. He was in Berlin when he received a note that electrified him. "My vacation begins just as yours draws to a close. I leave Boston on the Commonwealth. We will likely pass each other in mideocean."

"Indeed we won't," exclaimed Billy. "I hereby vote myself an extension of time. I'll cable to the firm, and when the Commonwealth reaches Liverpool Billy will be on the dock."

And he was.

She saw him, towering above the crowd, and waved her hand.

He had no intention of doing anything so precipitate, but when he saw the earnest face turned so joyfully toward him something sprang up in his heart and jumped into his throat, and, making a hurried dash through the crowd, he caught her in his arms and kissed her.

"I couldn't help it, Grace," he whispered. "I love you, you know."

For a single second she faltered, aghast at the man's passionate utterance and at the publicity of her position. Then, womanlike, she rose to the occasion. "Have you a carriage waiting?" she asked calmly. "Let us get out of the crowd."

Seated in the carriage, she held him back from her with both hands pressing against his breast and gazed long and earnestly into his eyes. He knew his cause was won and remained silent. She dropped her hands into his and smiled tenderly. "For a bashful man, Billy, you certainly are"— But he gave her no opportunity to finish the sentence.

Billy cabled the news of his engagement to Bob Tennessee, who spent days in fruitless conjecture.

"I give it up," he said finally, "but for unparalleled nerve Billy the Bashful may 'go up head.'"

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Old Age a Fiction.

The time was, and not so long ago either, when men of sixty-five and seventy regarded themselves and were regarded by others as having reached that point when they should be willing to retire from the activities of life. Our conception of the man of seventy-five only a few years ago was that of a white haired patriarch who found pleasure only in reminiscences, the sectarian weeklies, checkers, dominos and his grandchildren. But the times have changed. The average man of seventy-five today is neither bent, feeble nor senile. He has not retired from the activities of life that he is aware of, nor has he any idea of retiring. Much less is he inclined to surrender to the younger people around him any of the responsibilities or pleasures of existence. He reads the sporting columns, plays golf, roots for his favorite baseball club and may perchance take a flier on the races. Moreover, he is if anything inclined to be more attentive to the ladies than he was at sixty, at forty or at thirty.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

An Important Difference.

Not long after a series of losses at sea on a certain steamship line two travelers were discussing transatlantic liners. One of the men preferred the C—— line, the other the T—— line, the one on which the repeated wrecks had occurred.

"There's one important difference," said the first, "that you don't seem to have considered, but which weighs strongly with me."

"What is that?"

"Why, the C—— line guarantees to take you across, but the T—— line guarantees to take you only so far as it goes."

He Found It.

"Always," said the astute news editor to the new reporter—"always be on the lookout for any little touch of humor that may brighten up our columns."

That evening the new reporter handed in an account of a burglary in a butcher's shop which commenced, "Mr. Jeremiah Cleaver, the well known butcher, has been losing flesh rapidly of late."

OUR RHODES SCHOLAR.

E. R. Paterson, B.A., Awarded the Coveted Honor by the University of Toronto —"A Fine Fellow."

Ernest Riddell Paterson, B.A., son of John A. Paterson, K.C., Toronto, has been awarded the Rhodes Scholarship at the special meeting of Toronto University Senate. Mr. Paterson was born Sept. 1, 1881, and was educated at Harbord Collegiate Institute, taking a scholarship there at the age of 16. At the university he took honors in classics, which is his favorite course of study, and which he intends to pursue at Oxford, whither he goes in the fall. He graduated in 1902, in which year he was editor of Varsity. He has not despised the accomplishment of verse and is the author of several graceful poems. A fellow-student describes him as possessed of "splendid literary ability." He was a prominent member of the Literary Society, in which he held several positions, as he also did in the college classes.

In the performance of the Greek play, "Antigone," some years ago, at the university, he took a prominent part. As a speaker, both in language and delivery, he has achieved a high place, and he is particularly well read in general literature.

Not only for scholarship are the Rhodes awards made, personal qualities, athletic standing and character all being reckoned. Mr. Paterson is a man after Dr. Arnold's own heart, of whom Tom Hughes and Charles Kingley might be proud. Six feet high, weighing 175 pounds, he has held the tennis championship of Ontario several times, and also gained that of Quebec. In Rugby football he has a fine reputation as a wing player.

In personal reputation, the testimony of his friends is enthusiastic.

"He's a fine fellow. No greater favorite in his year. An extremely popular appointment. The choice of everybody who knew anything of the people. Very polished and gentlemanly. His moral character is of the best." These are a few of the opinions given by the Delta Upsilon Fraternity of which he continues a member, and over which he lately presided.

The fraternity was quite jubilant over the event, and celebrated the occasion by having a glorious smash-up of the hall windows.

Mr. Paterson is a full member of Bloor street Presbyterian Church, and a teacher in the Sunday school. He does not use tobacco or alcohol, and is very studious. While he has settled nothing definitely regarding his future career, since leaving the university, he has filled a position in the Imperial Life insurance office, and has passed the first actuarial examination.

When questioned respecting his future he stated that he had no definite plans. He will return to Canada when he has finished his Oxford course, if his present intention holds good. His family are very much pleased about the appointment, and he was evidently much gratified himself, while modestly refusing to make any statement.

No special examination was required for the scholarship, the university degrees being accepted by the Oxford authorities under the terms of the bequest.

years old, though his somewhat grizzled locks and thoughful and refined features present the appearance of more advanced age. Scene Not Very Impressive.

The Hague, July 27.—The train bearing the body of the late President Kruger arrived yesterday. Large crowds were at the station. The Court Chamberlain, in the names of the Queen and the Prince Consort, laid on the coffin a beautiful wreath by a ribbon inscribed with their initials. The scene was not very impressive. Spectators some times raised their hats, but they smoked and bore an air of idle curiosity. The only sign of genuine sorrow observed was among the women.

Village Wiped Out.

London, July 27.—The Daily Mail publishes a despatch from Taurus, Asia Minor, saying that on July 13 the well-known chief, Cheikh Salan, attacked and destroyed the village of Oetchkilissa. Twenty-five persons were killed, including a priest and servants attached to a convent. Women were violated and taken into slavery. The despatch says that massacres are expected in the Sandjak of Bayasid and immediate help is urgently called for.

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Will Tour the Upper Lakes.

On Monday, Mr. William Flavelle, town, and Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto, left with their families for the north country to enjoy a ten days' cruise on the beautiful waters north of Minden. Mr. William Flavelle took with him his five children and their young friend, Master Gordon Cooper, of Winnipeg, and Mr. J. W. Flavelle added three to the happy party of youngsters. Tom Massaw was taken along as chief and guide, and the equipment filled a baggage car, three large canoes and three capacious tents forming part. The party proceeded by rail to Gelert station and thence by waggon to Minden, where the boats were launched. With good weather a happy and beneficial holiday is assured.—Lindsay Post.

TO BE TRIED FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Jas. Dunn, of Campbellford, in Jail at Cobourg.

James Dunn, of Campbellford, will have to stand his trial on the charge of manslaughter. The coroner's jury found that Fraser Dunn came to his death from injuries caused by ill-treatment on the part of James Dunn. The accused has been transferred to the County jail at Cobourg, where the trial will take place this fall.

REGIMENTAL ORDERS.

The Regiment to Attend St. John's Church on Sunday.

The following order has been issued by Lieut.-Col. J. W. Miller, C.O., of the 57th Regiment:—

All officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 57th Regiment are required to parade in divine service order at the drill shed on Sunday morning next for the purpose of attending service, at 10.15 a.m.

By order,
D. WALKER, (Capt.)
Adjutant.

DIED FROM DIPHTHERIA.

Delemere, Son of Mr. Geo. Stevens, Died at Hospital.

The death occurred about four o'clock this morning in St. Joseph's Hospital of Delamure Stevens, the six-year-old son of Mr. George Stevens, Ashburnham. The child was taken to the Hospital on Monday night suffering from diphtheria, and gradually grew worse until this morning.

The funeral took place from the Hospital this morning at twelve o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

Obituary.

The news comes of the death at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, of Mr David Lemay, jr., at the age of 50 years. He was a son of our old townsman, Mr. D. Lemay, and had resided in Toronto for many years. When in town he was engaged for a time at the local post office as mailing clerk. He was here a few week ago and in apparent good health, but succumbed to an attack of fever, culminating in severe prostration. The notice of the funeral appears in another column. Deceased was a brother of Mrs. H. LeBrun.

PAINTERS' UNION.

Local Union Formed on Monday—New Scale of Prices.

A well attended meeting of the painters of the town was held on Monday night in the Simcoe street hall, and a union was formed, under the management of Mr. Geo. A. Sloan, a very prominent man in union circles. It was decided to apply to the employers for an increase in their scale of wages, the minimum rate to be $2 a day for 9 hours. Several employers have already expressed their willingness to agree to this, and there is every prospect for the union's future success. Officers were elected, and a list will appear in tomorrow's issue.

LAST MEETING

Of McMaster Evangelistic Band at Murray-st. Church.

Notwithstanding the great heat the church was again filled to its utmost capacity and many who desired could not gain admission to the final meeting last night.

The proceedings partook of the same character as the previous gatherings and were marked by the same simple and plain presentation of the truth. It is a significant fact that such services should have proved so attractive to large audiences at a time of the year which is generally considered unpropitious. The leader briefly referred to this fact in his opening remarks and expressed the gratitude of the Band to those of all churches who had contributed by their presence to make the meetings the great success they had been. He also referred to the more than kind treatment the Band had received from the local press and said they had never received better consideration or treatment in any place in the Province.

Very feelingly too he expressed the gratitude of himself and every member of the Band to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bastow, who is so soon to take his departure from the town, and stated that his loving unselfish and devoted aid had so impressed itself on them that they would carry its recollection to their last hour, and so the reverend gentleman's influence would be spread for years to come in places and amongst people he had never seen.

Addresses were then given by Messrs Hilts and Nobles on the folly of a too great regard for earthly success and the exclusion of eternal interests from men's calculations.

The quartette sang by special request, "Blue Galilee" and "I am the Shepherd True," and Mr. Williamson rendered "Calvary in his usual effective style.

A strong appeal by Mr. Cameron brought the proceedings to a close, but not before a large number of enquirers had found their way to the ante rooms.

At the request of the leader, the congregation joined very heartily in singing "Shall we gather /at the river." No one who has attended these services can have remained unhelped by them, and there are many in town who will not only wish the Band God-speed, but "au revoir."

ANOTHER DROWNING ACCIDENT

Wm. Ives, Only 22 Years Old, Drowned While Bathing.

CLUNG FIERCELY TO CHUM

Accident Happened at Breeze's, Stony Lake, About 11 O'clock Yesterday Morning--Remains Were Taken to Toronto.

The old saying that trouble never comes single handed was plainly evidenced last night, when word was received from Stony Lake that another drowning accident had happened yesterday, and that a young man from Toronto, Mr. Wm. Ives, had lost his life. He and his two friends, Mr. Blackie and Mr. McGill, went to Breeze's cottage at Stony Lake on Monday, intending to spend a few weeks holidays there. They went into the lake to bathe yesterday morning, and all appeared to be good swimmers, the unfortunate young man included, who was stroking the English side stroke, and appeared to be right at home. When only a short distance out from shore Mr. Blackie inquired of Mr. Ives if he was all right, but the latter replied that he was giving out and called to Mr. Blackie to come back, which he immediately did, and caught hold of Mr. Ives, whose strength had failed him. Blackie called to McGill to get help, as he could not hold him up much longer. McGill quickly got to shore and ran to a boat house, but it was empty, and he then returned to help Blackie, but before he reached them they sank. Ives clung to Blackie and the latter had much difficulty in freeing himself from the drowning man's grasp, his bathing suit being torn into ribbons by the fierce hold. He managed to get to shore, and was so badly used up that he was in bed until this morning. Ives' body was recovered about twelve minutes after it disappeared, by the aid of a grawling line, and men worked on him for two hours in the hope of resuscitating him, but their efforts were fruitless.

The accident happened shortly before eleven o'clock, and it cast a gloom over the whole surrounding lake, as it was the first this season, and the fact that such a promising young man should lose his life there. The late Mr. Ives was a commercial traveller and represented a Toronto gents' furnishing establishment. He was only 22 years old and was very popular amongst his fellow travellers and all with whom he came in contact. His father, who is a merchant at Toronto Junction, was wired the sad intelligence last night, and came down this morning to convey the remains back to Toronto this afternoon.

Mr. J. Comstock, undertaker, went up to the scene of the accident last last night, and the body was brought in on the Lakefield train this morning, accompanied by the deceased's two chums, who are feeling very badly over the affair. The deceased first intended to go down the St. Lawrence River for his holidays, but was persuaded by the other young men to go to Stony Lake with them, and thus they feel the blow more severely.

The remains were viewed at Comstock's undertaking rooms by Coroner Gray this morning, and after hearing the particulars he did not deem an inquest necessary.

The remains of the late young man were taken to Toronto Junction on the 5.10 C.P.R. train by the deceased's father, and his two chums, Messrs. Blackie and McGill.

PRETTY CHURCH WEDDING.

Mr. L. A. Halley and Miss Lillian May Millard Married.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated this afternoon in St. John's church at 2.30 o'clock, by the rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson, the contracting parties being Mr. L. A. Halley and Miss Lillian May Millard. Mr. Halley has been a resident of Peterborough for a couple of years, and conducts a painting and decorating business on Aylmer street. He also belongs to the 57th band, and is a member of St. John's choir, and his many friends will extend to the young couple their best wishes. The bride came out from England only a short time ago. Mr. and Mrs. Halley will reside in town.

EXPULSION OF IROQUOIS.

Chief Paudash Supported in Views as to Mississagas and Iroquois.

The Toronto Globe contains the following letter from Col. H. C. Rogers:—

To the Editor of the Globe: In view of the discussion at the last annual meeting of the Ontario Historical Society concerning the topic of a paper read by me on behalf of Paudash, Chief of the Mississagas of Rice Lake, and of further important material with respect to it lately come to hand, I would ask your forbearance in order that I may present the case for the Mississagas, as it at present stands for the consideration of the members of the O.H.A. and of your readers generally. Paudash complained that no attention had been paid historical or otherwise, by writers or the public at large, to the expulsion of the Iroquois from Central Ontario by the Mississagas, and to the appropriation of their hunting grounds by the latter. Naturally, there was considerable doubt as to the truth of this contention, some members going so far as to regard it as impossible, while others condemned it as unwarranted by history. Before bringing the paper to the notice of the society I asked a friend to consult Oronhyatekha, thinking in this way to give the Iroquois side of the argument as well. Oronyatekha was directly at variance with Paudash on all the important points. Quite recently I received from Miss Josephine Smith, the editress of Cosmos, the following statement, with a comment attached by her. It reads as follows:—Extract from the report of Messrs. Richard E. Pennefather (Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs for the Province of Canada.) Froome Talfourd and Thomas Worthington, appointed Commissioners in 1856 to enquire into and report upon certain Indian matters.

"After the expulsion of the Five Nations from their conquests on the Ottawa and in western Canada, the Otchipwes and their brethren, the Mississagas or Eagle tribe seem gradually to have moved down from their hunting grounds in the upper lakes, and to have taken the place of the Neutral Nation and other tribes, who had been either extirpated or dispersed by the Iroquois. They thus overspread the country lying between the Ottawa, Lake Huron and Lake Ontario, and extended themselves along the northern shore of Lake Erie."

To this Miss Smith has appended the following comment:—"The above seems to verify Chief Paudash's statements in same connection."

From this it is evident, first of all, that, contrary to received opinion, the Iroquois, or, as generally named, the Mohawks, were as a matter of fact "expelled." The Mississaga version is that the Mohawks, extending northerly into Lake Huron, came into conflict with the Mississagas, an Ojibway (Chippewa or Shawnee) tribe, which had long before crossed into the Lake Huron country from the Ohio valley at Boweeting (Sault Ste Marie). Finding that it was a case of life or death as with the lately exterminated Hurons, they grappled with their assailants, and by force of numbers and the courage of desperation succeeded in driving them down the (Trent) waterway to Onigaming (the Carrying Place) whence the Mohawks departed to their own country. That the Mississagas occupied this district thereafter is borne out by the fact that at this day the Mississagas (Chippeway) extend at intervals from Brockville in the east to Port Credit in the west. Mohawk settlements now existing there are those founded upon lands bought by the Government from the Mississagas after the Revolutionary War, when the Mohawks, as allies of the British were compelled to seek a refuge in Canada. Unexpected as this turn of affairs is in comparison with what we have always been led to believe, it seems too interesting and important to disregard, and as I have been following the matter up on behalf of Chief Paudash I thought it a pity to allow our material to go to waste at a time when general interest is aroused concerning it. I only trust that this statement of the case, with authorities, may have some material value on settling a question which hitherto has not so far as I am aware been considered seriously.

H. C. ROGERS.

FOOT GUARDS RECEPTION

WILL ARRIVE SUNDAY MORNING AT 5 O'CLOCK.

Both Regiments to Attend Service—Sacred Concert in Victoria Park in Afternoon.

A meeting of the officers of the 57th Regiment was held last evening in the mess rooms and arrangements completed for the entertainment of the Governor-General's Foot Guards of Ottawa, who will arrive here on Sunday morning about five o'clock, and remain over Sunday and Monday. It is earnestly requested that every officer, non-commissioned officer and man of the 57th be at the station in uniform to meet them and give them a right royal reception. It will be remembered that on the 57th Regiment's visit to Ottawa a few years ago a most cordial welcome was tendered them, and they should reciprocate the compliment. The two regiments will form up on Central Park at 10.15 in the morning for the purpose of attending divine service in St. John's church and St. Peter's Cathedral. They will parade down George st. to Charlotte st., where the Roman Catholic portion of the Regiments will turn west on Charlotte street, escorted by the band of the 57th, proceed west to Reid street, and then up Reid to St. Peter's Cathedral. The remaining portion of the Foot Guards and Regiment will turn east on Charlotte street, to Water, up Water to Hunter street and east on Hunter to St. John's church. After service the two parties will meet at the corner of George and Hunter streets and proceed to the Central Park, where they will be dismissed.

On Sunday afternoon a sacred concert will be given in Victoria Park by the band of the Foot Guards, commencing at 3 o'clock.

On Monday the steamer City of Peterborough will be at the disposal of the visiting regiment, and it will make short trips over the lift lock, commencing at 9 o'clock from the Wolfe street wharf.

In the evening a banquet will be tendered the officers of the Foot Guards by the local officers, at the mess rooms, and the visitors will leave about 9 o'clock.

It is hardly necessary to say anything to our citizens about receiving the guards well. We have always done that, and this occasion will be no exception. The Foot Guards are one of the finest regiments in Canada, and we appreciate the honor they are doing us by visiting our town. They were here a number of years ago, and our citizens will make their visit this time surpass the previous one.

EXAMINER DEFEATED.

Auburns the Winners by the Score of 8—7.

The Auburn baseball team and the Examiner team played a game of baseball last night on the Oval, and the former were the victors by 8-7. The score looks very close, but when one considers how hard Melville Jenkinson Hutchinson pleaded with Manager Odle to not beat them badly, if they wouldn't let them win, we can quite understand it. The Auburns certainly deserve great credit for the scientific game they put up. They heard that there was a prospect of a return game, and wishing to get a good gate, allowed the Examiner team to remain a few runs ahead until the last innings, when they easily tallied the required number.

Poor old cotem! We told you so! But we are glad the Auburns were so thoughtful and let you off so easily. It was very kind of them and you should appreciate it and give them the credit they deserve instead of telling the hard luck tale of the Lindsay Post. Take your defeat like men (just as the Review does when it gets trounced) and after this don't aspire to enter the eastern league this season.

A full practice of the Quaker football team is called for to-morrow evening at the Oval at 6.45 sharp.

TROUBLE AT ARDENDALE.

C.P.R. Trains Delayed Because of the Sinking Bridge.

The Canadian Pacific Railway officials continue to have trouble with the sinking bridge at Ardendale, and it seems almost impossible to fill up the hole with ballast. Trains continue to cross, but at a very slow rate of speed, so much so that passenger trains are from two to five hours behind time reaching Peterborough. In order to avoid delay the engineer will divert the track a few hundred feet until the bridge is put on a solid base.

PAID INTEREST AT 350 P.C.

Two Women Borrowed Money Under Peculiar Circumstances.

Before Judge Morson yesterday at Toronto there was revealed another instance of the high rates of interest charged persons whose circumstances occasionally make it necessary to call upon others for monetary assistance.

Mrs. Elizabeth Toplis of 25 Maple avenue and her daughter Mary were sued by William Petley for $275 on a promissory note for one month. The defendants' claim was that they had borrowed three sums, $50, on which they were to pay $40 interest; $40, with $35 interest, and $15, for three months, on which the interest was to be $13. Lawyer Lamport claimed that this was the most extortionate kind of usury, the rates being 82 per cent., 80 per cent. and 350 per cent. respectively. They had paid $100 on this, and had signed a note in favour of Mr. Petley of $275, which was $100 more than they owed. This was explained on the grounds that the women knew nothing at all about business and were so frightened of the husband getting a knowledge of what they had been doing that they were willing to sign anything to keep Mr. Petley quiet. They had paid money to him for which he had never given a receipt of any kind, and they had not known enough to ask for it.

"What is the result when you get in to the teeth of shark?" asked Judge Morson. "You are generally eaten up, aren't you? That's the result in this case. In common everyday language my friend, you are up against it. Judgment for the plaintiff with costs."

The case may be appealed.

Abandoned Children to Wolves.

Edmonton, N.W.T., July 27.—Sergeant McLeod, Fort Chippewan, arrived in town on Saturday in charge of an Indian prisoner, charged with abandoning his two children, a boy four year old, and a girl under two at Fond du Lack on Lake Athabasca. When the children were missed by neighbors a search was made, and they were found to have been devoured by wolves, only their clothing remaining. Sentence of two years' imprisonment was passed by the judge.

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

Copyright, 1903, by F. R. Toombs

"It is well spoken," said Paipak. "Let my brother Domitan, next in the line of chiefs, who will be your chief if I should die, explain his action."

All eyes were turned toward Domitan.

"O chief, my brother," he cried, "and captains of the Zannucks, hear me and believe me! When we started in our boat to the island cave to obtain the treasure and bring it here, there was no thought against our brother, the greatest chief the Zannucks ever had. We love him well, but we drank much wine, and in our wine madness thought to overcome him and obtain the treasure. In our right minds we would not think of this. Humbly do we seek pardon of our chief. We promise faithful allegiance. We will fight by his side evermore."

There was a murmur, and all eyes turned to Paipak.

"It will be well if this is true," he said. "I trust my brothers again. I wish no confusion now. We will hasten to meet the soldiers of the ameer."

There was little delay. Horses were being led in from nearby fields, and men with arms were gathering. On the road to the southward they formed, and it seemed a formidable array. First rode Paipak, with Harvey and Orskoff, mounted on fresh horses. After them rode a hundred men, divided in bands of twenty-five, each under a captain. Then came another hundred under Domitan, these being divided the same way.

Harvey had never experienced so difficult a ride. At times they seemed on the verge of going over a cliff and hurling themselves a hundred feet or more to certain death, but the rugged little horses seemed to know every inch of the way and found stepping places where a man could not see they wound around the perpendicular scarps of mountains.

"I wouldn't like to do this for a living," said Harvey. "I prefer to sell windmills."

"This is real mountaineering," answered Orskoff. But their eyes did not meet as they spoke, for Harvey, who was ahead, did not dare to turn his head.

In crossing table lands they traveled in sections, and Domitan often came up and spoke to Paipak. He had lost none of his surliness. Harvey could not understand why Paipak so easily forgave the man who wanted to kill him. Orskoff explained that he had talked with the captains and learned that Domitan was much admired for his many exhibitions of bravery.

"It is a good thing for us that Domitan is not chief," said Orskoff. "He hates us sorely."

They camped at night in a ravine, and the cooks of the companies prepared a meal consisting mainly of a sort of cake and coffee. After partaking of a goodly quantity Orskoff and Harvey lay down near Paipak and went to sleep.

In the morning, refreshed, the cavalcade set out and passed another day in even more difficult traveling. Another night they camped on an open field, and on the third day they came to rest on a cliff overlooking the Siloon pass.

CHAPTER XX.

THE ATTACK ON THE CARAVAN.

IN the morning, after waiting and watching all night, the caravan was discovered slowly making its way along the pass. Paipak called Harvey and Orskoff to him at the edge of the cliff.

"We will attack the caravan in this way," he said. "My men are now divided, and one-half is under my brother Domitan, who is very brave and a good officer. His section will go up the pass to head off the camels if they bolt and run beyond our reach. My own section will attack at this spot. You will be with me."

"I should say so," said Harvey. "We want to be in this business from start to finish."

"But it would be safer to remain hidden."

"It would be impossible. Orskoff is a fighting man and would not remain idle while his sweetheart is in danger. I am not a fighting man, but I could not remain in hiding while you were fighting for the girl I love."

Domitan came up.

"It will be well for us to plan, my brother," he said. "The caravan will soon be here."

"We have already planned," said Paipak sternly. "You will take your men farther up the pass. Lie in wait there. If the camels bearing the young women escape, you can capture them. I will remain here and attack."

"Heretofore I have been asked in council," said Domitan surlily.

"You will obey," said Paipak.

"It is evident," said Harvey to Orskoff, "that, though he forgives, he does not forget."

Domitan soon had his men under way. They took a winding path through the woods leading to the pass.

"I trust there will be as little bloodshed as possible," said Harvey to Paipak. "We want to get the girls, but do not wish to commit unnecessary murder. These soldiers are simply obeying orders, as your own men are doing."

"We will save your women, but the rest of the matter must be left to us. I see by the size of the caravan that there is much treasure."

The caravan came on. Riding ahead was an officer of the ameer in brilliant garb. Following him were twenty horsemen, all well armed. Then came two camels, each led by a soldier. The first bore in its howdah the girl intended for the bride of the prince. Alma was in the second one. She still wore the uniform of the inspector general of prisons. Then came twenty more horsemen, a string of camels and mules bearing merchandise of all kinds and horses on which rode Turkish, Persian and Hebrew merchants.

Silently Paipak led his men down a steep and difficult path. They waited in hiding till the head of the caravan was opposite. A peculiar cry from Paipak sent them dashing into the road. Paipak's men had left their horses above on the cliff and were at a disadvantage, but they outnumbered the Bokharans. At the first volley three of the ameer's soldiers fell from their horses. A terrific outcry followed, but the officer in command was brave and calm and soon rallied them. They formed in a circle around the camels bearing the two girls, while the merchants and the camels bearing their goods scuttled for safety. Paipak rallied his men and led them in a ferocious onslaught, but the direct and steady fire from the mounted riflemen of the ameer sent a dozen of them to the ground.

Paipak shouted out his commands and formed his men for a rush, but the ameer's men were first, and the horses came dashing upon the Zannucks. For a time it looked like a victory for the Bokharans. Orskoff and Harvey were compelled to run aside when the ameer's horsemen came upon them.

The battle of the ameer's men was being waged chiefly by the officer in command, who seemed not to know the word fear and who seemed to be impervious to bullets. Mounted on a fine horse, he led every charge. Harvey saw that so long as the Bokharans were inspired by this officer they were well nigh invincible. He watched his chance to cope with the commander in person.

At last it came. The officer, in making a dash through the forces of the Zannucks, was beset by several of them with spears. He brought his horse suddenly to a halt, tried to swerve, and the horse came down almost on his haunches. With a quick leap Harvey sprang upon the horse behind the officer. Spears about to be hurled were lowered, and the men stood in amazement. The officer tried to turn, to reach Harvey with his sword, but the iron arms of the American were around his neck, and he was soon choked into submission. With a shout of victory Harvey hurled him to the ground.

"Now, Paipak! Now!" he cried, and with a rush the Zannucks attacked again. Their onslaught was so ferocious that the soldiers of the ameer fled along the pass, to be met by Domitan with the remaining hundred.

"Victory!" cried Harvey. "Victory!"

He sped to the camels, as did Orskoff, and at the command of Koura, who could manage the beasts, the camels knelt. Alma and Koura were soon in their lovers' arms.

"My darling! My darling! You are saved!" cried Harvey. "The Bokharans have been defeated!"

"They would not have been," said Orskoff, "but for the brains of your American."

"How is it you are on Bokharan soil against the command of the czar, my captain?" asked Koura.

"To save you, my sweet one; to save the girl I love. I learned my duty from the American."

So absorbed were they in their greetings that a cry from the Zannucks did not reach them. Happening to turn his head, Harvey saw the form of Paipak stretched upon the ground.

"Good heavens! Paipak killed!" he exclaimed.

He rushed to the chief and found that he was severely wounded.

"Who knows anything about surgery?" he asked. As no one answered, Harvey knelt beside the chief and began dressing the bullet wound in his side.

"Is it the last of me, my friend?" said Paipak.

"Perhaps not. I'm pretty good at this sort of thing. Be patient, and we'll see what can be done."

The hoofs of a horse pounding the road caused them to look up. Domitan soon appeared.

"How goeth the fight here?" he demanded. "We have defeated the soldiers of the ameer."

"And so did we," said one of the captains, "but Paipak, our chief, is wounded."

"Paipak wounded!"

They led Domitan to his brother. There was no sympathy in his dark face.

"Art thou wounded to thy death, my brother?"

"This American friend saith he can do much, yet I fear the bullet has reached a spot that kills."

"It is customary for a dying chieftain to proclaim his successor. I am thy eldest brother and so will become chief."

Already the eyes of Paipak were glazing, and he was growing weaker.

"Yes, thou art chief," he whispered.

Then, motioning to his captains to gather round, he said: "Domitan is chief. I die."

Domitan, as soon as he was convinced that his brother was dead, became a changed man.

"Zannucks," he shouted, "I am thy chief! Obey me as thou obeyed my brother, and I will make thee rich with the spoils of the caravans. We will pay no taxes to the ameer, but will give him battle in the mountains and kill his soldiers. And thou, American and Muscovite, shalt become my slaves and wait upon me in the palace I will build. I shall not be called chief, but king, and the prettiest of the girls we have rescued from the Bokharans shall be my queen."

"Nonsense!" said Harvey. "Your brother promised that we should be sent to the coast safely."

"Let my brother fulfill his promise. I am chief, and thou art now my prisoners. Obey me or thy life will go as did my brother's."

Harvey made a gesture as if to draw his pistol, and Domitan sprang upon him.

"The other! Seize the other! Bind them both!" he cried.

Alma and Koura screamed with terror as they saw their gallant lovers almost buried under the Zannucks that buried themselves upon them. In a few minutes Harvey and Orskoff were securely bound.

"Dogs of unbelievers!" cried Domitan, shaking his fist in their faces. "Thou interfered with my plans before! Remember the cave! Now will I pay in good coin! Slaves, forever shalt thou serve me!"

Harvey did not answer. He looked at Alma. The poor girl was trembling with terror, and tears were pouring down her cheeks.

"Cheer up, my darling!" he said to her. "We will soon be out of this!"

The clatter of horses on the road could be heard, and the force Domitan had left fighting came up.

"We routed them well," said one of the captains. "What! Is Paipak killed?"

"I am thy chief!" said Domitan.

"But there was treasure in the caravan! Where are the camels of the merchants?"

"Below. They fled. After them, and bring them back!"

Fifty started, and the remainder prepared to bury the dead. It was now late in the day, and Domitan was eager to get his caravan off the highway lest a returning force of Bokharans turn victory into defeat.

"We have two of the best camels of the ameer," he said. "We cannot take them up the side of the cliff. We must travel by way of the road farther up. We will arrange for the burial of the dead, foes as well as friends. Remove all trace of the fight."

The two girls were tenderly cared for, Domitan studying them carefully, as if to decide which was the more beautiful.

"There is my queen," he said, pointing to Alma. "The Georgian is beautiful, but this one, this Muscovite, suits me. I will make her my wife."

"Not much," said Harvey. "There's going to be another deal all around before that takes place."

"Dog! Pig! Be silent!" growled Domitan.

A meal was served, and the two girls were royally treated. A dozen soldiers waited upon them.

After this delay Domitan ordered his men to move, and the entire caravan, captured camels, horses and all, withdrew from the highway and made camp in the thick forest that formed the border of the pass. The horses were left upon the cliff in charge of a few men, and camp was made for the night. Plans for removing the booty to the Zannuck village could be made in the morning. Sentinels were stationed, and a guard was placed over the two girls. Harvey and Orskoff, bound, were thrust under a bush and left there.

"This is terrible!" groaned Orskoff. "We have failed, with all our planning."

"Sh-h," whispered Harvey. "Make them think we are sleeping."

"The fellow has another plan," thought Orskoff.

BROKEN PARTY LINES

Over Mr. Maclean's Amendments to the Railway Act.

Several Members on Both Sides of the New Questions—Mr. R. L. Borden Voted Against Two of Mr. Maclean's Amendments—Three Division Lists Which Show Just How Members Stood With Regard to Proposed Changes.

Ottawa, July 27.—In the House yesterday morning, Dr. Sproule, as a question of privilege, inquired of the Premier whether it was the intention of the Government to adjourn the House from 6 until 9 o'clock last night, instead of meeting at eight o'clock, as usual, in order to enable the members to attend the farewell demonstration to Lord Dundonald. The Premier replied that at this late date of the session he thought the best way for members to serve the country was to attend to the business of the House.

Railway Act Amendment.

Upon the motion for the third reading of Mr. Fitzpatrick's bill amending the Railway Act Mr. Maclean again brought up the numerous amendments which he offered in committee. As he could not under the rules, however, speak more than once, he handed various amendments to other members of the Opposition, who moved them.

The first amendment, in the name of Mr. Blain, had for its object the subjection of express companies to the control of the Railway Commission. The amendment was lost on a vote of 33 yeas and 72 nays, on the following division:

Express Amendment Division.

Yeas—Armstrong, Avery, Bell, Bennett, Blain, Boyd, Broder, Clancy, Cochrane, Culbert, Earle, Ganong, Gilmour, Gourley, Halliday, Henderson, Ingram, Kaulbach, Lancaster, Maclean, McGowan, Morin, Porter, Puttee, Reid (Grenville), Richardson, Robinson (Elgin), Schell, Scots, Sproule, Thompson (Grey), Tolton, Wilson. Total—33.

Nays—Angers, Barker, Basinet, Beith, Blanchet, Borden (Halifax), Borden (Sir Frederick), Bourbonnais, Brodeur, Brown, Bruce, Bruneau, Bureau, Champagne, Christie, Copp, Costigan, Cowan, Delisle, Demers (Levis), Erb, Fielding, Fitzpatrick, Fortier, Gauvreau, Gervais, Gibson, Grant, Harty, Heyd, Holmes, Hughes (Kings, P.E.I.), Hyman, Johnston (Cape Breton), Kendall, Lang, Laurier (Sir Wilfrid), Lavergne (Drummond and Arthabaska), Leblanc, Lennox, Loy, MacDonald, MacLaren (Huntingdon), McCarthy, McCool, McGugan, McIsaac, McLennan, Marcil (Bagot), Matheson, Mignault, Morrison, Murray, Oliver, Paterson, Prefontaine, Pringle, Riley, Rosamond, Ross (Ontario), Ross (Victoria, N.S.), Ross (Yukon), Russell, Stephens, Stewart, Talbot, Thompson (Haldimand and Monck), Tobin, Tolmie, Turgeon, Wade, Wright. Total—72.

Where Parties Split.

Messrs. Scott, Wallace, Schell and Puttee, on the Government benches, voted for, and Messrs. R. L. Borden, Lennox, Barker, Bruce, Pringle and Rosamond of the Opposition voted against the amendment.

Mr. Borden Against.

Mr. Maclean's amendment providing for a graded scale of passenger rates from two cents a mile upwards, according to the earnings of the railway, was also voted down. Mr. R. L. Borden opposed this as well as the preceding amendment. While not yielding to anyone in his desire to obtain reduced rates, he thought the amendment was undesirable and might result in the postponement of the desired end and in retarding railway development in Canada. There was nothing to show the conditions in the Dominion were similar to those in Michigan, the legislation of which State was the foundation upon which the amendment was based. Within six months of the establishment of the Railway Commission for the especial purpose of dealing with this matter, it would be unwise to pass this legislation before the Commission had an opportunity of dealing with it. The question of freight rates was in any event more important than passenger rates. He could see that if the amendment carried the G. T. R. might by operating their branches under the names of different companies impose a higher scale of rates than are now charged.

Passenger Rates Vote.

The vote on the amendment was 17 yeas, 95 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Armstrong, Bennett, Blain, Clancy, Cochrane, Halliday, Ingram, Kidd, Lennox, Maclean, McGowan, Monk, Robinson (Elgin), Sproule, Thompson (Grey), Ward, Wilson. Total, 17.

Nays—Barker, Basinet, Beith, Blanchet, Borden (Halifax), Borden (Sir Frederick), Bourbonnais, Brodeur, Brown, Bruce, Bruneau, Bureau, Calvert, Carbonneau, Champagne, Christie, Copp, Costigan, Cowan, Delisle, Demers (Levis), Erb, Ethier, Fielding, Fitzpatrick, Fortier, Gallery, Ganong, Gauvreau, Gervais, Gibson, Girard, Harty, Henderson, Heyd, Holmes, Hughes (Kings, P.E.I.), Hyman, Johnston (Cape Breton), Johnston (Lambton), Kaulbach, Kendall, Lancaster, Lang, Lapointe, Laurier (Sir Wilfrid), Lavergne (Drummond and Arthabaska), Leblanc, Loy, Macdonald, Maclaren (Huntingdon), MacPherson, McCarthy, McCoig, Mc Cool, McGugan, McIsaac, McLennan, Marcil (Bagot), Matheson, Mignault, Morin, Morrison, Paterson, Prefontaine, Riley, Rivet, Ross (Victoria, N S.), Ross (Yukon), Russell, Scheil Stephens, Stewart, Talbot, Thompson (Haldimand and Monck), Tobin, Tucker, Turgeon, Wade, Wright. Total, 74

Parties Split Again.

Messrs. Heyd, Lang, Ross of Ontario, Beith, W. Scott, Ralph Smith and Oliver on the Government side voted yea, and Messrs. Monk, Kaulbach, Clancy, Barker, Bruce, Henderson, Ganong and Morin of the Opposition voted against the amendment.

To the Supreme Court.

Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick announced that as far as the Government was concerned it had been decided that judgment by the Railway Commission upon the question of the agreement between the Bell Telephone Co. and the C.P.R. Company would have to go to the Supreme Court for confirmation.

The Sunday Laws.

There was a discussion on the clause relating to the running of railways on Sunday. Mr. Fitzpatrick explained that the bill would simply remove a possible anomaly in this respect by declaring that all local railways as regards Sunday observances, would still be under Provincial jurisdiction. As to validating future legislation of the Provinces, that was done now in regard to the Federal franchise.

The bill was then read a third time and passed, and the House went into Committee of Supply.

The estimates of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries were taken up.

Mr. Prefontaine stated the question of division of jurisdiction as between the Dominion and the Provinces in the protection of the fisheries was being referred to the Supreme Court.

PINKLE AND HALL.

Appointed in Connection With G.T.R. Telegraphers' Arbitration.

Woodstock, July 27.—His Honor Judge Finkle of Oxford County, has been invited to act as chairman of the Labor Commission now being formed to investigate the present difficulties between the Grand Trunk Railway Co. and the telegraphers of the company. He has consented to act and has accepted the invitation.

Harvey Hall Named.

Ottawa, July 27.—Harvey Hall, an ex-conductor and ex-alderman of Toronto, who is at present living in Ottawa, will be the representative of the Grand Trunk telegraphers in the arbitration between themselves and the company.

Shepley to Assist.

Ottawa, July 27.—George Shepley, K.C., of Toronto, will represent the Grand Trunk Railway Company in the arbitration of the telegraphers' strike. Harvey Hall is the representative of the telegraphers. These two will select the third arbitrator.

Band of Brigands Annihilated.

Saloniea, July 27.—On Sunday last a detachment of troops near Kumanoga surprised a Bulgarian band of fifty-two men who were setting fire to the granaries. The band was destroyed, only two of the men escaping.

OTTAWA TO DUNDONALD.

60,000 Citizens See the Soldier Go—Presented With Address He Replies With Much Feeling.

Ottawa, July 27.—With the cheers of ten thousand people ringing in his ears and ten thousand more choking the avenues of approach to the central station, Lord Dundonald drew out of Ottawa last night. A few hundred yards below the station beneath the Laurier bridge, where the clamor of the crowds was faintly audible, the train stopped and Lord Dundonald bade a last farewell to the city of Ottawa. Mayor Ellis and a number of leading citizens of Ottawa had accompanied His Lordship as far as the Laurier bridge.

Mayor Ellis' Address.

Before leaving the car Mayor Ellis addressed His Lordship as follows: "On behalf of, I think I may safely say, the great majority of the citizens of Ottawa, I have to bid you good-by. It is with the deepest feeling of sorrow and regret that I do so. When you were appointed G.O.C. of the Canadian militia, the people of Canada felt that the British Government had honored them by nominating an officer who had earned a great reputation on the field of battle. During your two years' residence in the Dominion we have all felt, and particularly the rank and file of the militia, that at last we had a general at the head of affairs who would put the organization of the militia on a sound and substantial basis. We regret that you have to leave this work unfinished. We are sorry that circumstances have arisen to occasion the severance of your connection with the force. We would have liked you to have stayed with us to carry to a successful completion the work which you have so well inaugurated. But it was not to be, and to our great regret you are leaving us. In so doing, allow me to wish you every success in your future career and to assure you that you carry with you the good wishes and the esteem of the vast majority of the people of Canada."

Dundonald in Reply.

Lord Dundonald in reply said: "Mr. Mayor, ladies and gentlemen: I thank you, and through you all those who are beyond my voice, for the testimony of friendship. It is more than I had any right to expect. I can only say that I leave Ottawa and its people with the deepest regret. What more can I say of the people of Ottawa, and, indeed, of the people of Canada, than they were friends to me in my so-called prosperity and in my adversity, for every friend that I previously had, a thousand others came forward. I would not have been human if under these circumstances I did not look with love and affection upon Canada and its people, and wherever in future my lot may be cast, my thoughts and my actions will be guided by this feeling which they will not be able to efface, and with these words, gentlemen, I bid you farewell."

The mayor and other gentlemen then said "good by," and amid the cheers of the crowd on the bridge and those assembled at the car, the special car pulled out for Montreal.

People's Demonstration.

It was essentially a people's demonstration. There was no dearth of music, despite the refusal of the Guards' band to turn out. The pipe band of the Fifth Royal Scots, the Ottawa Pipers and the Glengarry Pipers, accompanied His Lordship from Crichton Lodge. They played "Cock a' the North," "The Campbells are Coming" and other Scotch airs. Brass bands from Perth, Arnprior, Almonte, Renfrew, Smith's Falls and Hull also took part.

Reaches Montreal.

Montreal, July 27.—The arrival of the Earl of Dundonald in Montreal last evening will long be remembered. The train was greeted with tremendous cheering, and when the general stepped on the platform the applause was deafening, and the pipers played "The Campbells Are Coming." Lord Dundonald was escorted to the Windsor, where he made a speech, receiving another ovation as he concluded.

A Sioux Indian Custom.

Among the Sioux Indians a common custom exists. When one family borrows a kettle from another, it is expected when the kettle is returned a small portion of the food that has been cooked in it will be left in the bottom. Should this custom be disregarded by any one, that person would never be able to borrow again, as the owner must always know what has been cooked in her kettle. A white woman on one occasion returned a scoured kettle, intending to teach a lesson in cleanliness, but her act became the talk of the camp as a fresh example of the meanness of the whites.

A Piece For His Dog.

Rossini lived before the day of special pleas for the dog, but he was sufficiently in advance of his time to recognise the equality if not the superiority of his own favorite beast. The Gentleman's Magazine says that the late Sir Arthur Sullivan made Rossini's acquaintance in Paris. One morning, when Sullivan called to see him, he found the composer trying over a piece of music.

"What is that?" asked Sullivan.

"It's my dog's birthday," Rossini replied gravely, "and I write a little piece for him every year."

Rear Admiral Taylor Dead.

Sudbury, July 27.—Rear-Admiral H. C. Taylor, U.S.N., who commanded the Indiana at the battle of Santiago, died at Copper Cliff General Hospital at 8.15 o'clock last night, of peritonitis. Admiral Taylor arrived at Sudbury the 16th of this month on a visit to his son, Roger Taylor, superintendent of smelters at the Canadian Copper Company's works at Copper Cliff, and took suddenly ill at the Balmoral Hotel. The body left by the C.P.R. train last night en route for Washington, accompanied by Mrs. Taylor, her two sons and daughter.

Investigation Closes.

Montreal, July 27.—Some lively evidence came out at yesterday morning's session of the Judge Winchester investigation into the Italian immigration troubles. Cordasco, the famous Italian labor agent, again came in for a severe scoring as to his modes. Despite the events of the last few days, it appeared that he was still charging the Italians $2 apiece to get them jobs, notwithstanding the fact that this was forbidden in the contract with the C.P.R. Another foreman named Braine was examined. The investigation closed yesterday.

No More Operations

The day of operations for piles is past for all who know of the efficiency of Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for this horrible ailment. It doesn't matter what form of piles you have, so long as you use Dr. Chase's Ointment carefully and plentifully, it will soon bring relief and cure. Ask your friends and neighbors what they know about this preparation.

Those Pretty Raffia Hats.

Why don't you make a raffia hat to replace the one that was spoiled on the day of the opening of the lift lock? They are easily and quickly made, and are light and durable. The most popular colors are black, brown, red and the natural shade—a light champagne color. Directions for making these pretty hats may be found in the July Delineator, and the raffia is on sale at the Review office, the only place in town where it may be procured. 2d

THE GLOBE PERMITS.

People May Say Good-bye to Lord Dundonald Without Being Punished.

It will gratify the friends of Lord Dundonald to learn to-day that The Globe is not opposed to demonstrations in his honor. Our aged but agile contemporary "has not the slightest desire to curb the enthusiasm" of those who wish to give him a cordial send-off. This is kindness, condescension and a concession to popular feeling. In spite of all that has come and gone The Globe is prepared to permit the people to do as they please. It will not throw a single cabbage at Lord Dundonald's departing form nor place a rock on the railway he goes over. Persons found at Dundonald meetings will not be put in the stocks. Let us rejoice at this spirit. The growth of such liberal views, even in the most unexpected quarters, is a source of much comfort to all lovers of true liberty. —Toronto News, Indep.

For Over Sixty Years.

An old and well-tried remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Sold by all druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

REV. MARK GUY PEARCE.

Clever and Graceful Sketch of the Noted and Kindly Divine.

(Francis Dsor, in Montreal Herald.)

A large man, with a kindly face, strong featured and earnest, with a certain humor withal, is this Mark Guy Pearce. His name is familiar to Montrealers. More than once has he spoken in our city, and seats have always been filled by those who came to hear him.

Last night was no exception. This London preacher, with his slight English accent, his marked personality, so long associated with the beloved Hugh Price Hughes, seems to have an attraction about him that draws all men to him.

He does not talk over the heads of his listeners, and he touches on everyday Christianity. He knows life as he has studied it in the slums of London, and has realized the need of a practical religion, a gospel for the people.

He told the gathering of St. James last night the story of the fishermen, the toilers, the toilers of the sea, in whose boat Christ slept and upon whom the fierece storm broke and frightened. How Christ had awakened and stilled the waves, with his "Peace be still." He drew the picture of the sleeping Master, so human in His weariness, so like all human kind who get tired. He told them that it was a human Christ, who had a message for humanity in its daily work and sorrow.

"You come to church to hear about Him," said Rev. Mr. Pearce. "Do not go away without Him." The religion that did not last through the week, was not the religion of the Master, who had taught them that faith which penetrated all daily duties.

A human Christ for humanity, is the keynote to Rev. Mr. Pearce's preaching. He draws his illustrations from homely bits of every-day life and experience, and he draws them very cleverly. He is interesting. What is more, he is sincere. He pleases the people, for his religion includes all of them.

The people who filled the church to the doors listened attentively, and even seemed regardless of the heat of the evening. When they came out they spoke appreciatively of the man and his words to them. Every-day people understand philosophy based on every-day facts. The world needs an every-day religion, based on every-day life. So the people appreciate a man who preaches an every-day gospel in every-day language. It ensures interested audiences to Mr. Pearce so long as he preaches to his people, not above them. It ensures a lasting welcome from his listeners.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

A Canadian Branch to be Opened in Toronto.

Now that the Oxford University Press is about to open a branch office in Toronto, some particulars of this historic publishing house will be read with interest. It is the only press in the world that can produce a list of its productions for upwards of 300 years. It has shown continuous activity from the year 1585, when one Joseph Barnes was appointed "Printer to the University," and granted £100 from the University Chest. In 1586 Convocation elected delegates "to watch over the interests of the University and to control the Press." The output of the Press from "1468" to 1900 is estimated at 19,475 books, each separate edition, although it might consist of a million or more copies, being counted as a unit, and even this large total does not include two or three hundred issues of the Bible and Prayer Book.

The first book printed at Oxford was the treatise of Tyrannius Rufinus on the Apostles' Creed, ascribed to St. Jerome, and bearing the date, Dec. 17, M CCCC LXVIIJ., and copies have fetched upwards of 1,800 dollars in the auction room. But it is generally believed nowadays that an X was omitted in the date, which should have been 1478. If the former figure were correct, Caxton could no longer be accorded the honor of having printed the first book in England (which, however, he nowhere claims), for it was not until 1477 that he set up his press at Westminster. In Henry VIII's reign Wolsey suppressed the Oxford Press, which was re-established during Elizabeth's sovereignty by the Earl of Leicester, at his own cost.

The printing was carried on first in hired premises at Oxford; then in the famous Church of St. Mary the Virgin; next, from 1669 to 1713, in the Sheldonian Theatre; then at the Clarendon Press near the Theatre, until 1830; and since that date at the present fine and picturesque premises. It may be explained that the Universities are entitled to the perpetual copyright of books presented to them. The copyright of the Earl of Clarendon's great History of the Rebellion was presented to the University, and with the profits gained therefrom for the most part the building called the Clarendon Press (out of compliment to the donor) was erected. Thus the familiar name was derived.

The Oxford Press is almost entirely self-sufficing—it does its own paper-making, ink-making, type-founding, electrotyping, stereotyping, letter-press, lithographicing, and all kinds of "fancy" printing, and bookbinding—to say nothing of employing its own builders, engineers, &c. It may be worth adding that the Oxford type foundry is the most ancient in England. Everybody has heard of that famous divine to whom Martial's epigram was adapted:—

I do not love thee, Dr. Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell;
But this I know, and know full well.
I do not love thee, Dr. Fell.

Dr. Fell, about the year 1666, presented the Press with some very handsome music type, and old style italic type, which are still occasionally used. It was in 1805 that the delegates paid £4,000 to a Mr. Andrew Wilson for the right to use the then secret process of stereotyping; and at all times a disposition has been shown to take the fullest advantage of new discoveries. Recently the Press has made itself a name for collotype printing, in which its greatest triumph was the facsimile of the first folio of Shakespeare.

The headquarters of Mr. Henry Frowde, the publisher to the University, are in London, at Amen close to St. Paul's, where the publishing business is conducted. As far back as 1770 the University Press had a Bible warehouse, hard by in Paternoster Row. The University Binding House where the fine bindings are designed and executed, is also in London. In addition to the leather made from goat and sheep skins, real crocodile skin, the skins of snakes and frogs, and elephant hide are used for binding books.

The first Oxford Bible and Prayer Book date from 1675. Now the output of Oxford Bibles is the largest in the world. For some years it has averaged 20,000 per week, or upwards of a million a year. There are not far short of one hundred Oxford editions of the Bible in circulation.

It is well known that a guinea is given to any person who is the first to point out a printer's error in an Oxford Bible. From all quarters of the Globe applications have been made for this reward, and it may be well to state that such antiquated expressions as "bewray," and "astonied" are not regarded as printer's errors. They appeared in the original edition of 1611, and are deliberately retained by the authorities. Before the Bibles are issued from the Oxford Press they are read and re-read many times in succession. The result is that the bill for printer's errors amounts to only a trifling sum: and, as a rule, the errors discovered are never more serious than a "dropped letter."

So far as England is concerned, only the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge and the King's Printers are authorized to print the Bible. As Prof. Goldwin Smith once said, the real privilege of the Oxford Press is "that which it secures for itself by the most scrupulous accuracy and by infinitesimal profits"—infinitesimal that is when spread over all the publications of the Press. It is a curious fact that were it not for this Bible printing privilege (first granted to secure accuracy in the text) it would be impossible for the public to obtain Bibles so cheaply as now.

Perhaps the most striking incident in the recent history of the Press was the publication of the Revised Version of the Bible, which was undertaken at the joint expense of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The Revised Version of the entire Bible was issued on May 18, 1885, and although ten thousand people had the handling of the volume ere it reached the public, no advance copies were obtained by anybody. One paper mill alone made sufficient paper for this edition to put a girdle round the globe one inch in thickness six times over, and the volumes piled flat would have reached a height of fourteen miles, or an end of seventy-four miles. The revision was completed in 1895, when the Apocrypha was issued in the late autumn.

One specialty of the Oxford University Press is the famous Oxford India paper, which has revolutionized the Bible, Prayer Book, and Hymn Book trade, and it is now used for all the more popular devotional books all over the world. It has often been imitated, but hitherto not equalled. This is how it came to be discovered. In the year 1841, an Oxford graduate is said to have brought home from the far East a small fold of extremely thin paper, which was manifestly more opaque and tough for its substance than any paper manufactured in Europe. He presented it to the University Press, and it was found to be just sufficient for twenty-four copies of the smallest Bible then in existence—diamond 24mo—which were duly printed. The books were barely a third of the usual thickness, and although as much as £20 apiece was offered for the nine copies were sold, but they were presented to the Queen and various persons. The incident was in the course of time forgotten, but, in 1874 experiments were again begun, 1874 experiments were again begun, and the following yar a Bible was placed on the market similar to the 1842 edition. In a short time a quarter of a million copies had been sold. At the last Paris Exhibition this paper was awarded a Grand Prix.

It is scarcely necessary to ay anything in Canada of "The Book of Praise," which was published in 1897, and can be obtained in upwards of a hundred different styles. Less known in the Dominion is "The Church Hymnary," authorized for use by the Church of Scotland, the United Free Church of Scotland, the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, and the Presbyterian Churches in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. This, with "The Psalter in Metre," was also published by the Oxford University Press, and within the first few weeks of publication upwards of a million copies were sold. Oxford India paper has also been largely used for the new Hymn Book of the Wesleyan Methodists in Great Britain, for Hymns, Ancient and Modern, for the Prayer Book of the Portuguese Jews, &c.

Without doubt the greatest enterprise that any University or printing press has taken in hand since the invention of printing is "The Oxford English Dictionary," on which hundreds of thousands of dollars will have been spent before it is completed. The series of "Sacred Books of the East," edited by the late Professor Max Muller, is another achievement of which the Press is proud. Its more recent "Oxford Texts" have achieved wide popularity, while its classical works generally have long been held in high esteem.

As far back as 1695 the Oxford Press published the Lord's Prayer in a book of nineteen different languages. Works can now be printed at the Clarendon Press in Albanian, Amharic, Anglo-Saxon, Arabic, Armenian, Armeno-Turkish, Bashmuric, Berber, Bogos, Bohemian, Carshun, Cashmeri, Chaldee, Chinese, Coptic, Ethiopic, Etruscan, Faroese, Galla, German, Ghadamsi, Gondi, Gothic, Graeco-Turkish, Greek, Grumukhi, Harrotee, Hebrew, Hindi Hindustani, Judaeo-Arabic, Karaito-Tartar, Kunkuna, Livonian Mahratta, Mondari, Nepalese, Orenburg-Tartar, Pahlavi, Persian, Polish, Punjabi, Pushtoo or Afghan, Rifi, Runic, Russian, Samaritan, Sanscrit, Saxon, Slavonic, Spanish, Syriac (also Estrangelo and Maronite), Tartar, Tibetan, Tigre, Turkish, and Zend—to say nothing of the innumerable languages and dialects for which Roman type serves.

At the present day the University Press is more active than ever. Growing business in the United States led to the starting of an American branch of the Oxford Press in 1896. Now it has been found necessary, in order to cope with increasing trade in the Dominion, to have a special branch in Toronto, where premises have been taken in Richmond-st., West, and Mr. S. Bradley Gundy, lately manager of the wholesale Department of the Methodist Book and Publishing House, has been placed in charge. At the Toronto headquarters there will be a reading room, where all the books published by Mr. Frowde may be conveniently inspected.

HOME FURNISHING.

TWO DEVICES OF GREATEST CONVENIENCE IN THE HOUSEHOLD.

A Screen That Accommodates the Sewing Equipment, Patterns and Odds and Ends—A Light Serving Table For the Dining Room.

By the use of this screen one can sit at the machine or sewing table and sew without having to take any extra steps in getting together the tools and materials used for the work.

These screens can be bought ready for use or can be made at home. Being intended to bear considerable weight, the frame must be strong. Any carpenter or handy man can make one, using material which is one and a half inches wide and thick. There may be either two or three panels, but two are usually enough. Each panel should be 36 by 18 inches and have two turned legs about eight inches high for a support. These can be obtained at small cost at a woodworking shop or can be cut from some old piece of furniture. The frame is made exactly like the frame of a plain screen door, but the crosspieces, which are used as braces to strengthen the frame, are placed a little above the middle of one panel and as much below the middle of the other one.

A SEWING SCREEN.

The frame is painted or stained; then a cover is made for the right side, using art denim of a pretty shade on which have been appliqued sprays of flowers and foliage cut from cretonne. It can be put on in either one or two pieces for each panel, being fastened closely with fancy tacks. Before this cover is tacked in place the pockets for the back of the screen are stitched to it, as it is almost impossible to do the work after the cover is in place.

All the pockets are made with a casing at the top, in which elastic is run, so they are kept tight and snug. The deep pocket can be used to hold unfinished work or mending. Some distance above it a pocket of six inches in depth can be placed, to be used for holding patterns. All the pockets are made to extend clear across the panel. On the other panel there are two pockets, both shallow, one near the top and the other at the bottom.

Further details of fitting up this screen, which, together with the serving table, is sketched and described by the Ladies' World, are sufficiently indicated in the cut.

DESSERT OR SERVING TABLE.

The extremely light little table illustrated—modeled after the tables used in the wards of hospitals, where lightness is essential—will be found most convenient as an auxiliary to the regular dining table.

The lower shelf doubles the capacity of the table, while in the drawers can be placed silver knives, forks and spoons needed in serving the dessert and extra napkins.

The lightness of the table and the convenience of the handles upon the top make it easy to use the table for a tray, with the advantage that it need not be set down upon the dinner table itself to be unloaded, but can rest upon its own legs.

Fashion's Echoes.

Lingerie ruffles are still to be much worn in the sleeves of coats and gowns.

Striped effects are especially in favor in the new silks for shirt waists and shirt waist dresses.

Rain Spotted Silks.

A shower of rain will often apparently ruin a silk dress or blouse. Before making sure that it has done so see what ironing it will do. Often the silk may be made to look quite new again by being ironed with a moderately hot iron on the wrong side. A piece of muslin laid over the silk prevents any chance of its being made shiny.

PATENTS GRANTED.

A List of Canadian and American Patents Recently Granted.

Below will be found the list of patents granted to inventors in the United States and Canada, which is furnished by Messrs. Featherstonhaugh & Co., Toronto:—

Canadian Patents.—E. Willows, rail joints; R. P. Imrie, office furniture; D. M. Kennedy, cream separating apparatus; J. P. McKechnie, P. Moon, grain cleaning; E. A. A New County Map.

The Review has issued, for general distribution, a new edition of its well known map of the County of Peterborough. The map has been re-drawn and brought up to date and is the most accurate map existing of the county. It is of convenient size and yet legible and handy for reference. Copies may be had by calling at the Review Stationery Store, or will be sent by mail on receipt of 5 cents in stamps to cover postage.

British Government Demands That Russia Salute Our Flag.

NOT JUSTIFIED IN SINKING

Note of Protest Sent to St. Petersburg Demanding Reparation and Apology Based on Report of Sir Claude Macdonald.

London, July 28.—The British Government sent instructions to Sir Charles Hardinge, the British Ambassador to Russia, yesterday to energetically protest against the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Russian Vladivostock squadron. Until the presentation of the note to the Russian Government the greatest secrecy will be maintained regarding its contents, but it is known that Premier Balfour and his colleagues have decided to demand that the fullest reparation shall be made by Russia or measures will be taken to follow up the diplomatic demands.

Indemnity and Apology.

The British note, as Sir Charles Hardinge will submit it, will not mention the amount of indemnity Russia may pay the owners of the ship and British subjects having goods on board the vessel, but all that will be sought will be the establishment of the principle of indemnity and apology. A salute of the British flag must also be conceded, and the future protection of neutral shipping assured.

No Justification For Sinking.

The attitude of the British Government is the result of the thorough consideration given to the reports received from Sir Claude Macdonald, the British Minister at Tokio, and the examination of international law authorities by legal experts. The despatches from Sir Claude Macdonald confirm the reports that the Knight Commander had no contraband of war on board for Japan. The Government and all the British authorities, it is asserted, unite on the point that there was no justification for the sinking of the vessel.

It is felt in Government circles that the Knight Commander incident overshadows the Red Sea seizures, which practically have been adjusted, but which have failed to settle the question of the rights of neutral commerce.

The Russian Contentions.

No representations have been made by Count Benckendorff, the Russian Ambassador to Great Britain, to Foreign Secretary Lansdowne regarding the Knight Commander, the Ambassador not having received advices from St. Petersburg on the subject, nor is it seen by the Russian diplomats how it is possible for their Government to make a prompt answer to the British demands. It is not known when the Vladivostock squadron will return to port. The commander of the squadron, it is pointed out, unquestionably seized the papers of the vessel, including her manifest, and therefore will be able to present reasons to show why they sank the ship, and the Russian authorities thus will be able to answer the British representations. In the opinion of these diplomats the cargo of the Knight Commander included contraband of war, under the Russian declaration. The bridgework is said to have been destined for the Fusan-Seoul railroad, which the Japanese are building for military purposes. The Russian declaration also announces that rice and other foodstuffs are contraband if sent at the enemy's cost or order. Attention is specifically called to the feature of the declaration saying that "neutral ships with contraband of war of any sort can be not only seized, but also confiscated." If the ship can be confiscated it is contended she can be sunk as well. While Russia holds that her declaration has never been seriously questioned, the British authorities claim that the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg first specifically reserved the rights of his Government in case of an emergency arising and, later, filed objections against the various provisions of the declaration. The United States also reserved her rights when acknowledging the receipt of the Russian declaration. The British authorities are persistent in their desire to induce the United States to make a declaration of its policy in the protection of commerce, but nothing has yet been done, so far as known here.

Prepared to Act.

Washington, July 28.—The State Department has finally received a formal protest against the action of the Russian navy in seizing American goods, and as a result of its preliminary study of the law and precedents governing the subject, it is prepared to act energetically and promptly. This protest relates to the seizure of an American steamer Arabia, bound from Portland, Ore., for Hong Kong, China.

Two Others Released.

Suez, July 28.—The Peninsula & Oriental Steamship Co.'s steamer Formosa, which was captured in the Red Sea by the volunteer fleet steamer Smolensk, and which arrived here Tuesday flying the Russian naval flag and with a prize crew on board, has been released. The Hamburg-American liner steamer Holsatia, which arrived here yesterday morning, also having on board a prize crew, has likewise been released.

Malacca Surrendered.

Algiers, July 28.—After a protracted conference on board the Malacca between the British and Russian Consuls and Captain Schwartz, commanding the prize crew, it was announced that the Russian flag would be replaced by the British at 6 o'clock last evening.

Without Colors.

Perim, Red Sea, July 28.—Two Russian vessels, supposed to be the volunteer fleet steamers St. Petersburg and Smolensk, passed here yesterday morning, bound for Jibutil, French Somaliland. They showed no colors.

Delayed By Russians.

Island of Perim, Straits of Bab-el-Mandab, July 28.—The British steamer City of Agra (last reported at Liverpool for Kurrachee), passed here yesterday, and signalled that she had been delayed by a Russian warship in the Red Sea.

Breach of International Law.

London, July 28.—That the British Government regards the sinking of the steamer Knight Commander as a breach of international law was confirmed by Premier Balfour in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. Answering questions regarding the destruction of the Knight Commander and the seizure of the Malacca and other vessels, the Premier said he hoped to be in a position to make a brief statement regarding the Malacca to-day. As to the sinking of the Knight Commander, he "regretted that information which reached me this morning confirmed this regrettable occurrence." Mr. Balfour added: "There is no question of loss of life, but I am afraid there is a question of a breach of international law."

Questions at Issue Discussed.

A lengthy meeting of the Defence Committee took place yesterday under the Presidency of Premier Balfour, at which the Attorney-General, Sir Robert Finlay, was present. The Attorney-General does not usually attend these meetings, but it was stated that the questions at issue between Russia and Great Britain were under discussion and that Sir Robert was called in to advise as to the question of international law involved.

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1901.

THE ROUGES AND LAURIER.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is well understood by his organs in the Province of Quebec if not by those in Ontario. The rouge journals are daily reiterating the cry which he started. He is a French Canadian, ruling the country as is proper, and with fifty other good French Canadians at his back. That is why Ontario is backing Lord Dundonald, the foreigner, against him. Le Canada says a French Canadian is a traitor if he opposes a French Canadian Premier, even when he is wrong. La Presse says Lord Dundonald a wolf sent by Chamberlain to bring Quebec under military rule. Le Soleil says Sir Wilfrid is bent on aggrandizing the French Canadian Catholic Province so he must be sustained. Thus the campaign goes on, having been set on foot by Sir Wilfrid Laurier depicting Lord Dundonald as a foreigner come to dragoon us, and by Sir Frederick Borden falsely describing the general as slighting French Canadian militia officers. Sir Wilfrid knew very well what he was doing when he described Lord Dundonald as a foreigner unfit to hold a command in Canada, just as he knew what he was doing on the Champ de Mars when he expressed his wish to take arms with a rebel in pursuance of the Nationalist agitation which he and Mercier were stirring up for political motives. In Quebec they evidently know his meaning very well, and in Ontario his organs only pretend to misunderstand it that they may assist in the game. Otherwise why do they harp on their false pretence that it was Lord Dundonald who raised the racial cry, when they know that the contrary is the truth.

Some good but unpractical ministers of the gospel are adding their voices to the outcry against Lord Dundonald, because he favors militarism and fighting is wrong. Of course, with these views they approve of Sir Frederick Borden, who only provides rifles for half our militiamen, and not ammunition enough to go round, so that their fighting would not be very deadly.

Having falsely ascribed to Lord Dundonald a recommendation for an enormous military expenditure, having indeed gone very close to forgery by pretending to quote from a supposititious debate in Hansard, the Globe now calls upon the general for a denial. The Globe would do better to call upon the Minister of Militia to publish the dishonestly suppressed report of Lord Dundonald, and then we will see what he really did recommend.

The Ottawa Free Press says:—

"The English crowd at Bisley did not forget to cheer the Canadian who won the King's prize, just as they always cheer the winner who beats them fairly and honestly in every contest in which they engage."

Yet a friend of the Free Press invented the falsehood that the English crowd at Henley assailed the Canadian who won the diamond sculls with cries of "Foreigner," and the Ministerial organs have eagerly circulated the slander.

We are told by the Ottawa Free Press that:—

"Ther is no reason whatever why Chief Justice Taschereau and the Minister of Justice should not receive a hearty welcome upon their return to Ottawa. They have done nothing of which they have the least reason to be ashamed."

We suppose it is Solicitor-General Lemieux who is thus associated with the Chief Justice. Whether a man is ashamed of uttering malicious slanders against an innocent man is, we may suppose, a matter for his conscience to dictate, but Canada is ashamed of them. But why this promotion of the Solicitor-General? Has the Free Press private information that Mr. Fitzpatrick is really going to retire in spite of denials?

The Ministerialist press is arguing that it was the right of the Minister of Militia to decide whether he would publish Lord Dundonald's report or not. It is the statutory duty of the Minister to present a yearly report to Parliament and of the general commanding to supply him with a report as to the militia. The Minister has a right to withhold the general's report, but only for good cause, such as its containing information which it would be dangerous to publish. It is not his right to suppress it as being confidential when its writer, a better judge, says it was not, or to utter the falsehood that it was private, and then ear his words in a few minutes. He has no right to conceal it from the House so as to make a dishonest claim for personal credit for carrying out some of its recommendations, nor to fool the people through his organs by the false pretence that the general recommended an enormous expenditure for fortifications.

SHOOTING PAINS THROUGH THE BACK

Not a Day Without Suffering Until Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. C. Noyes, for many years section forman, and now flagman for the G.T.R. at Peterboro, Ont., states: "For twenty-one years I was section foreman on the C.P.R. and was exposed to all sorts of weather. As a result my kidneys became effected and there was scarcely a day that I was not troubled more or less. At times I would have sharp shooting pains through my back and would get so used up that I felt like giving up work. During this time I was also a great sufferer from constipation. As I had heard so much about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for kidney disease and constipation I began using them, and can say that I was entirely cured of my old troubles in a short time. I cannot say anything too good about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and never lose an opportunity of recommending them."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

SIR F. BORDEN'S HEAD.

General Demand for Dismissal of Corrupt and Meddling Ministers.

There is fresh food for reflection in the popular demonstrations in honor of Lord Dundonald. Personal tribute to the qualities of a gallant soldier is one element in the situation and no doubt the enemies to the Government are active in using the incident for their own purposes. But above and beyond this, there is at the root of these demonstrations a feeling which the politicians will do well to heed. There is deep resentment at the conduct of someone. If these crowds that cheer Lord Dundonald are being reinforced by the members of the militia corps in plain clothes; if, in short, the citizen soldiery are turning against the Government in a body on account of the delinquencies of one or two Ministers, common prudence would suggest an effort to grapple with the emergency. In a strong article the Canadian Military Gazette calls for the retirement of the present Minister of Militia. The paper making this demand is understood to be controlled by Lieut.-Col. MacLean, who has for years been on friendly terms with Ministers and cannot be set down as hostile to them on party grounds. If the Government are determined that Lord Dundonald shall be the only because the voluntary, victim of the exposure of political interference in militia affairs, a grave blunder in political tactics will be made. This is a small evil; a far greater is the injury inflicted upon the national interest in matters of defence.—Toronto News, Indep.

Abo it Your Complexion

A yellow, muddy complexion tells of derangements of the liver, and indicates the presence of bile poison in the blood. Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills set the liver and kidneys in action, purify the blood, cleanse the system, and assure a healthy glow to the complexion. As a family medicine Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are of inestimable value

Coastwise Law in Alaska.

Washington, D. C., July 28.—Through the settlement of a case that has recently been brought before the Treasury Department and the Department of Commerce and Labor it is likely that there will be a clearing up of some of the vexed questions relating to the United States coastwise law. The case in question has special reference to shipping between the United States and Alaska, but the settlement of the point at issue may be found to have a bearing in other places. There is great confusion in the official mind as to the construction to be placed on certain provisions of the coastwise law.

Troubles Coal Region.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 28.—Yesterday afternoon Carroll D. Wright, umpire of the Anthracite Conciliation Board, decided that the coal companies would have to deduct from the wages of employes when a majority so decided an amount sufficient to pay the wages of checkmen and docking bosses. The companies protested against the decision, contending that they could not deduct legally from employes' wages.

To Codify Statutes.

Montreal, July 28.—Sir Louis Cazault of Quebec and J. S. Buchan and Wilfrid Mercier, Montreal, have been appointed commissioners to codify the provincial statutes.

SWEET CLOVER.

Increasing Danger of the Spread of This Weed.

Deeply impressed with the importance of the matter the World this week harks back to the subject of sweet clover and other noxious weeds which to-day threaten to work great injury to the farmers of Ontario. The evil is not an imaginary one, as some writers would lead us to infer, but is, on the contrary, a rapidly growing one, and a distinct menace. As to the reason or manner of its introduction we are in a large measure ignorant, but the fact remains that in the central portion of the province the evil is apparently entrenched and only the most vigilant care and labor will secure its eradication. Within the limits of the city its presence is patent to the most thoughtless passerby. But it is in the rural districts that evidences of the rapid spread of this pest are more clearly seen. The sweet clover is not a native of Canada, neither is it a new arrival, but it is only within the past few years that its presence has awakened more than a passing concern. Herman Simmers, the well-known seedsman, speaking to the World, said it was exceedingly difficult to assign the precise manner of its introduction, but that it was presumably due to impure clover seed, or some like cause. The weed is undoubtedly spreading rapidly, but steady application, as in the case of twitch grass, said Mr. Simmers, will avail to stamp out the evil. In the Niagara Peninsula, the very garden of Canada, its ravages are yearly becoming more pronounced, and in some sections it threatens to usurp possession of the land. Not alone when it is in full bloom, but likewise in the full of the year, owing to its rank growth, it is an element of danger through liability to ignite and thereby increase the danger from fire. Complaints innumerable have been lodged from progressive farmers and those in a position to judge of the situation, but railway corporations, and town officials are probably the most flagrant violators of the law. There is a law governing the situation, but, like many another, it is more honored in the breech than in the observance.—Toronto World.

KEEP DOWN THE WEEDS.

The Serious Deterioration of the Soil Caused by Them.

It has remained for a close student of the soil to discover that the loss from weeds on an average farm would be equal to five per cent. of the total crop value. Whether this estimate is definitely exact or not, no one is so particularly interested, as in the fact that deterioration of the soil to a large extent does take place from the growth of weeds. It is certain also with the extension of the arable land in the province that weed growth is more than keeping pace with the increase. Two important hot-beds for providing the seeds of these land nuisances are unkempt roads and railway highways. To meet the evils the legislature has made due provision in the statutes, but the laxity of many municipalities in carrying out the provisions of the act is undoubtedly accountable for much of its continuance. Evasion of statute labor is a prolific source of weed distribution. Tax payments, whether in cash or time, are onerous burdens to a great many people, and in recognition of this trait in human nature, municipal councils might well exclude weed cutting from its statute labor provisions. Many good farmers, on their own property, apparently have a strong objection to work in the public welfare, and regard the cutting of weeds on the concessions fronting their lands as so much of a personal loss of time. Failings such as these can be met by municipal councils by a broader labor employment and a consequently higher general rate. In the destruction of weeds on private owned lands, whether farms or rights of way, no consideration should be drawn. The spirit of the law should be lived up to and the country saved the increased expense and loss from neglected weed growth.—Toronto World.

A BIG FAMILY.

New names have to be designed every year to accommodate the Disease Family, but they all revolve around one cause—The Stomach.

The receptacle of all you eat or drink cannot help but get crippled—very few escape. How can they? Just think of what lands in the stomach during a few hours—All sorts of things—sour, sweet, acid, starchy, light, heavy, vegetable and animal; all this raw material is tumbled into the stomach without much thought as to the order of its going, every particle of which has to be worked over, digested, and converted into food for nerves, blood, brain, kidneys, liver and bowels—for every tissue, cell and fibre of the body. Sometimes the stomach is overloaded, shocked and deranged and cannot do its work properly, and right here begins the starting point of disease, as no organ now receives proper nutriment, and usually the weakest cry out their warnings. That's why a well stomach means a well body, and that's why ANTI-PILL has such a marked effect. It soothes the irritated linings of the stomach, and so acts on the mucous membrane that the necessary supply of gastric juice to secure digestion is assured—ANTI-PILL, the Great System Treatment makes a well stomach.

Men Restored to Vigor

Are you one of the thousands of men, young and old, who lack virile power? Do you crave to be robust and vigorous, to have perfect manhood? Thousands know they are weak and impotent, but neglect to take the right steps to restore that vigor and strength. Are you one of them?

Thousands suffer in ignorance of their real condition, believing themselves to be strong and well when they are far from it. Perhaps you are one of them. It is worth your time to ascertain your true condition of health. If you have any reason to doubt or suspect that you are not what you ought to be.

If you belong to either class mentioned above, do not be discouraged. Do not lose hope. Help is within your reach. You can be cured. Vim, vigor and vitality, health and happiness have been given to men who had been reduced to physical wrecks.

Be Honest With Yourself.

If you have been a victim to the follies and indiscretions of youth, committed excesses in married life, if you doubt your strength, it is your duty—your duty to those you love and who love you—to at once, today, consult an honest, reliable, recognized physician—a specialist who has a record for CURING weak men. But do not go astray. Consult no quack. Take no patent "Cure All." No two cases are precisely alike. Every individual needs a treatment particularly suited to him. Go where you can get the right treatment for your case.

Cure Yourself at Home.

If there is no successful specialist near you, write at once to Dr. Goldberg, the noted specialist. If you have stricture, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emptation of parts, impotence, etc., or any complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, etc., write the doctor and if he accepts your case for treatment it is equivalent to a cure, as he never accepts an incurable case for treatment, and remember you may

Pay When You Are Cured.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you. In other words, you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor at once and confidentially lay your case before him. He sends the medical, as well as his booklet on the subject, containing the 16 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him

A TRICKY PREMIER.

The Sunny Smile Way of Doing the Business.

The cunning of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was well illustrated the other day in connection with the Dundonald farewell in Ottawa this evening. It appears, according to the Toronto World, that those in charge of the demonstration sent a deputation to Sir Frederick Borden for permission to have the military bands turn out in aid of the affair. Sir Frederick refused peremptorily and said things concerning Dudnonald and the demonstration which would hardly bear repetition. He promised to talk the matter over with Sir Wilfrid, nevertheless, and when the deputation came back they found Sir Frederick quite gracious, not only giving permission to have the bands out but speaking kindly of Lord Dundonald and hoping the demonstration would be a success. But observe the sequel: the Governor General's Foot Guards band, despite the fact that they had received permission to take part and had contracted with the committee to perform, now refuse to turn out!

Cunning Sir Wilfrid! He saw at once that Sir Frederick Borden had taken an unpopular step by blurting out his true feelings against Lord Dundonald and by refusing to allow the bands to take part in the demonstration, so he used the sunny smile dodge and explained to the less cunning Borden how much more effective it would be to graciously grant permission and then have it quietly intimated to the band—most of the members are civil service clerks—that they could themselves refuse to turn out.

A political fox like Sir Wilfrid Laurier would never have blundered clumsily like the heavy-footed Minister of Militia.—Brockville Times

SELF-GOVERNMENT.

Appeal to People on Management of Their Own Affairs.

"Lord Dundonald need not flatter himself that he has the whole people of Canada behind him because a few hundred Toronto cranks are ready to crawl to him. The majority of the people of this country are plain people—not sycophants — who believe in self-government." This is a fair sample of what passes for argument in the Dundonald-Kosser row. The motive is obvious. Dundonald is a lord, a Britisher and a military man, therefore, if he was not an aristocrat he ought to be. The fact that Dundonald was the first in this quarrel to recognize the principles of self-government by appealing directly to the people, by taking them into his confidence and by helping to shed some light on the management of their own affairs, is conveniently overlooked. Such a fact would not appeal to anybody's prejudice or anybody's ignorance or anybody's partizan zeal.—Woodstock Express, Indep.

FOUND IN A POOL.

Mrs. Robert Logan's Body Discovered Near Georgetown and Case Is Now Being Investigated.

Georgetown, Ont., July 28.—There died near Glen Williams, a village a short distance north of here, about two months ago, a Mrs. Margaret Logan under circumstances which have been causing considerable gossip in the neighborhood since. It was said at the time that it was suicide. Her body was found one morning lying in a small pool of water formed by an excavation beside the railway track, not far from her home, and the presumption was that she drowned herself, probably during a temporary fit of insanity. No inquest was held.

Yesterday, however, Mr. John Murray, chief detective of the Ontario Department, is in the vicinity, and it is understood that he is making inquiries into the circumstances. Mrs. Logan became the wife of Mr. Robert Logan some four or five years ago, and she is survived by him and by some stepsons. It is said that she had some money. Her family are well-to-do people, and Mr. Logan is one of the prominent farmers of the neighborhood, so that the affair has been creating quite a stir.

Dr. Caven made a post-mortem examination yesterday, but has not yet made his report.

THEY GOT FRESH MEAT.

New Friends of the Strikers Secured a Supply in Chicago.

Chicago, July 28.—A rain and hail-storm yesterday caused confusion in the live-stock pens. The frightened animals ran about the yards, completely beyond the control of the inexperienced drivers. During the excitement several persons were seen to escape from the yards with live sheep in their arms. These men were said to be friends of the strikers, who took advantage of the opportunity to secure fresh meat.

Packers Won't Arbitrate.

Chicago, July 28.—"We had an agreement with Mr. Donnelly's organization and the allied trades, which they have failed to live up to, and under the circumstances, we do not care to make any further agreements with them." This is the statement handed by the packers to the State Board of Arbitration last night, after a conference, in an endeavor to bring about another meeting between the packers and the butchers.

ALIEN LABOR LAW.

James H. Bacon Prosecuted Against For Alleged Violation.

Port Arthur, July 28.—R. G. Chamberlain, secret service agent of the Dominion of Canada, served warrants Tuesday on James H. Bacon, calling for the arrest and deportation of that gentleman on the ground that he has violated the alien labor law of Canada in coming into this country within a year from this date from the United States under contract with J. R. Stephens, chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The warrant is signed by the Attorney-General of Canada and is dated July 18, 1904. Mr. Bacon at once retained the services of Mr. Keefer to fight the case in the courts, and also requested the U.S. Vice-Consul at Fort William to wire the State Department at Washington through the proper channels to take the necessary steps to secure a proper trial of the case in the Canadian courts.

Mr. Keefer, acting for Mr. Bacon, has applied to the courts in Toronto for a writ of habeas corpus and requested the Attorney-General to grant a stay of proceedings until his application can be heard, and it is said the stay has been granted Mr. Bacon is a graduate of Harvard University, a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and was an officer of the 3rd U. S. Volunteer Regiment during the Spanish-American war.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. T. J. BOYLE.

The Only Woman Theatrical Manager in the South.

To Nashville belongs the unique distinction, so far as known, of having the only woman theatrical manager south of the Ohio river, in the person of Mrs. T. J. Boyle, manager of the Grand Opera House. Mrs. Boyle is a native of New Orleans, who arrived in Nashville seven or eight years ago with her husband to look after the old opera house on Cherry street. The place was operated for combinations, and was at one time one of the most popular houses in the south.

About six years ago Mr. John D. Hopkins of Chicago opened the Grand

MRS. T. J. BOYLE.

as a stock theater, but he met with so much discouragement that he soon tired of the game, and the Boyles came into possession of the theater. They had been interested with Mr. Hopkins, and, though they realized the task of popularizing the old time stock company, they stuck to their work and eventually, through the untiring energy of Mrs. Boyle, won success. When the theater was burned, Mrs. Boyle, nothing daunted, leased the Masonic theater and continued her success. The company has been steadily improved each year until now it is said to be one of the best in the United States. The success of the enterprise is due to the indomitable energy of Mrs. Boyle, who is not only an excellent manager, but who is popular with the masses.

Mrs. Boyle's success in the theatrical world has been phenomenal. In 1901 she was offered Pike's Opera House, at Cincinnati, but declined the offer. Several New Orleans capitalists have endeavored to interest her in a house in New Orleans to no avail.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Tears and Business.

A serious reason why women do not climb up faster in the business world is because they cannot or will not take advantage of criticisms and do not grow. This is the fault of no one but the woman herself.

"What is the use?" exclaimed one man to a woman who was bemoaning the slow progress of women. "You can't tell them anything. They won't take a criticism for their own good or in a general way. Just say 'boo' to them and they'll turn on the tears. No man with any self respect is going to stand for that. So we let them go their own way. No wonder they don't 'get anywhere.'"

Now, why is this true? Why do women "turn on the tears" when they are met with a friendly criticism? It is true they apply any little suggestion directly to themselves, and, instead of being benefited and putting on the shoe if it fits, they wail and weep because they have been "accused." Every one that thinks about this phase of the business woman's existence knows that it is right here she fails. A man makes a mistake, he takes his medicine, and the disease is cured and he grows by the experience. Not so with woman.

The tears win every time. No man will persist in the face of a torrent of weeping. No matter what the trouble is, he runs if the woman becomes tearful. He learns by experience, too; he won't try again to instruct or to criticise. And because the woman has won in that one instance she never gets another chance to profit by a criticism.—Pittsburg Press.

Use Your Treasures.

The middle aged woman or one whose children have grown past the destructive age should get all the comfort there is in the pretty things that she has accumulated. It is folly to hoard the embroidered table decorations, keep her silver wrapped in cotton flannel bags or the sofa pillows put away lest they be worn out. Now is the time to enjoy them. If she thinks that it would be better to keep them for the children she should remember that when these things fall into their possession they will be out of fashion, but not antique enough to have any value beyond the sentimental one that "they were mother's." Most grownup children take pleasure in seeing their mother's home kept in the present fashion, and if they do not they certainly do not deserve as a legacy what might have made their mother's life more comfortable and more enjoyable.

Plaster Casts.

Good plaster casts of well known reliefs and figures can be had for small sums, but their possibilities are by no means so generally appreciated. Those of the better sort often are charming, save for the crudity of the white plaster, and this best can be overcome without much effort by a really simple process. All that is needed are yellow beeswax, a soft cloth, good muscles and a fire. The wax must be melted and kept where it is warm enough to remain in the liquid state. The plaster must be heated and kept warm during the process. For the rest a cloth is dipped into the wax and rubbed over the plaster surface little by little, using more and more of the wax as required and the rubbing being kept up vigorously until the whole surface takes a warm, rich, yellowish tone and shows a sort of subdued polish which adds greatly to the depth of color.

Renewing Old Chairs.

If you are clever with upholstering tools you can easily manage the dilapidation of your chairs. In the first place, the old covers must be removed, lifting out all the nails carefully, and the old stuff will serve as a pattern by which to cut out the new, be it brocade, tapestry or velvet. Having done this, stretch the fabric tightly over the seat, nailing it firmly down on each side to keep it in place, and then cutting off all the superfluous stuff. To make these rough edges quite tidy, either a gimp or a narrow furniture fringe must then be put all around, using either brass or copper pyramid studs.

Arranging the Hair.

Don't you find the single rose behind the ear, when becoming, the most charming of coiffures? Much depends upon the expression of the face, in which there must be a sentimental note to produce harmony. Otherwise do not attempt this arrangement, but gather the hair so as to create a triangular effect on the top of the head, taking the width from ear to ear at the base, or twist up your soft fluffy puffs with or without some short curled ends, or roll a pompadour so that there shall be no other line above it, the front hair alone being visible in an unbroken line.

For the Cook to Remember.

One-half a cup of butter, one-quarter pound; two level tablespoons of butter, one ounce; four level tablespoons of flour, one ounce; sixteen tablespoonfuls of liquor, one cup; four saltspoons, one teaspoonful; four teaspoons, one tablespoonful; twelve tablespoons (dry material), one cup; four cups, one pound; one cup of granulated sugar, one-half a pound; sixty drops, one teaspoonful; ten eggs, one pound; sixteen large tablespoons, one-half pint; a common sized tumbler holds one-half a pint.—Table Talk.

A Woman's Work.

A woman who is handy with her needle need never lack for work. What you want to do is to let others know just how clever you are in this line. Regardless of the amount of ready to wear clothing that is manufactured there is still a demand for the neat garment made by the home dressmaker. It is not a difficult task to secure one or two customers, and the quality of your work will bring you others.—New Idea Magazine.

Know What's In Your Closets.

A list of the contents of a closet tacked up inside of the door will save much wearisome hunting for some particular thing, especially when required in a hurry. The same method can be applied to bureau drawers, as far as tabulating the contents goes. They may be entered in a notebook for convenient reference, each drawer being designated by a number.

Rice Water.

Rice water is very useful in some cases of sickness. Wash two ounces of rice in cold water, set it on the fire in a quart of water and cook for an hour. Rub through a hair sieve and sweeten with honey. Lemon juice may be added to flavor.

Denmark Farms.

In Denmark most of the farms are from five to twenty-five acres and are owned by the peasantry. About half of the land is in oats, hay, pasture and root crops for the horses, milk cows and sheep. In proportion to her size she has more cattle than any other country in Europe.

Paganini's Secret.

Paganini would never let any one hear him tune his violin, and it is believed that many of the extremely peculiar effects he produced were obtained by his tuning the violin half a tone lower or higher than the ordinary pitch.

HOISTING ROPES.

The Threads of Wire Upon Which So Many Lives Daily Depend.

While the longest ropes are used for hauling purposes, some of the most interesting data in connection with wire ropes are obtained with their use for hoisting purposes. Hundreds of thousands of lives are literally each day hung by a small wire thread as the men are lowered into and hoisted from the bowels of the earth, and in many cases the only means of communication between the surface and the underground workings, which are from a few feet to a mile in depth, is by a comparatively small hoisting rope. Think of hanging from the end of a cable only a few inches in diameter and a mile long, being hoisted at a rate which is faster than that of the average railroad train, and some idea of the hoisting problem can be gained. To the honor of the wire rope manufacturers it must be said that very few shaft accidents are due to the breaking of the rope, excepting where the cage is overwound and unwarranted demands are made upon the rope or which are traceable to false economy on the part of the users of wire rope. No part of a mining plant is more carefully inspected and watched than the hoisting rope, and very few mine managers will take any unnecessary risks in the hoisting of men. The skill of the wire rope maker is taxed to the utmost to provide ropes for hoisting from great depths. To make a rope of practicable size that will be sufficiently flexible and that will bear even its own weight is no mean problem, for in such cases the weight of the rope is often much more than the material lifted; hence we have taper rope intended to give a varying section dependent on the amount of rope off the drum or reel.—Mines and Minerals.

San Salvador.

The city of San Salvador, capital of the South American republic of the same name, is called the "Swinging Mat" on account of its numerous earthquakes.

Parsley.

Parsley was used by the Greeks as a funeral plant. "To be in need of parsley" was a common euphemism for death. On one occasion a Greek army was marching out on a campaign, when four mules laden with parsley were encountered. The whole army was panic stricken and refused to go any farther.

Mendelssohn.

Mendelssohn began to compose in his twelfth year, and so methodical were his habits even then that the manuscript volumes containing his own scores of his works are in an unbroken series until his death. There are forty-four of these great volumes.

Washing In Homer's Time.

According to Homer, clothing in his time was washed by being placed in water and stamped until it was supposed to be clean.

A Two Sided Flag.

The strangest flag under which men ever fought is that of the Macedonian insurgents. It is red on one side and black on the other. The black side is intended to be symbolic of the iniquity of Turkish rule, and should the Macedonians ever gain independence or autonomy the flag would be changed.

Odd Use For Myrrh.

A strange use of myrrh is made by the Abyssinian hunters, who smear their bodies with it before hunting elephants, in the belief that their quarry will not attack them on account of the smell.

Scotch Clan Tartans.

Among the clans of Scotland different kinds of heather were adopted as clan badges, and from an intermingling of the colors of these badges and sometimes the color of the rocks and mountains which the tribes inhabited the beautiful and historic clan tartans were designed.

Dead Sea Salt.

In a ton of Dead sea water there are 187 pounds of salt; Red sea, 93; Mediterranean, 85; Atlantic, 81; English channel, 72; Baltic, 18; Black sea, 26; Caspian sea, 11.

Offenbach's Music.

Offenbach always tried to please rather than instruct, and of the sixty-four operas that he wrote in less than twenty-five years only one had the good fortune to last more than three or four years. His maxim was, "A grain of wit is better than a bushel of learning."

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

OBITUARY.

Death of Daniel Shannon Early This Morning.

The death occurred this morning at two o'clock of Mr. Daniel Shannon, at his residence, on Charlotte-st., at the age of 52 years. The deceased had been ill for some time.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

FUNERAL OF LATE D. LEMAY

Largely Attended by Sorrowing Friends This Morning.

The funeral of the late David Lemay was largely attended this morning by the friends of the deceased. Service was held in St. Peter's Cathedral at nine o'clock, and interment was made at the Roman Catholic cemetery. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers:—Messrs. D. O'Connell, D. H. Burritt, Thos. Fortye, O de Laplante, Jas. Lynch and Dr. McNulty.

DID NOT GET HIS DRINK.

Placed in the Cells to Sober Up a Little.

An amusing thing happened yesterday in an office in town, and as the result of which the offender spent the night in the cells. It seems that he was under the influence of liquor, and, mistaking the office for a bar, entered and called for a drink. The young lady in the office ordered him out, but he persisted in saying that he had the money all right, and would not leave. She went to the 'phone and called up the police station, and the drunk was speedily removed to the station, and appeared in Police Court Monday.

FURTHER NEED OF BATHING PLACE

Young Men Bathing in Little Lake Without Suits.

While we were recommending a couple of nights ago that the town should provide a suitable bathing place for such exercise, the fact was more plainly evidenced last night about seven o'clock, when about twenty-five young men were bathing off the booms in the lake. They had no suits on and took a delight in standing exposed on these booms while canoes were passing, containing ladies and children. This state of things should not be the case, and the young men are old enough to know better. The cost of a suit is a mere trifle, and we would be glad to see that persons bathing in such a public place are properly dressed.

STOPPED BY LOGS.

The T. H. Mann Excursion Yesterday Went to Jubilee.

The excursion to Stoney Lake yesterday per Str. Sovereign of the T. H. Mann employees, was largely attended and a most enjoyable time was spent. The excursionists were somewhat disappointed when they reached lock No. 3 and learned that they could not proceed further on account of the logs in the river. The boat made several attempts but such poor progress was made that it was decided to go to Jubilee Point. The Point was reached shortly before six o'clock and the excursionists had tea there, leaving for home about 8 o'clock. The sail up the river by moonlight was very pleasant and considering the disappointment of the morning, the outing was greatly enjoyed. The crew of the Sovereign did everything possible to get up the river but the logs were too plentiful. They were very obliging and made the trip as enjoyable as possible.

Will Line Up at Regatta.

The sport loving souls at Stoney Lake want to be in at every aquatic scrap and have arranged to get to Chemong Lake for the regatta. The steamer Alert has been chartered and will take up a number of choice spirits Saturday morning, Aug. 6. In the goodness of their hearts, which are large, and their desire to be helpful, which is big, they wish it known that any Peterborough people who are due at Stoney Lake for Sunday and who wish to see the Regatta, can spend the afternoon at Chemong and go to Stoney Lake on the Alert. This is a capital idea and settles the thing for some who were hesitating. All this has been phoned us by Mr. J. H. Knapman, who is a most obliging chap and should be made judge or referee or put on the distance post at the regatta as a recognition of services rendered

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

CHEMONG PARK REGATTA.

Promises to be a Big Success on Saturday, Aug. 6th.

Saturday, Aug. 6th, promises to be a big day at Chemong and the committee in charge of the arrangements are making every preparation for having one of the best regattas ever held in this vicinity.

The Trent Valley Navigation Co. have agreed to have the steamer Otonnah leave Sturgeon Point on the morning of the Regatta, making her regular trip to Chemong and Burleigh and remaining at the Park until 6 p.m., on her return trip, for the accommodation of Bobcaygeon and Sturgeon Point visitors. Free transportation will be furnished for boats. Arrangements are being made for a steamer excursion from Stoney Lake points returning in the evening.

Buses will run from Peterborough hourly during the day. Parties leaving Toronto or other points by G.T.R. or C.P.R. morning trains will connect with buses at Peterborough, reaching the park in time for the regatta.

The programme is as follows:

1.00 p.m.—I., Sailing skift race, Six miles, triangular course.

1.15 p.m.—II., Sailing dinghy race—Six miles triangular.

JUDGES.

The following gentlemen will act as judges: Messrs. H. G. Buck, Norwood; F. Addison, Stoney Lake; A. E. Bottum, W. L. Read, and W. T. C. Boyd, Bobcaygeon; T. W. Greer, Sturgeon Point; J. G. Edwards, Lindsay and C. B. McAllister and A. H. Stratton, Peterborough, assisted by members of committee.

Entries for the different races should be sent to the Secretary, Mr. A. A. Hollingshead, Chemong Hotel. Already a number of entries from Toronto, Hamilton, Orillia, Lindsay, Sturgeon Point, and other places have been received, and others have sent enquiries about the regatta.

BASEBALL.

Galt leads the Canadian League with seven games won and two lost, a percentage of 777. Keep up the good work, "Yebbie."

being tried out to-day.

Leary, Toronto's new twirler, is being tried out to-day.

One of the best games of the season will be seen here on Saturday when the Oshawa team meets the locals. The locals are putting in lots of hard practice and intend to win out.

The Lindsay Post is getting sore on their pitcher, McLaughlin. It says: "What is the matter with our pitcher? He has not been up to the grounds since the last game. The manager should look after him. He needs lots of practice the same as the rest of the players."

CRICKET.

The touring Lindsay cricket team were defeated by the St. Albans of Toronto yesterday.

LACROSSE.

The Tecumsehs of Toronto were again defeated yesterday at St. Catharines by the close score of 3-2. Brantford has some chance now of winning and their supporters are quite sanguine after giving the Chippewas such a hard drubbing.

The T.A.S. lacrosse team go to Millbrook to-morrow afternoon to play their return game. The game with Port Hope will likely be played here on Saturday week.

A great crowd is going down from Lindsay to Cobourg to witness the ball game between the Lindsay and Cobourg teams.

A meeting of the executive of the Midland League will be held at the Ontario House, Port Hope, this evening, when the protests that have been entered by the different teams will be settled.

HOW FORGERY IS DETECTED.

Characteristics of the Writer Will Always Crop Out Somewhere.

"I am not an expert in chirography, but I have at least made enough of a study of handwriting to tell why it is often easy to detect the forgery of a name, though even the man whose name has been forged may declare the handwriting is a perfect replica of his own," Arnold Keating says. "Of course you know—everybody knows, for that matter—that a man or woman never writes his name twice exactly in the same way. There is always a slight difference, and where two signatures of the same name appear identically alike it is safe to assume that one or both is forgery. But suppose the signature has been forged but once, suppose the handwriting of which it is an exact copy has been destroyed or is not obtainable, of what avail is the comparative method then? The exact comparison cannot be employed, but other almost infallible comparisons are still available. When a child is taught to write at first its penmanship is severely stiff and cramped; then it becomes very much like that in the copybook, but after this is discarded the child's character begins to creep into its handwriting.

"There are little idiosyncrasies apparent that are not to be found in the chirography of other children, and this manifestation of character in writing continues to change, with development until about the age of 25, when a person's character is fixed and his handwriting from that time on continues about the same. The forger's copy of the signature or writing will appear to be exactly like that of the man, but when examined under a powerful microscope the tiny evidences of character that appear in every loop and line will be found to be largely missing, for the same character is not behind the pen. It is in the minute details that the forgery is discovered.

"Then, again, a man's mental condition will impress itself upon his writing. If he is nervous, bubbling over with joy or depressed, the fact will be apparent to the expert in writing. If the alleged handwriting doesn't show traces of the mental condition the man was really in at the time he was supposed to have written a certain letter or signed a certain letter, the signature or the writing is a forgery. These are some of the ways by which an expert detects the most successful forger.

BICYCLE STOLEN

From Brantford on July 18th—Cleveland Make.

Chief Bonnel received a post card this morning from Chief Slemin, of Brantford, informing him of a bicycle stolen there on July 18th. The wheel was a Cleveland make, No. 220,990, black enamel frame, steel handle bars with cork grips; both rims split near tires; Dunlop tires, 22-inch frame, and coaster brake.

OLIVE KIDD'S BODY FOUND.

Recovered at Noon To-day After a Long Search.

Ever since the dreadful drowning accident of Monday night parties have continued the search for the body of the drowned girl, and not until noon to-day were they successful. Particulars are not yet to hand how the body was found, but it is believed that it was near the spot where she fell overboard. Undertaker Comstock was telephoned for, and left immediately to bring the body to town.

Later—The body of the late Olive Kidd was brought to town late this afternoon, and was in a fairly good state of preservation. The back of the head and neck was badly bruised, and the supposition that she was hit by the screw of the boat must have been correct. The body was found by a resident of the locality near where she fell off the boat, and was brought to the surface with the aid of grappling irons. The particulars of the grappling irons. The particulars of the funeral will be announced to-morrow.

An inquest will be held on the body of the late Olive Kidd, by Dr. Gray, Coroner. The jury will be empannelled at Comstock's undertaking rooms, this afternoon at 5.30, and afterwards the proceedings will be taken up, probably not until Monday next.

A LINDSAY WEDDING.

Mr. Wes. Henders, Late of Town, Married to Miss S. Hughan.

The following taken from the Lindsay Post refers to the marriage of Mr. Wes. Henders, who has been employed for some time in the bookstore of A. H. Stratton & Co. During his stay in town "Wes" has made many warm friends, who will all wish him every happiness in his married life. The Post says;

"On Tuesday morning, July 26th, at 8 o'clock, a quiet wedding took place at the residence of Mr. C. Huggan, jeweler, Kent. st., the bride being Miss Selina Hughan, and the groom Mr. Wesley Henders, of Peterborough. Miss Kate Henders acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Newton Henders as groomsman. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Henderson. Only the friends of the couple were present. The couple were accompanied by the bridesmaid and groomsman as far as Toronto, where they will spend a few days, after which they will take up their residence at Port Arthur, where Mr. Henders has secured a fine position."

INDIAN RIVER NEWS.

Nearly a Drowning Accident Other News.

The farmers are busily engaged at their harvest.

Men and women are a scarcity around this district.

Mr. T. Doherty was visiting Miss Theresa O'Leary on Sunday last.

Mr. Andrew Quinlan and Miss E. O'Leary were visiting friends in Peterborough last week.

Mr. Jeremiah Heffernan and Miss Aggie O'Connor attended the moonlight excursion on Monday night.

Jimmie is not always asleep when his eyes are closed. What do you think, Pete?

Mr. Dick Cornelius, accompanied by Miss L. Doherty, Miss V. O'Brien and Miss R. Doherty, went out for a sail on the Indian River, on yesterday evening, when only a short distance from the shore the canoe capsized, throwing the occupants out in deep water. The Misses Doherty, being expert swimmers, reached the shore in safety, while Miss O'Brien clung to the canoe until Mr. A. Carveth, who happened to be in a canoe near by, released her from the perilous condition. Mr. Cornelius managed to reach shore safely.

Brevities.

—A drunk was let off this morning at the Police Court.

—A meeting of the Finance Committee will be held this evening.

—A special meeting of the non-commissioned officers will be held at the mess rooms at 8.15 this evening. All non-coms. are requested to be present.

—The R. T. of T moonlight excursion down the river last night by the Str. City of Peterborough was attended by about 100 people. The sail was greatly enjoyed by those on board as the night was perfect.

—There was a meeting, probably a caucus, this morning of six dogs—of both sexes—at the corner of George and Simcoe streets. One of the number was decorated with a tag, and most likely would be made chief of the band in consequence of this mark of esteem.

Why Not Have a Raffia Hat?

It is not such a tedious, difficult matter as most people suppose to make one of those pretty raffia hats that are so popular just now. Of course elaborate designs may be attempted, but the plain woven hat looks as pretty when worn as the more fancy ones. These woven ones may be made in a couple of evenings and are very pretty made up in the wide sailor or trio cover shape and trimmed with bands of velvet or foliage. The raffia, which comes in black, red, green, brown and natural shades, is on sale at the Review Office, which is open every evening.—2d.

FORECAST FOR AUGUST

REV. IRL R. HICKS PREDICTS FOR NEXT MONTH.

Usual Storm Periods, Heat Cold and Earthquakes in August.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks, of St. Louis, has promulgated his "forecasts for August," from which the following extracts are taken:—

The first six days of August are covered by the combined disturbances of Vulcan, Mercury and Mars. The regular Vulcan storm period is central on the 3rd. The culminating days of the period will be the 3rd, 4th and 5th. On and touching these days storm conditions will develop and pass from west to east acros the country. Sections which have been visited by many electrical, rain and hail storms during much of July and August, will most likely have the same character of storms during this period. In the absence of the Mars influence the Mercury disturbance added to this regular storm period would greatly increase the chances of general, diffused rains during this period, but sections which have had little rain for weeks prior, we fear, will get more threatening storm clouds and bluster than rain during these disturbances. The Mercury influence, blended with a regular storm period, as in the present instance, normally tends to copious and general rains; but the dominance of the Mars influence tends to fix and perpetuate local conditions, which prevail at the beginning of this period. After heavy storm and bluster about the 3rd, 4th and 5th, look for rising barometer, westerly winds and cooler.

On and touching the 8th and 9th under the influence of the reactionary storm forces, intensified by the moon's extreme north declination and conjunction with the sun, the temperature will visit many localities in the fall, and severe storms and blusterings of the summer, the barometer will visit many localities in their sweep from the west to east. The heated spell will not break down until after the new moon on the 11th, with strong probabilities that it will last into the regular storm period extending from the 11th to the 17th.

The moon will be at new, or in conjunction with earth and sun, on the 11th, in perigree, or nearest the sun, on the 12th, and on the celestial equator on the 14th, the central day of a regular storm period. This period is also embraced in the oncoming Venus disturbance, which is central on the 24th. The waning influence of the Mars disturbance will also combine with the causes named during that period. It is more than probable than equatorial disturbances will make their appearance in the gulf regions early in this period. The disturbance of this period, whether or not West India storms come up from the south, may be expected over most interior parts of the country from Saturday, the 13th, to Tuesday, the 16th, the culmination falling most likely on the 14th and 15th. Vicious thunderstorms and high gales will centre about Sunday, the 14th. If equatorial hurricanes or cyclones should make their presence felt about our northern coasts at this time, the storms that visit interior states a few days later will be followed by unseasonably cool weather. Otherwise the heated term will not be broken effectually until after the storms of a subsequent period.

Reactionary storm conditions will return on and next to the 19th and 20th. This period will be within the bruce of the earth's autumnal equinox and near the centre of the Venus period, thus increasing the probabilities of equinoctial storms on the south waters and along the southern coast. There is almost a scientific certainty of such storms in such parts of the earth before the end of August, making it wise for those most vitally concerned to watch the first indications of every storm period.

It is well to remember that destructive Venus hailstorms are almost sure to attend the storms, especially in the great northwestern grain regions, during the last half of August. Change to rising barometer and very much cooler, especially at night, will follow for some days the reactionary centreing about the 18th and 19th.

The last regular storm period for August is central on the 26th, extending from the 24th to 29th. Within this period the moon is at full on the 25th in apogee on the 26th, and on the celestial equator on the 28th. This period is also at the centre of the Venus perturbation, and fully under the pressure of the earth's September equinox. We may, therefore, confidently anticipate some very marked storm disturbances at this time. These storms will touch inland sections, and counter storm areas will be induced from northwestern extremes, bringing many heavy, and some dangerous storms throughout the Southern and Central States.

The indications are that the general disturbance of the last period will be followed by a general high barometer, with fierce, high winds and unseasonably cold weather out of the north-west. If frosts make their appearance over the northern to middle regions of the country during the last few days of August, our readers need not be wholly taken by surprise.

The dates upon which volcanic and earthquake disturbances are most likely to reach a maximum, generally over the globe, will be the 9th to the 13th, and the 24th to the 28th of August. We will name Thursday, the 11th, and Thursday, the 25th, as central days of these probable seismic periods of disturbance.

An Excellent Number.

The August Canadian Magazine has three features. The first is five excellent short stories by well-known writers. The second is some splendid Japanese portraits and scenes. The third is a collection of pictures taken at Annapolis and St. John during the recent Champlain-De Monts celebrations. In fact, the number is an excellent one, from the colored frontispiece to the last department.

A New County Map.

The Review has issued, for general distribution, a new edition of its well known map of the County of Peterborough. The map has been re-drawn and brought up to date and is the most accurate map existing of the county. It is of convenient size and yet legible and handy for reference. Copies may be had by calling at the Review Stationery Store, or will be sent by mail on receipt of 3 cents in stamps to cover postage.

SETTING THE CLOCK FAST.

A Pleasant Sort of Deception Common to Many People.

It is a common thing to find the clocks in nine out of ten households either fifteen minutes or half an hour fast, and should you happen to be in a hurry or mention the fact that you have to be going you are at once reassured by the fact that you have no cause to hurry, as the clock is so much ahead of the time.

Has it ever occurred to you why clocks are usually put ahead? Some physicians have said it is due to laziness, for it is such a satisfaction to the lazy man to find when he has to get up at 7 in the morning and strains his half closed eyes to look at the clock that it is half an hour fast and he has so much more time to doze, with the result that he oversleeps himself anyhow and misses his train or boat.

Said a watchmaker when asked about the subject:

"Yes, it is a peculiar thing with most people to put their clocks fast, and, while there may be some satisfaction in it when it comes to dosing a little longer, there is really no advantage in it, for when you wake up, say, at 6 and glance at the clock and it registers half past 6, the fact remains that it is a half hour fast. While this may make you feel easier, knowing that you still have thirty minutes to doze, I confess I can't see much advantage in it.

"Why not have the clock right? It is the same thing in the end.

"Suppose railroads were to put this into practice, how many trains do you think people would miss thereby? This putting clocks fast is really only a pleasant form of deception which people like to practice on themselves, but it does more harm than good."

A Way Spencer Had.

Herbert Spencer had a passion for generalization. If you remarked it was a fine day, Spencer would answer, "Yes; anticyclonic conditions like those of yesterday seldom break up without warning of the advent of a depression from westward." If you observed that Mrs. Jones was a pretty woman, Spencer would reply, "Her father was a west highlander and her mother an Irishwoman, and intermarriage between highlanders and Irish almost always produces physically handsome but intellectually inferior children."

The Original Anglomaniac.

Wayne had just won the battle of Stony Point.

"But why," inquired the British, "do they call you Mad Anthony?"

"Because," replied the doughty general, "I am the original Anglomaniac."

Putting his statement to the test, he pressed onward, taking with him several cannon of the latest English manufacture.

Serious Defect.

"Young man, this elevator is out of order. I shall certainly report it to my husband, who is an assistant elevator inspector."

"Wh-wh-what's the matter with it, ma'am?"

"The mirrors are soiled and diagy, sir."

Inconsiderate.

Mabel—I do believe Miss Ponds is in love with that poor young lawyer. Clara—What a shame! And she would make such a good wife for some fellow who was marrying for money.—Puck.

Chagrin.

Little Dick—Uncle Richard, what is chagrin? Uncle Richard—Dickie, chagrin is that feeling you ought to have when you kick at the cat and fall over backward.

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

Copyright, 1903, by F. R. Toombs

The hours of the night dragged wearily. The soldiers slept, and, not being accustomed in their wild life to keeping guard at night, most of the guards were asleep by midnight. Harvey and Orskoff lay close together. A wriggling motion on the part of Harvey attracted the Russian. In a moment he felt a nudge in the side. Harvey was sitting up, his hands free, industriously untying the cords around his legs and feet. With a swift slash of his knife he set the Russian free.

"Come!" he whispered.

He crawled away in the darkness, keeping in the deeper shadows of the trees. Orskoff followed. Neither spoke for many minutes. They kept working their way in the direction of the road and away from Silcon. At last, having cleared the camp, Harvey stood up straight.

"What is your plan?" whispered Orskoff breathlessly.

"I have none except to get away," said Harvey. "Free, we can do something. Let's walk along this road, and as we walk we can think."

CHAPTER XXI.

THE MONASTERY OF THE LAMAS.

"SURELY," said Orskoff, peering in the darkness at the face of the American, "it is not your purpose to desert the girls?"

"I should say not; but with our feet and hands tied and we helpless in that camp we could not assist them. It's this way: Domitan is now camping in the woods. His horses are on the cliff. According to what he said, there is a road farther up the pass by which he will take the camels to the mountains. If that rascal ever gets the girls into the Zannuck stronghold, nothing that we can do will avail. We've got to think of something to do now."

"But what? Is it to fight? I will fight to the last drop of blood!"

"No; fighting will not help us. We've got to win out by some trick."

They sat down, and Orskoff leaned his head in his hands. Harvey became intent with his thoughts.

"Hello!" said Harvey, getting to his feet quickly. "Somebody around here! Hear that noise? Sounds like a wounded man calling for aid."

"Must be one of the Zannucks or one of the ameer's men who crawled here to get out of the way."

"I'm going to see who and what it is," said Harvey. "I can't see friend or enemy suffer when helpless."

They soon discovered a man, wounded by spear and sword, lying near the side of the road.

"Art thou friends?" he whispered in the tongue of the ameer's people.

"We have reason to be enemies, but we have no wish to harm you. Is there anything we can do?"

"Canst thou bring water?"

"I could if I knew where there was any," said Harvey. "Do you know of a river or spring near by?"

"Nay, there is none nearer than the Batoola temple."

"And what is this Batoola temple?"

"A place for lamas—priests of the monastery. There are many there. They are hospitable. If I could get there, they would know how to deal with my wounds."

"How far is it?"

"It is not far. It stands on the highway, but is surrounded by high walls."

"How came you here?"

"I was with the ameer's men when we were attacked by the Zannucks. I was wounded and crawled away from the pass, for the Zannucks kill all their wounded enemies. I could go no farther."

"You came to a good place. The Zannucks are almost within reach of our voices. But tell me more about that Batoola temple."

"As I said, it is a lama monastery. There are monks of all kinds there—missionary monks, begging monks, praying monks."

"Are they all natives of Bokhara?"

"Not all. They come of many nations. Could I be carried there?" asked the wounded soldier.

"We have work to do here," broke in Orskoff. "We cannot give you the time."

"You spoke of begging monks," said Harvey. "What do they beg? How do they reach people?"

"They walk along the roads and ask alms of all they meet. It is in this way the monasteries are supported."

"What do they wear? What sort of looking"—

"You interested in monks?" interrupted Orskoff impatiently. "We have no time to think of them."

"I am thinking of them very hard just now."

Again addressing the wounded man, Harvey asked:

"What sort of garb do these monks wear?"

"Cloaks and hoods. They are humble and holy men."

"I've seen them near Lake Baikal in Siberia," said Orskoff. "They cover their heads and faces so their own grandmothers wouldn't recognize them."

"Oh, they do! And the monastery is poor, supported by alms?"

"Yes," said the soldier of the ameer.

"You want to go there?"

"I would live if I could be carried there."

"If we could make a litter of some kind, we might do it."

"We could manage with our coats to make a chair in which to carry him," said Orskoff, "but we have not the time. We cannot forsake our duty to the girls for a wounded enemy."

"We are not forsaking the girls. I have an idea these monks can be of use to us. I want to see them. Help me make the chair."

Harvey's voice was imperative. Orskoff protested, but it was of no avail. He tied the sleeves of their coats together and formed what he called a Russian field chair. The wounded man was then picked up, and the three started off.

"Tell me more about these monks," said Harvey as they went along.

"They are priests of the religion of Buddha-Sakymuni. They are good and holy men."

"Have I not heard somewhere that they are supposed to be gifted with the power to foretell the future—a sort of second sight?"

"Yes, they have magic sight."

"Are the Zannucks believers in these monks?"

"Yes, all of them."

"How shall we know when we reach this monastery?"

"There is a light at the pool. If I can be bathed in the sacred pool of Batoola, I shall be cured."

"What pool is that?"

"The life giving pool of Batoola. It is just within the first gate. One who bathes in it is made holy and is given much power by the Dalai lama."

"Watch for the light. But the dawn is breaking; we shall soon be able to see for ourselves."

An hour later they saw the stone walls of the lama monastery.

"The first gate is there," said the Bokharan, who proved to be a young, handsome fellow and seemed inclined to be friendly.

"How do we call them?" asked Harvey as they reached the iron gate.

"There is a rope. Pull it, and a bell will ring."

Harvey pulled a rope that dangled from above, and inside a bell tolled twice. Immediately the wicket of the gate was opened.

"Who thus disturbs the peace of this holy city?" asked a voice.

The hooded face of a monk peered out at them.

"A wounded soldier of the ameer who seeks thy help," answered the young Bokharan.

"Enter."

The gate was opened, and the monk walked away, leaving the three at the edge of a large pool. Soon other monks in their peculiar garb, wearing hoods that hid their faces, came toward them, and the wounded soldier was laid upon a bed brought from the interior. Another wall could be seen, and inside of this was a large building.

"He shall be bathed in the pool by our brothers," said one of the priests. "The living waters of Batoola will surely heal his wounds."

The gatekeeper went to lock the gate.

"Nay, good father," said Harvey; "do not lock the gate. When we learn of the effect of the bathing on our friend, we will proceed upon our way."

An aged priest was coming toward them, followed by several others. The face of the old priest was kindly, and as he examined the wounded man Harvey watched him closely.

"He's my man," he said.

The old lama gave several orders, which his inferiors put into execution, and then turned away. Harvey intercepted him.

"Holy one," he said as he walked by the old priest's side, "may one who knows but little of thy race and religion ask a boon?"

"All men may come to us and learn."

"It is not to learn, for there is not time. I wish to do that which perhaps is not according to your laws. Not far from here are wicked men, hundreds of them, who have stolen two young women and will perhaps harm them if we cannot rescue them. Two of us against so many are powerless, but we could do something by strategy if we wore the garb of your order. I have gold, and here—here is a watch from faroff America, here is a diamond ring from Paris; these will I give to enrich thy temple for the use of two such outfits of clothing as thy people wear."

The old priest looked at him curiously.

"This request never has been made before. I do not understand. Wouldst thou seek to harm us by a wrongful act?"

"Is it wrongful to rescue young women from robbers?"

"Nay, but the robe of a holy man must not be soiled with blood."

"I promise that no stain of crime shall rest upon it. If blood there is, it shall be our own."

The gleaming diamond attracted the old priest. He listened to the ticking of the watch.

"They are wonderful and beautiful. And wouldst thou give both for the use of two of these garbs?"

"Yes, gladly."

"Come with me."

Harvey motioned to Orskoff, who followed him.

"What are you after now?" he asked.

"You and I are to become monks—old and feeble monks."

Orskoff stared in amazement. His amazement grew as he saw Harvey

An aged priest was coming toward them.

hand over to the priest his expensive watch and valuable diamond ring in exchange for two outfits of the monkish garb.

"These garments are now and have not been consecrated to our purpose," said the lama. "Take them. Remember, thou shalt shed no blood."

"We promise, and we thank thee."

With the robes and hoods they went out of the place. Harvey started at a quick pace back toward the camp. At a convenient place he stopped and said:

"As soon as I heard of those monks it seemed to me that this was the solution of the problem. We can't fight 200 men. My idea is to disguise ourselves and appear as old and feeble as possible, traveling in the same direction as Domitan's forces. We will ask a lift as far as the Batoola monastery, and if the Zannucks are believers, as the Bokharan said, they will grant what we ask. The camels bearing the girls have the lightest burdens, and it ought not to be difficult to get seats on them. Then—well, let the rest take care of itself. We can tell what to do when we get there."

"I swear by the holy crown of the great white czar," Orskoff exclaimed, "that you are the most daring and the most resourceful devil I ever knew! Did anything ever overcome you? The world is your plaything. You do what you will with all people. If I had asked that old priest for these things, he would have expelled me from the place."

"Well, you are a soldier. I've got to know how to talk or I couldn't sell windmills."

"Talk! You could convince a man that he was a horse. It takes no great amount of talk sometimes to convince him he is an ass. This is the most surprising result of your skill I have yet witnessed. Well, the thing is fascinating. We will try it."

The Russian wondered still more at the resources of the American during the process of disguising themselves. The people of the region were dark. With the bruised husks of nuts of a walnut tree he made an olive colored stain, which he daubed over their faces. With a pair of folding scissors he cut off the Russian's mustache, bringing sadness to his heart. They made themselves grimy with the soil of the road and practiced the walk of feeble old men. So well did Harvey execute this act that Orskoff said they would become play actors next.

CASE OF COL. GREGORY

More of Inside History of Trouble in St. Kitts Dragoons.

Mr Fred. Borden Accuses Col. Gregory, and Mr. R. L. Borden Criticises Col. Otter—Politics and the Militia As Revealed in House of Commons—Mr. Fitzpatrick's Election Act Amendment Bill Discussed in Committee.

Ottawa, July 28.—The House had no preliminaries yesterday morning, but plunged at once into the orders of the day.

On again going into committee on Mr. Fitzpatrick's bill to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900, Mr. R. L. Borden led in objections to holding elections at a subsequent date to the general elections in a number of ridings which were designated because of their inaccessibility. He specially mentioned Kootenay as having better facilities than others.

In reply to Mr. Blain's assurance that Nipissing was now much better opened up, the Minister of Justice said he would drop that riding from the provision.

Mr. W. L. Galliher (Yale-Cariboo) said Kootenay comprised a territory of nine ridings for the Local Legislature, and it was a physical impossibility for the returning officer to cover the territory in the time at his disposal.

Mr. R. G. Macpherson pointed out that Comox-Atlin was even worse, being 1,500 miles in length.

Mr. W. H. Bennett asked that there be no provision for delay in the Algomas, and Mr. Clancy pointing out that Manitoulin Island in the east riding was the part most difficult of access at certain seasons, Mr. Fitzpatrick agreed to drop West Algoma from this provision also.

Mr. Galliher added that to cover Kootenay in time a man would need wings.

Mr. W. R. Brock said commercial men had no difficulty in getting through the riding.

"In a Pullman car," observed Mr. Galliher.

Mr. Brock urged that all the elections be held on one day.

After some further discussion the committee reported progress and will sit again to get further information on the British Columbia constituencies.

Mr. Fitzpatrick's bill to amend the Representation Act, 1903, by making several minor amendments, which have been previously explained, was passed through the committee stage and reported.

The House then went into committee on the bill giving further powers to the arbitrators who are adjudicating a dispute between His Majesty and the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada respecting a portion of track east of Quebec. The bill was still under consideration when the House rose at 1 o'clock.

Col. Gregory's Case.

More of the inside history of the trouble between Col. Gregory of the 2nd St. Catharines Dragoons and the Government was revealed in the House yesterday. The features of the debate were accusations made by Sir Frederick Borden against Col. Gregory and the strictures that were passed on the official conduct of Col. Otter. E. A. Lancaster, Col. Sam Hughes and R. L. Borden charged on the one hand that Col. Gregory was refused an extension of his command because he would not co-operate with the Militia Department in promoting an unqualified officer to the position of second in command in the room and stead of Major Ferguson.

Sir Frederick Borden energetically denied this charge and accused Col. Gregory of keeping Major Ferguson in a position which he was physically unable to fill so that he would have an excuse for demanding an extension of time as colonel of the regiment. Sir Frederick was very bitter in his references to Col. Gregory, whom he accused of malicious hostility to Major Glasgow. The correspondence read to the House by Mr. Lancaster showed that Col. Otter had persistently urged Col. Gregory to recommend Major Glasgow for promotion and gave him to distinctly understand that in no other way could he obtain the extension of his command.

It was alleged that there was political influence behind Col. Otter in his efforts to wring the desired recommendation from Col. Gregory. Touching this phase of the case R. L. Borden severely criticised the conduct of Col. Otter. "If," said Mr. Borden, "I had anything to do with Col. Otter and he could not give me any explanation to show that political intrigue was not affecting his judgment, I would consider that he was worthy to be dismissed within 48 hours."

Canada's Preparedness.

Ottawa, July 28.—Senator Perley asked in the Upper House yesterday for a statement showing the military strength of the Government of Canada in so far as it relates to ammunition, rifles and other weapons of warfare, where and in what proportions are such stored. Hon. W. R. Scott replied that it had been held improper to give information. There are 32,000 Lee-Enfield rifles in the hands of the regiments and rifle clubs and 456 rifles and 815 carbines in reserve.

Rocked the Boat.

Jamestown, N.Y., July 28.—Dr. B. H. Whitely, health officer of Corry, Pa., was drowned in Findley Lake yesterday. Dr. Whitely, his son and daughter were out rowing. Some one of the party began to rock the boat and it was upset. Dr. Whitely became entangled in a trolling line, and was drowned.

Succumbed to Burns.

Toronto, July 28.—Mrs. Susan Malone, who was so badly burned in the fire at her house at 72 Kensington avenue on Friday last, died in St. Michael's Hospital yesterday at 3 p.m.

Injunction Restrains Sale.

Toronto, July 28.—Justice Britton yesterday granted a temporary injunction, returnable on Thursday next, restraining the Cramp Steel Company from making a sale of certain assets to the Northern Iron & Steel Company.

Colonies and the Motherland.

London, July 28.—(C.A.P.)—In the House of Commons yesterday, replying to Mr Buchanan, Hon. Mr. Lyttelton said that none of the self-governing colonies had ever offered the open home market of such colony to British manufacturers on equal terms with colonial manufacturers or on terms better relatively to colonial manufacturers than those now existing. The general attitude of the self-governing colonies in respect to this matter was defined by the resolution passed at the Colonial Conference. Steps had been taken by some of the self-governing colonies to give effect to the resolution, but without any consultation or bargaining with the mother country.

Empire's Fiscal Situation.

London, July 28.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Howard Vincent suggest an Imperial conference thoroughly representative to examine the fiscal situation of the British Empire. The proposed conference will meet in the coming winter and its conclusions be laid before Parliament in 1905.

Che Foo, July 28.—Russian refugees who have arrived here report that the Lieut. Burakoff and two other Russian torpedo destroyers were torpedoed and destroyed by the Japanese on the night of July 25.

Japs Lost 800.

Tokio, July 28.—The Japanese casualties before Tatchekiao were eight hundred.

On to Haicheng.

St. Petersburg, July 28.—A telegram from Gen. Kuropatkin was received yesterday confirming the occupation of Tatchekiao by the Japanese, July 25, and adding that a Japanese division had moved on Haicheng.

Captured the Keys

Tokio, July 28.—The army of Gen. Oku combined with what is known as the Takushan forces, attacked Tatchekiao Sunday night and on Monday captured all the important topographical keys. The Russian forces consisted of five divisions. The losses are unknown.

60 Miles From Tokio.

Tokio, July 28.—The Russian Vladivostock squadron was seen sixty miles off Tokio Bay at dawn yesterday morning. It then moved to the south.

DARING NIGHT ATTACK.

How the Japanese Troops Hustled Russian Troops Into Retreat.

Tokio, July 28.—In a daring night attack against a Russian force estimated at five divisions, with 100 guns, Gen. Oku drove the enemy from their strong line of defence south of Tatchekiao. Advancing on Sunday, Gen. Oku found a superior force confronting him, and that a heavy artillery fire from the enemy was checking his men. He thereupon decided to attempt a night surprise. This was successful, the Japanese troops hustling the Russians into retreat to Tatchekiao. The Japanese had 800 casualties.

The Takushan army fought and won a separate action on Friday, July 22, at Pauling, losing 31 men. The Russians left 14 dead. The Japanese began the advance against the Russian positions south of Tatchekiao on Saturday, July 23. On this date the vanguard occupied positions in the vicinity of Chuichiatun, to the southeast of Tatchekiao, developing the position and strength of the enemy.

The Russian line was through the hills south of Tatchekiao, extending almost due east and west of the railroad. The position of the enemy was fortified. The strongest point was at Taiping Mountain, to the southeast of Tatchekiao, and here the heaviest force had assembled. The Russians had two battalions of artillery posted near Chatengsgen, due south of Tatchekiao, and ahead of the main line.

The Japanese deployed to the westward from Chuhiatun, and, confronting the Russian line east of the railroad, advanced early Sunday morning. At 9 o'clock the Japanese right had reached a bluff less than two miles from Taiping Mountain. In the afternoon the Russian batteries, posted on the heights, shelled the advancing line. The strength of the Russians gradually developed, Gen. Oku estimating it at five divisions and 100 guns. The Russians prevented a general advance, and Gen. Oku decided on a night assault.

Two divisions of Russians occupied the Saicheng road, and Gen. Oku took the precaution to engage this force with artillery. The Russians replied similarly, the duel lasting until darkness. At 10 o'clock Sunday night the entire Japanese right was hurled against the first Russian position, east and west of Taiping Mountain, and easily captured it. At midnight the second position was attacked, and by daylight the Japanese occupied the eminence east of Shanchiatun, the Russians retreating towards Tatchekiao. At 7 o'clock Monday morning the Japanese seized Chenyshishhan, without resistance and pursued the Russians towards Tatchekiao.

To Change Motive Power.

Port Huron, Mich., July 28.—The management of the Grand Trunk Railway system and of the St. Clair tunnel have at last determined upon a change of motive power in the tunnel to electricity. Work will at once commence for the installation of the plant, which will mean an investment of $400,000. The third rail system is to be used.

Mrs. House Badly Burned.

Hamilton, July 28.—While Mrs. Louis House, who resides near Bartonville, was preparing breakfast yesterday morning her clothing caught fire. Before the fire could be extinguished her face, arms and the upper part of her body were terribly burned. Mr. House extinguished the flames and was severely burned while doing so.

SHIRKING THE AUDIT.

Mr. Lorne McDougall's Challenge to the Ministry Not Accepted.

If there was anything wanting to make clear the attitude of the Ottawa Government toward the Auditor-General it has been furnished by the Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, who, speaking in the House of Commons recently, charged that official with misrepresentation in connection with discussion of the Davis contract for the lighting of the Cornwall canal. The Government by refusing to even consider the charges in the Audit Act for which he asked plainly intimated to Mr. McDougall that they did not desire to be hampered any longer in the distribution of the country's money by his regard for the public interests. The consequence was that Mr. McDougall resigned. But not content with that the Government appears determined to make his life as miserable as possible, and to that end Mr. Fitzpatrick comes forward with his charge. The manner in which he made it is thus reported by the Ottawa Journal:

The House then took up in committee the Davis contract.

Mr. Reid (Grenville) in criticising it said that the present Government had made the contract for 34 years on renewing it when the original contract by the old Government was only for 21 years.

Mr. Fitzpatrick — "The old contract was for 34 years — that is there was the right to renew every 21 years for 34 years."

Dr. Reid—"But that is not in the return I have got."

Mr. Fitzpatrick—"That was supplied by the Auditor-General."

Dr. Reid—"You don't mean to say that the Auditor-General would keep anything back."

Mr. Fitzpatrick—"That's what I mean to say. I don't want any equivocation about it."

This is possibly the first time that Mr. McDougall's honesty has ever been called into question and especially on the floor of the House. As is well known, he was appointed to the position of Auditor-General by the late Alexander Mackenzie, who recognized in him a man whose integrity and strict devotion to duty could not be impeached. During the twenty-six years he has held the office, Mr. McDougall has had frequent differences of opinion with the different Governments under which he has served, but particularly with the present administration, to which his strictness in the matter of public expenditures so far as his control over it goes has proved most irksome. He has stopped several raids on the Treasury within the past few years planned by the Government and their friends. This has aroused the resentment of the statesmen who now control the destinies of Canada and Mr. Fitzpatrick was put up to throw mud at him. The men who are now pursuing Mr. McDougall in this way are, it should be remembered, the successors in the leadership of the Liberal party of the late Alexander Mackenzie by whom he was appointed to office.

But if the Government thought that Mr. McDougall would allow his character to be attacked without striking back they reckoned without their host. In a letter to The Ottawa Journal Mr. McDougall challenges Mr. Fitzpatrick to prove his charge of misrepresentation before the Public Accounts Committee where he will be heard in his own defence. Mr. McDougall says:

Will Mr. Fitzpatrick bring the papers before the Public Accounts Committee immediately, where I can have an opportunity of being heard and where this difference can be disposed of and other questions which may be involved in the Davis contract may be explained by me, in the presence of Mr. Fitzpatrick and the members of the committee?

The Government has not dared to take up this challenge, and, from the remarks of some of its members when the matter was referred to in the House, does not intend to. Through one of its members the Government has attacked the honesty of one of Canada's most trusted public servants and, having the power in its hands, refuses to do him the justice of giving him an opportunity to prove his innocence. Is not this a peculiar climax to twenty-six years' faithful service to the people of Canada? Could the Government have behaved worse? — Winnipeg Telegram.

M. VON PLEHWE ASSASSINATED

A Bomb Thrown Under His Carriage While Driving to Baltic Station.

THE BOMB THROWN FROM A MOTOR CAR

The Minister of the Interior and His Coachman Were So Mutilated That Fragments of Bodies Had to be Carried to Ministers Residence in a Cashmere Net.

St. Petersburg, July 28.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Co. says: "M. Plehwe was on his way to Petershoff, about 10 o'clock, to make a report to the Emperor. When his carriage was passing in front of the Hotel de Varsovie, which is close to the St. Petersburg terminus of the Warsaw railway, a man suddenly rushed out of the restaurant which is attached to the hotel, and hurled a bomb at the minister's carriage. The explosion was terrific. The minister and his coachman were killed on the spot. The carringe and the horses which were drawing it were shattered into atoms The bomb thrower, despite the confusion, was immediately surrounded and arrested."

Another report has it that two persons were arrested. This report states that M. Plehwe was approaching the station in a carriage when a motor car drove up with two persons in it As the motor passed Mr. Plehwe's carriage one of the occupants threw a bomb in front of the horses. It exploded, and several bystanders were injured, but none were killed, as was at first supposed. The Minister of the Interior and his coachman were so mutilated that fragments of their bodies had to be collected and carried to the minister's residence in a cashmere net. After the explosion the motor car stopped and both occupants were arrested. Their identity is not yet known.

The assassination has caused an immense sensation.

THE LIVING AND THE DEAD.

Two Perrys Who Did Credit to Themselves and Canada.

Far from his native land, on the South African veldt, rest the remains of Sergt. Campbell Perry, who died a real hero.

The recipient of a Boer bullet in the irresistible rush at Paardeburg that compelled the surrender of General Cronje, young Perry returned to Galt an invalid. A second call from his country found him ready to join the Second Contingent. He was soon into the thick of the fighting and at Hart's river again showed his mettle. There he was one of the leaders in the brilliant stand that saved the day for the Empire; falling while encouraging his comrades to show the stuff that Canadians are made of, his body pierced with many Boer bullets.

Canada for weeks rang with praise of the magnificent bravery of its boys who fought at Hart's River, and there followed monuments to their memory in many Canadian towns and cities. Along with others the features of Sergt. Campbell Perry appeared in the newspapers and a sketch of his brilliant but short career was read in hundreds of publications. But fame is short-lived though in Galt at present a modest memorial to the Galt boy is in process of materialization. Just when everyone supposed that the last page of Campbell Perry's life had been closed forever, a namesake steps forward at Bisley to win for Canada the great prize of the meeting. Forthwith the features of the hero of Hart's River appear in a multitude of Canadian newspapers as those of the hero of Bisley, and memories of the sad but glorious day when Canada was thrilled by the performance of her sons as they withstood the furious attacks of an overwhelming multitude of Boers, with "No surrender" on their lips, are awakened. The fate of the living seems incomparably happier than that of the dead. But is it? By such heroes as fell at Hart's River the British Empire has been made. By such men Canada was founded.—Galt Reporter.

A POPULAR WIN.

Did Not Hear "Foreigner"—Scholes' Victory Hailed With Enthusiasm

Mr. G. R. Moffat, a prominent business man in London, England, is in the city. He was at Henley regatta and saw Lou Scholes win the Diamond Sculls. Speaking of Scholes' victory he described it as a most popular one.

"Did you hear him called foreigner?" asked the Telegram.

"The word never reached my ears. You must remember that there were thousands of people present at the race; and it might be that one or two raised the cry. But had it been loudly called or had the call been at all general I would have been bound to hear it. The river is not broad and the voices would have been audible.

"I can say this, that instead of Scholes being regarded as a foreigner, he was hailed as one of ourselves; and on every side I heard expressions of pleasure that the sculls went to a Canadian."

Speaking on the Dundonald incident Mr. Moffat stated that the word "foreigner" used by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in referring to Lord Dundonald was much resented in England.

"It's a mistake to suppose," he said, "that we English people regard Canada as outside of the British nationality. We look upon Canada as a part of Britain, even as England is also a part and in Sir Wilfrid Laurier speaking of Lord Dundonald as a foreigner we received a decided shock, for it seemed to us that he was voicing to some extent the sentiment of the Canadian people. I am glad, however, to observe that such is not the case."—Toronto Telegram.

RUSSIAN VESSEL COALED.

She Then Stopped Twice and Seized Two Ships.

London, July 28.—Thomas [illegible] Bowles (Conservative) will ask Premier Balfour in the House of Commons to-day if the Government is aware that the Russian armored cruiser Dmitri Donskoi, after being allowed to take five hundred tons of coal at Port Said, and after her captain had given his word of honor that he would proceed at once and by the direct route to Cadiz, remained off Port Said and stopped and examined six vessels which were about to enter the canal, and a few days later repeated the stoppage off Alexandria. Mr. Bowles also wants to know what steps the Government will take to prevent belligerent ships securing at British ports "coal to be used in operations of war."

TORONTO. PETERBOROUGH.

SIR F. BORDEN'S REMOVAL.

Militia Resent his Partisan Conduct and Treatment of the General.

The revelations of the last month, have opened up new features. Lord Dundonald's searchlight has revealed the weak spots in that department of the Government, which from our point of view is the most important of all. We have discovered that political influence has been allowed to interfere in the grossest manner in those particular matters which the constitution and regulations and customs relating to the militia had hitherto left in the hands of the General Officer Commanding.

The action of Mr. Fisher in connection with the 13th Scottish Light Horse was something unparalleled in the history of the militia, while the political intrigue and interference in Colonel Gregory's case had features which made it humiliating to the force and most discreditable to the country. That one permanent official dependent upon the will of the Minister of Militia for his position and livelihood should have felt compelled to deny the existence of political intrigue when he must have known to the contrary, and another to deceive Lord Dundonald with the statement that "the papers were all in order" when he must have known that they were not, reveals a condition of intrigue, untruthfulness and dishonesty which the people of this country cannot possibly condone.

The action of Sir F. Borden and Mr. Fisher in placing before the House and the country in their first reply to Lord Dundonald, carefully prepared false statements, which were afterwards deliberately contradicted by themselves, and by conclusive evidence afterwards brought out, indicates a code of morality in reference to veracity that is most discreditable, and a deplorable reflection upon the good name of Canada.

"Although for a time Sir F. Borden was a promising Minister of Militia, of late there has been a falling off. The reason is not apparent. Can it be the influence of Hon. Mr. Fisher or Colonel Pinault, the Deputy Minister?

The insolent and ill-mannered dismissal of the head of the militia, the best and most distinguished general who has ever given his services to the Canadian volunteers, has been felt as a stinging and personal blow, delivered at every officer and man in the ranks. The fact of the blow coming from a man like Sir Frederick Borden makes it all the more exasperating.

The militia of Canada do not deserve this treatment at the hands of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. They are entitled to expect that a clean, honest, truthful man should be placed at the head of their department, and while there have been mutterings for years, the matter of Lord Dundonald, and his explanations, have precipitated matters, and we fairly warn both Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Government that unless Sir F. Borden and Mr. Fisher are removed they cannot expect the citizen soldiery of Canada in the exercise of their suffrages as free citizens of a free country to support a Government that will persist in treating them contemptuously by placing them under the control of a man who has so notoriously proved his unfitness to be in charge of our young men.

If Sir F. Borden were removed it would not matter so much about Mr. Fisher, for a good Minister of Militia (and one can readily be found in the Liberal ranks) would not allow any colleague to use his Department for the gratification of his personal spite.

We ask Sir Wilfrid Laurier to give heed to this appeal, and so enable thousands of his well-wishers to stand by him and support him.—Military Gazette.

THE JAPS ATTACKING PT. ARTHUR

The General Movement Against the Russian Stronghold Begun

THREE WARSHIPS LEAVE FORT

Unconfirmed Report That Gen. Kuropatkin Has Been Injured--Generally Believed at St. Petersburg That Startling Developments in the Far East Are Imminent.

London, July 29.—Special despatches from Shanghai and Yokohama report that a general attack upon Port Arthur has begun. A report that General Kuropatkin is wounded seems to have originated at Tientsin, but it is not confirmed.

Something Startling Due.

St. Petersburg, July 29.—A telegram received from Gen. Kuropatkin yesterday announced that the position at the front had not changed. It is generally believed here that startling developments are imminent. All the war correspondents have been ordered to Harbin.

Burned Towns.

Tokio, July 29.—The Russians abandoned Tatchekiao at noon on Monday, July 25, retiring before the advancing army under Gen. Oku. They applied the torch to Tatchekiao and the surrounding towns, and when the Japanese arrived they found the flames were still raging. The Japanese pursuit extended beyond Tatchekiao, and the Japanese left wing occupied Yinkow. The position held by the Russians last Sunday south of Tatchekiao consisted of nine miles of trenches and fortifications.

Lives to Be Saved.

Newchwang, July 29.—Takayama, the Japanese Administrator of Newchwang, has arrived here, and has issued notification to the population that Newchwang and Yinkow are now under Japanese control and that lives and property will be protected.

Southwest of Yokohama.

Tokio, July 29.—The Vladivostock squadron was reported off the Province of Awa yesterday. Awa is about 200 miles southwest of Yokohama, and is at the eastern entrance of the Inland Sea.

Warships Leave Port.

Che Foo, July 29.—Chinese refugees, who left Port Arthur thirty-six hours ago, say that three large warships have left that port. The Chinese cannot give the names or the type of the vessels. It is impossible to confirm this story from foreigners.

JAPS VICTORS IN CANADA.

Clash Between 49 Jap Fishermen and 58 Russian Miners in B.C.

Vancouver, B.C., July 29.—A battle took place between 49 Japanese fishermen and 58 Russian miners at Douglas City, Douglas Island, opposite Juneau, last Saturday night. News of the trouble was brought down from the north by the steamer Danube yesterday. A number of shots were exchanged, then the opposing forces stoned each other and finally engaged in a hand-to-hand fight. No one was killed, but a number are said to have been seriously injured. The Japanese put the Russians to flight, although the Russians outnumbered the victors.

Two of Five Drowned.

Winnipeg, Man., July 29.—At Long Lake, Assiniboia, yesterday, a canoe containing five young men of Regina upset, and Robert Fell and Ernest Peart were drowned. Both are prominent in lacrosse circles at Regina.

John Smith and Frank Humphrey, both mechanics of Birtle, were drowned Wednesday night while bathing in the river near that town. They were not missed until the discovery of their clothes on the river bank yesterday morning.

Current Swept Four to Death.

Winnipeg, July 29.—A sad drowning fatality occurred at MacLeod on Tuesday night when sisters, Nellie and Katie Higgins, aged 20 and 26, their brother, Eddie, aged six, and their girl friend, Mary Robinson, aged 21, all met death while attempting to make the ford here of the Old Man River. The current, swollen by heavy rains, was too strong for them and they were swept down stream. John Stewart, 16 years old, was drowned Wednesday while bathing.

MONTREAL'S FAREWELL.

Soldiers Seized General Dundonald and Carried Him on High on Their Shoulders Citizens' Ovation.

Montreal, July 29.—The reception tendered here last evening in honor of the departing general was of tremendous proportions. At 8.30 the Earl of Dundonald reviewed one section of the corps in the rotunda of the Windsor, and was afterwards greeted by thousands, both within and outside the Windsor.

Peter Lyall, president of the Caledonia Society, presided, and read an address. Secretary Lieut.-Col. Stevenson delivered a spirited speech in which he said that the name of Dundonald would be revered in Canada after those who had dismissed him had sunk into oblivion. The colonel denounced those who had laid their inexperienced hands on the militia of Canada.

Dundonald's Reply.

Then the general rose to speak. He was cheered again and again. He made a very brief speech, saying that in leaving Canada he left more friends than he had ever thought possible to have. His departure had been caused by circumstances he could not control, and, he might add, over which the people present had no control.

Thousands of them came to the platform and shook hands with the general. In the street the most inspiring scenes were witnessed. Bands played "Rule Britannia" and soldiers seized Lord Dundonald, raised him to their shoulders and carried him around the square while the crowd cheered with delight.

The sharp downpour of rain prevented the procession from assuming large proportions, but the militiamen took the horses from the general's carriage and dragged the hero to the Place Viger Station.

At the station another mighty throng gave the general a send-off and one of the most popular demonstrations ever witnessed in Montreal was brought to a close.

Would Have Been Recalled.

London, July 29.—(C.A.P.)—Premier Balfour, replying to Sir Howard Vincent, said that before the incident ending with the recall of Lord Dundonald he was intended for a command under the new army scheme and would shortly have been recalled for that purpose. This appointment would now be subject to the finding of the Army Council upon the merits of the Canadian affair.

Found Dead in Swamp.

Palmerston, July 29.—About three o'clock Saturday, 16th inst., David Gibson, a veteran of the Crimea, left his boarding house here and did not return. Last night, William Lawrence was looking for his cow in a swamp half a mile north of the town, when he found the body in a partly decomposed condition. Mr. Gibson was 72 years of age, said to be an Irishman, and to have a brother resident in Toronto by the name of John.

Member Proulx Dead.

Plantagenet, July 29.—Isidore Proulx, M.P. for the County of Prescott, died at half-past three o'clock yesterday afternoon of inflammation of the bowels. He was taken ill last Saturday evening. He was born in 1840. He was a farmer and a general merchant. He was first elected to the Commons in 1891, but was unseated. He stood again in 1892 and was elected, and has been in the House ever since. He was a Liberal.

FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1904.

A CANADIAN GENERAL.

The discussion in the House in connection with the political manipulation of the 2nd Dragoons revealed a state of affairs in some respects fully as bad as the criminal partisan interference with the 13th Light Dragoons. It appears that Col. Gregory, an excellent officer was deliberately driven from the command of his regiment because he refused to recommend the promotion of an officer who was unqualified and unfit, but who had a political pull. One Dr. Glasgow, was foisted by local politicians upon the regiment as major commanding a squadron only two years previously, his only military experience being that of a medical officer. He aspired to be second in command, but Col. Gregory very properly refused to recommend his promotion till he had qualified. Rather than do this, he sought the corrupt intervention of his political friends. Col. Gregory, whose term was expiring, was recommended for a two years' extension by the General and by Col. Otter, the D.O.C. He was now given only one year and was given distinctly to understand that his second year depended on his consent to recommend this unworthy officer. As he still refused, the promotion was recommended and gazetted without his consent or even his knowledge. Naturally he tendered his resignation.

The defence of Sir Frederick Borden was characteristic. A round robin had been sent to the department in favor of an extension of Col. Gregory's term of command, which was contrary to the regulations. In our volunteer citizen force the wishes of a regiment, as to its commanding and other officers are frequently expressed, and are not regarded as being to objectionable as in a permanent professional force. Then Col. Gregory had kept, as second in command, an officer who was unfit for duty, from disease in his throat, depriving him temporarily of his voice. Major Ferguson was an excellent officer, and it was hoped that he would recover, so a too sanguine view of the case was not very blameable. Then came the third excuse for the shameless partisan dragooning of Col. Gregory. He had written a letter criticising his superiors while still in command of his regiment and in camp. In the face of proof that the Colonel had resigned and had left the camp when he published his letter, Sir Frederick had once more to admit that his statement was a deliberate falsehood a malicious slander, and to eat his words before the House. He tried to crawl out of his shameful position by the paltry excuse that at all events Col. Gregory was on the reserve of officers.

Bad as is all this, the case has an aspect even more important than the fact of office being held by a Minister who is a disgrace to Canada, or another colonel being dragooned by the politicians. Our militia is in future to have a Canadian General Commanding. Col. Otter is the militia officer who obviously stands among the very first for this position, and may be looked upon as almost certain to hold it before long. His length of zealous service in our militia and his highly creditable service in the field point to him for the chief command. The fact that he is somewhat of a martinet, more of the drill sergeant and pipe clay soldier than Lord Dundonald, and has not the gift of making himself popular with his men, could not stand in the way of his becoming the General commanding the militia. If such an officer had to grovel before partisan dictation, who in the Canadian militia can be expected to do his duty manfully and honestly? It is sad that a man like Col. Otter, after recommending a commanding officer for extension of his term, should make himself the tool of the politicians and in flagrant violation of his duty, to say nothing of the sacrifice of his personal honor, should write to Col. Gregory that the extension depended on his recommendation of an unfit officer with a political pull, and should threaten him with the cutting short of his military career unless he thus disgraced himself and set at naught his sworn duty. If Col. Otter had thus to submit to political pressure, where can we hope to find a General Commanding, since all are equally under the thumb of the partisan holding the portfolio for the benefit, not of the militia, or of the country, but of his party?

The reception given in Montreal to Lord Dundonald's appeal to keep both hands on the Union Jack shows that the Solicitor General's threatened disruption of the tie is not very near at hand.

The barnacle organs say that the men who cheer Lord Dundonald are Tories. What a lot of Tories there must be.

Ministerial organs are saying Lord Dundonald can be very impolitic in his utterances. Yes, it was very impolitic of him to expose Mr. Fisher's corrupt meddling with the militia, and his forged alteration in a general order. It was also impolitic of him to refute the false charges by Sir Frederick Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and their organs, that he had been stirring up racial prejudice. No doubt they also consider it impolitic of him to show that the Minister of Militia had dishonestly suppressed his report in order to pilfer ideas for his own credit, and through his organs to utter the slander that the general had recommended an enormous expenditure for fortifications. They think it very impolitic of anyone to expose their corruption, dishonesty and falsehood.

Little Girl Had Eczema

Which Defied All Treatment Until Dr. Chase's Ointment Was Used and Cured Her.

Many children suffer from scald head and eczema who could be cured if their parents only knew about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. C. Wiley, who is employed as cooper by the Kennedy & Davis Milling Company, Lindsay, Ont., states: "I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for eczema on my little girl some few years ago, and soon brought about a thorough and permanent cure. She suffered for considerable time, and although we tried a great many remedies, Dr. Chase's Ointment was the only preparation to prove effective. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Ointment, as it certainly effected a prompt and permanent cure in this case."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

THE UNION JACK.

A Liberal View in Full Touch With Lord Dundonald's Valedictory.

That staunch Liberal journal, the Montreal Witness, says:—

Lord Dundonald told his enthusiastic admirers at Ottawa and Montreal yesterday, and they are legion, to "Keep both hands on the Union Jack." The cheering assent that was given to that advice must have convinced everybody, if anybody in Canada or abroad ever doubted it, that the great heart of Canada never beat more with loyalty to the old flag than it does to-day. Lord Dundonald was given a great send-off at Ottawa and got a great reception in Montreal, and all parties and creeds were represented. In Montreal, among the first to welcome him was Mr. Peter Lyall, the Liberal candidate for St. Antoine, which is sufficient proof that his public reception here was not arranged by the Conservative party. We read that one old soldier at Ottawa called for "three cheers for the last general officer commanding in Canada," and called for it with "a touch of feeling," which we can quite believe and sympathize with. It is hard to break old ties and see them broken; but whether we are again to have a G.O.C. from England or not, or whatever other changes chance and time may bring about, most of us are in full touch with Lord Dundonald's soldierly valedictory.

About Your Complexion

A yellow, muddy complexion tells of derangements of the liver, and indicates the presence of bile poison in the blood. Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills set the liver and kidneys in action, purify the blood, cleanse the system, and assure a healthy glow to the complexion. As a family medicine Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are of inestimable value.

HARPOONING THE TARPON.

Rare Sport Catching Big Fish in a Canadian Bay.

Gaspe Basin, July 28—In spite of its name, which literally means the hot bay, there are many warmer places this weather than our Bay of Chaleur. Some of the visitors who have found out its summer beauties are loud in its praises as a warm weather resort, while those who come from experiences with the tarpon in Southern Californian waters are especially enthusiastic over the big fish killing here.

The tarpon—the obtuse fishermen persist in naming it horse mackerel, by the way—runs to a large size hereabouts sometimes. Three hundred and four hundred pounders have been caught, and, as in over the case with anglers, very much larger ones are reported to have been played and lost after a hard fight.

It is not properly angling that is done here. (Not only the big mackerel, but bluefish and porpoises also are caught in much more exciting fashion.

A light harpoon of fine manufacture and a free running line of quarter-inch linen rope are the tackle. Practising with the steel weapon at a mark on the shore is an important part of the summer's amusement. Matches are made between rival casters, and the fun is followed for its sake as well as for perfection in the art of big fish catching.

One of the coolest and best of the harpooners in the whole bay is a New York woman, well known socially in that city. She has succeeded admirably in learning to impart the peculiar quivering, rotary movement to the weapon which all the old-time bowmen in the whale fishery used to try to acquire.

It is apparently this double motion that gives certainty to the aim which within a foot or so it is not easy to make sure of. Some of the experienced whalers about here will make a cast with the light iron of more than 70 feet with perfect accuracy, though with careful management and a quiet crew it is seldom that such long hurling is necessary. The fish are generally approached while at play, or when resting asleep on the water, and are then not easily disturbed.

Many of the amateurs can make fast to quite a small fish from the usual distance of from thirty to forty feet. It is always surprising to the beginner that the steel, which from a practised hand appears to fall so lightly upon the fish, should sink so easily into its flesh. If the harpoon touches at all it invariably makes a deep wound, and generally goes in right up to the hinge a full ten inches.

If the backbone is scraped ever so little the big fish is pretty sure to thrash about and leap over the surface in a flurry of rage, and there is risk of his capsizing or injuring the boat in his mad rushes, or at least of his shaking the steel loose.

It shows the sailing abilities of the local men that some days ago two of them brought their passengers and the game safely ashore in a boat, the thwarts of which had been smashed down to below the water line by the fall of a big leaping fish. Why it is so no one seems to know, but the great creatures nearly always leap over, or close to the boat in their flurries.

If the iron has gone down into the flesh only, the fish will either sound and give play at a great depth, coming up for a last tussle before giving in; or he will sail straight away, occasionally leaping high out of the water, generally keeping near the surface for several miles.

Two women and their escorts spent the whole night at sea lately, having been run away with by a monster of a tuna, which finally had to be abandoned some ten or twelve miles from shore.

There is, though of course in a less degree, the same danger of accidents from the running out of the line, as in the case of whaling. One venturesome young woman, in direct contradiction to the instructions of the old salt in the stern, undertook to meddle with a running line. She thought to shake out a threatening tangle in the rope tub as a fish was sounding, and was dragged half out of the boat before her companions could grasp the line and give her a chance to release her imprisoned thumb.

PETTY THIEVES.

The Misuse Made by Sir Frederick Borden of the Public Funds.

The Canadian Military Gazette, in pursuance of its duties, has condemned the introduction of political corruption into the management of the Militia. The consequence is the following letter, signed by the Deputy Minister of the Militia Department. By this admission of his corrupt use of the public funds to purchase political support, Sir Frederick Borden owns himself a dishonest man. It is a dirty trick, worthy of the hero of the murderous emergency rations. The letter reads:—

"Sir,—I am directed by the Honorable the Minister of Militia and Defence to inform you that the agreement entered into with the Canadian Military Gazette, by my letter of the 29th August, 1903, will terminate on the 30th September next, from which date this department will not hold itself responsible for the publication and payment thereof of the Royal Military College advertisement and the Militia General Orders."

FENCE POSTS.

A Possible New Source of Supply—Chemistry to the Rescue.

The United States bureau of forestry has been conducting a series of experiment and investigation into the cheaper methods of preserving the ordinary and inferior woods against decay, both in and out of the ground. The increasing difficulty experienced in getting high-grade timbers as well as the increasing prices for such timbers, has brought the question of the preservation of woods of less resisting powers to the front. In the past the long-lived timbers, like white oak, longleaf pine and cedar, were employed wherever resistance to decay was an important requisite. As long as these timbers were available in large quantities, it proved most economical to use them. Now that they are much more difficult to get and consequently more expensive, the question is frequently asked: Is it practicable to use timbers which are not as resistant to decay, but which can be treated chemically; and, if so, what does it cost to treat them, and what length of life is it possible to get?

The result of these experiments has shown that certain preservatives properly applied to woods naturally prone to rapid decay will extend the life of a fence post or a railway tie almost indefinitely. The best of these are the tar oils, spirittine carbolineum, etc. Corrosive sublimate is also an excellent preservative.

In preserving fence posts, for example, the wood to be treated must be thoroughly seasoned and dry. In the treatment by the corrosive sublimate a common wooden vat is filled with the posts which are covered with the mercurial solution of one part sublimate to 130 of water. When the posts are thoroughly soaked with the solution they are taken out and replaced with others. Thus treated they are said to resist decay for an extremely long period. Tar oil products applied to posts must be heated and excellent results have been obtained by successive heatings and paintings of the parts to be underground. A small steel tank is used in many parts of Europe for this purpose. This tank is set in masonry in such a way that a fire can be built under it. Tar oil is poured into the tank, the posts or poles are set vertically in it, and a fire is started under it. As soon as the oil becomes thoroughly warm it penetrates into the timber for smaller or greater distances.

The cost of the treatment by one method or the other is practically the same, about 4 1-2 cents per cubic foot to be treated. Thus the three feet to be buried of a seven-foot fence post, six inches by six inches would cost about three cents. When it is considered that a red oak or even a pine post properly treated will outlive a natural white ash, the cost of treatment is small in comparison to the saving.

It seems probable that willow posts treated with these preservatives should last as long as loblolly pine or red oak. If this should be shown by experiment the question of a future fence post supply for the farmers of the middle west would be answered for all time.

COL. GREGORY WAITING.

So Far Ministers Continue to Shirk the Light.

Lieut.-Col. Roland W. Gregory, St. Catharines, late commanding officer of the 2nd Dragoons, whose resignation because of political interference with the regiment proved a sensational feature of the late camp at Niagara, was in the city to-day. To a News reporter he said that he was still waiting for the investigation into his case which was hinted at in some Liberal quarters.

"But there is little sign of it as yet," he said. "When it comes I am ready for it. I stand clearly on my former statements of the case. If there is an investigation I may even go into fuller details than I have thought necessary in the present position of matters. Till then I do not wish to rush into print with my grievances."

"What do you think of the farewell Lord Dundonald received last night?" the colonel was asked.

"I think that Ottawa and Montreal did themselves honor by honoring a gallant soldier, just as Toronto did itself honor in leading the way. It is a great pity that we should lose such a splendid officer and one who was doing so much for us. Still we may gain some lasting benefit from his sacrifice by its waking the people to the need for a change in the system. The average person has no idea of the difficulties which Lord Dundonald had to contend with, in little ways that he has never mentioned. I wonder he remained as long as he did. There were many things done without consulting him, of which my case was only one."—Toronto News.

MUST EAT ARSENIC.

Otherwise Makers of the Poison Could Not Stand Its Fumes.

Eating of arsenic is common in Styria. The Styrians say that arsenic makes one plump and comely and gives one strength for great exertion, such as running or mountain climbing.

Styria, in Austria, gives the world vast quantities of arsenic. The manufacture of this drug is indeed the main Styrian industry. They who make arsenic eat it, as a rule, for they say that only the arsenic eater can withstand the arsenic fumes.

These makers and eaters of the drug are comely. They have a blooming and clear color. They look much younger than they are.

"The foreman in a certain arsenic factory told me that in his boyhood, When he first went to that plant, he was advised to begin to eat arsenic lest his health suffer from the fumes," says a toxicologist. "He did begin, and his first two or three small doses gave him a sharp pain, like a burn, in the stomach, and this pain was followed by tremendous hunger and a violent, disagreeable excitement. But as his doses increased in frequency and size their effect became pleasant. There was no longer pain or excitement. On the contrary, there was a ravenous appetite, as well as a mood of joyous activity wherein he could do three men's work.

"This chap, by the time he got to be thirty, was taking four grains of arsenic a day. He looked at thirty, with his clear pink and white color, no more than twenty-three. He was as robust as a blacksmith. But he said he would die at forty-five or so, that being the age at which all the Styrian arsenic eaters die."

The drug is a preservative, and in Styria when graves are opened bodies are found to be as fresh six or seven years after interment as on the day they were lowered into the earth.

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Her Splendid Inconsistency

By W. W. HINES

Copyright, 1904, by W. W. Hines

From the open windows came music, made by the orchestra in the ballroom on the farther side of the house, softened by distance. Moonlight, broken up by intervening trees into bars and splotches of golden radiance, lay all about them as they walked up and down the veranda.

They were two, a man and a woman, as bedtime the waltz tune and the moonlight.

"The right kind of a woman always appreciates a proposal of marriage from any man as a great compliment. Coming from you it is the much more to be valued, but I cannot marry you," said the woman.

Turning in their walk, the woman leaned back against one of the pillars of the veranda, and the man seated himself on the railing. He was taking his rejection with admirable coolness, as the woman knew he would take it.

"May I smoke?" he said politely.

The commonplaceness of the request struck the woman's vein of humor, and it was with a little laugh that she gave her consent. The man lit a cigar, looked out toward the trees and the moonlight and said:

"Rather a pretty waltz they are playing, isn't it?"

Then he puffed away at his cigar reflectively and continued:

"I have to thank you for having listened to me so patiently. Might I trespass a little more upon your good nature and ask permission to discuss the matter further with you?"

His manner, as calm as though he had been discussing some abstractly ethical question, was very characteristic. Perhaps the knowledge of this irritated the woman a little, for she replied:

"No amount of discussion can profit either of us, so far as I can see. But, as I have said, in asking me to marry you a great compliment was paid me, and in return for that compliment I suppose that I owe you permission to indulge your love for discussion or argument."

"Thanks for the permission," said the man, still in his stolid manner. "I cannot recognize my proposal as, in any sense, a compliment, but I am willing that you should, if you wish, take the manner in which I made it as a compliment. Recognizing the splendid development of your own logical faculties, I have made my offer of marriage in perfectly businesslike form. I have heard you often declare that a contract of marriage is like any other contract and should be entered into only when both parties are fully aware of what they are doing."

"Do you think women are ever entirely consistent?" interrupted the woman.

The man looked a trifle surprised and replied:

"At least, I give you credit for having a splendidly consistent mind. You do not mean that I have erred in my manner of proposing, that you would have preferred more of an air of romance and all that sort of thing?"

"Not at all," the woman hastened to assure him. Perhaps one more skilled in woman nature would have placed little credence in her words, but the man to whom they were addressed never presumed to doubt their truth.

"Now, the situation is something like this," continued the man in very much the same tone of voice that he would have used in arguing an important case before the supreme court. "You are twenty-nine—or is it thirty?—years old, have a reputation as a beauty, and all that. You can, I know, marry any one of two or three men who can offer you at least as much as I, but modesty was never a prevailing characteristic of mine, and I have not feared to measure myself with these other men.

"On the other hand, I can give you pretty much anything you desire that costs money. I stand well in my profession and have prospects of soon being near the top of it. Altogether, I am satisfied that any one would call it a very suitable match all around."

"Does the prosecution here close its case?" inquired the woman, laughing a little.

"I hardly care to regard the matter as one of prosecution and defense," said the man imperturbably, "but if you wish to use the terms I am forced to admit their applicability. Will the defense rest its case on the testimony submitted by the prosecution, or will it elect to submit an argument?"

"The defense will submit an argument," replied the woman. "I admit that the match would be, as you say, pronounced suitable by every one. As for the two or three other men whom you aver that I can marry at any time, I cannot answer. I have noticed that the number of my proposals has been falling off of late, and attributed the fact to advancing age—you were right when you said I was thirty. I may close the discussion by saying that I have made up my mind to become an old maid."

"Far be it from me to say anything against those estimable members of society—the old maids," said the man, "but I do not think you will ever be one of them. I am firm in the belief that every old maid is a woman who was disappointed in love or who was too cold bloodedly selfish to ever marry. Surely you do not come in either class?"

"No," said the woman reflectively, "I can't say that I do, and yet"—

"Perhaps," said the man, and now his voice was very gentle, as though he feared he might here touch some old wound unwittingly, "there is in your life some romance which I have not guessed. Believe me, I would not wound you for worlds, and I trust you will pardon my clumsy speech."

"Oh, I am not a blighted being, never fear," this with a laugh that did not ring altogether of merriment.

"Then your refusal to marry me is not based upon the ground that you prefer some other man?"

"No, I am not in love—with some other man."

"Then why not marry me?"

"I have given you the best of all a woman's reasons, 'because.'"

"But your refusal of me is final, I may take it?"

"Yes,"—the "yes" with an almost inaudible sigh, a sigh so nearly inaudible that it did not reach the man.

He had thrown away his cigar and stood for a moment gazing out toward the trees, the throbbing waltz tune breaking an otherwise perfect silence. Then he began to speak, and his voice was harsh with feeling that had been restrained:

"I think I quite forgot to mention one thing in my proposal. I did not say that I love you very dearly; that, not wishing to be a beggar of love, I have waited all these years to be in a position to offer you the things which I mentioned as rendering me eligible for your hand. You, who are so cool and calm, what can you know of love and passion? Now I know that I have worked all these years in vain—no, not altogether in vain—for I am going to kiss you once, here and now, if it means the loss of all the little that is left me of your regard."

He gathered her in his strong arms and kissed her, not once, but many times, on her forehead, on her eyes and on her lips, and then released her with the full consciousness that he had done an unpardonable thing which he did not regret.

But the woman held out her arms to him and said:

"Oh, Jack, dear, why didn't you tell me that you loved me at first?"

Henry Kribs Dead.

Hespeler, July 29.—The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Henry Kribs, chief engineer of the Forbes Woollen Mills, who was badly scalded by live steam on Monday through the bursting of an elbow in the steam pipe that supplies the factory engine. The steam fairly cooked a portion of the deceased's left leg, which caused gangrene to set in, which resulted in death. Deceased, who was a brother to the late Lewis Kribs, the well-known journalist, and William A. Kribs, M.P.P., was 49 years old. He leaves a wife and two children by adoption.

Where He Made His Start.

A squire in a certain town had just finished marrying a young couple and proceeded in a paternal way to give them good, solid advice. Turning to the bridegroom, he said:

"Never spend your money extravagantly and be saving in every way possible."

The bridegroom listened respectfully and then remarked:

"Well, judge, we might as well begin on you." And he proceeded to give the squire 50 cents for tying the knot.

"Stonewall's" Comment.

At a council of generals early in the civil war one of them remarked that Major —— was wounded and would be unable to perform a certain duty for which he had been suggested. "Wounded!" said old Stonewall Jackson. "If that is really so I think it must have been by an accidental discharge of his duty."

A Doubtful Compromise.

"I've worn out six pairs of shoes," said the collector, "coming after you with this bill."

"Don't let that bother you," replied the editor. "I've got an old pair that'll just fit you."

The Pace.

"You hear so many people talking of 'the pace that kills.' I wonder what they mean exactly?"

"Well, it depends. There's the messenger boy's pace, for instance. That merely kills time."

Making Himself Agreeable.

"Uncle George says I was born with a silver spoon in my mouth."

"A spoon in that little mouth! Oh, I see—it was one of those after dinner coffee spoons"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ACUTE STAGE IS PASSED

Russia and Britain Not Yet Agreed on General Principles.

Premier Balfour Makes a Statement and Is Cheered, But He Sees a Serious Situation Yet Remaining From the Sinking of the British Ship, the Knight Commander—Russian Captain's Ignorant of International Practice.

London, July 29.—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Premier Balfour said the acute stage of the Red Sea incidents had passed, and that the Russian volunteer fleet vessels would be withdrawn. He laid down the British view that no belligerent warship could issue from the Black Sea, and that the volunteer fleet vessels in issuing therefrom, if they took belligerent action either had no right to issue or no right to take such action.

The strongest possible exception had been taken to the seizure of the Malacca on the above grounds, the Premier added. The Russian Government had met the British contention in regard to this particular incident. As to the Knight Commander case, the Government had earnestly protested that the sinking of that vessel was contrary to the accepted practice of nations.

In Particular Instance.

Mr. Balfour said regarding the Russian assurances on the subject of of the seizure of the Malacca and other vessels were as follows: The Russian Government have met us in this matter, I will not say on general principles, but in regard to this particular instance. The Malacca could not be stopped before she left Port Said, but she has now been released at Algiers. The Russian Government at the same time gave us assurances that if the vessels of the volunteer fleet made further captures before instructions could reach them that, pending the discussion of the general principle involved, no action should be taken, and that those captures should be regarded as not having occurred. In accordance with that arrangement the Ardova and Formosa have been released. We have received assurances that the volunteer fleet vessels are to be withdrawn from the Red Sea, and we have little doubt that there will be no further desire on the part of Russian Government to employ them as cruisers. So far, therefore, as these ships go, the controversy has passed out of the acute stage. I will not say that the Government of this country and Russia have reached an agreement on the general principle; but I think we need not anticipate any practical violation of the view which we very strongly hold is likely to occur."

More Serious Situation.

Mr. Balfour assumed a more serious tone as he referred to the Knight Commander. "There are, I am sorry to say," said the Premier, "other questions not connected with the incident at all which must cause some discussion between the two Governments, and like all discussions between Governments there may be legitimate cause for anxiety. We hold that it is not proper that on the authority of the captain of a cruiser that goods alleged to be contraband of war should be taken from a merchant ship without trial."

This statement of the Premier was greeted with an outburst of cheers.

"The proper course," continued Mr. Balfour, "according to international practice, is that any ship reasonably suspected of carrying contraband of war should be taken by the belligerent to one of its own ports, and its trial should there occur before a prize court, by which the case is to be determined. Evidently, if it is left to the captain of a cruiser to decide on his own initiative and authority, whether particular articles carried on a ship are or are not contraband, what is not merely a practice of nations, but what is a necessary foundation of equitable relations between belligerents and neutrals, would be cut down to the root."

Contrary to Practice.

This statement of the Premier was also cheered. He continued: "More serious than the others is the case of the Knight Commander. If, as our information leads us to fear, she was sunk by a cruiser of the Vladivostock squadron, on the ground that she carries contraband of war, in our view it is entirely contrary to the practice of nations in war time, and we have earnestly pressed our view on the Russian Government. We are under a strong impression that when the case is brought, as it has been brought to us, before the Russian Government, that they will give such orders as to prevent a recurrence of unfortunate incidents of that character. I feel confident that will be the case."

How to Keep Well

The same efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

FUNERAL OF OLIVE KIDD

Took Place This Afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery.

The funeral of the late Olive Kidd took place this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, from her father's residence, and was very largely attended. Service was held at the house by the Rev. W. J. Jolliffe, pastor of the Charlotte-st. church, where the deceased was a member of the Sunday school, and interment was made at the Little Lake cemetery. The pall-bearers were playmates of the deceased.

The late Olive Kidd was an exceptionally bright girl and always had a kind word to say to everyone, and was therefore a great favorite. She was an attentive pupil at the Charlotte-st. Sunday school, and everyone knew her smiling face. As she was rather large for her age, she always associated with older people than herself, and was a very intelligent young lady.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kidd have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in the sad bereavement of their only child. Ever since the sad news came to town searching parties have been scouring the vicinity, and not until yesterday noon, after using dynamite, was the body found floating under the surface. It was first noticed by a young boy, who pulled it out, just below the spot where she was supposed to have fallen into the water.

THE HIGH COURT MEETING

Of Independent Order of Foresters at Peterborough Next Month.

On August 16th next the High Court of Eastern Ontario, Independent Order of Foresters, will meet in Peterborough, the session to be held in the Court House. Over 250 delegates are expected.

As is usual on such occasions the local Court, "Chemong" is busy with preparations for the event, as all arrangements other than the routine of the sessions devolve on the local court, and some considerable expense as well. While the sessions are not open to the public there will be one or more meetings held to which the public are invited, and at which addressed will be delivered by the High Chief Ranger, Dr. John Hearald, ex-mayor of Kingston, C. L. Dickenson, High Secretary, and other prominent members of the Order.

Representatives from Supreme Court will also attend and give additional interest to the proceedings. Further particulars will be given as details are perfected.

WELCOME AND FAREWELL.

Graceful Tribute to Two Gentlemen by Writer in Christian Guardian.

(R.S., in Christian Guardian.)

Peterborough, George Street.—Rev. W. J. Crothers, M.A, D.D., pastor. The going away of a pastor who, for four years has ministered to us with much acceptance, is an event which would not have been graciously acceded to were it not the law of the church. George street church, Peterborough, has for many pastorates been singularly favored, but the Rev. J. P. Wilson is a born clergyman, and during his ministry here he simply captured the people, not of his own church alone, but of all denominations, and all regret at his removal. Mr. Wilson is blessed with natural graces—a good presence, a good voice. Charming, simple and natural, he was always interesting and effective as a preacher and leader of devotional services, and so faithful in every-day pastoral duties that it was hard to part with him, for he seemed to belong to us. At Christmas of his second year old Santa Claus found his stocking and bulged it with $100. In the third year his stipend was increased by a like sum, and on his going away, at a crowded lecture room, his people extended to him a farewell service, and the brethren, besides expressions of their appreciation and good will, placed in his hands a purse containing $100. George street has not heretofore indulged much in extras, but in this case they simply could not help it. They congratulate Bridge street, Belleville, in their good fortune in securing so desirable a supply. But the king never dies—the day that took Rev. Wilson to Belleville brought from Belleville to Peterborough, Dr. Crothers. He was met at the early morning train by his officials and escorted to the parsonage, where the ladies had thoughtfully set the table for breakfast, and now the Doctor is comfortably settled, and at work, which he drops into as if to the manner born. Our people have cultivated the art of sympathetic co-operation with the pastor, and so continuous happy results are looked for under the pastorate of Dr. Crothers, and indeed, if first impressions do not miscarry, dear old George street will continue her record of peace and prosperity under the new regime.

NEW RAILWAY OPENED

THE LINDSAY, BOBCAYGEON & PONTYPOOL RAILROAD.

The First Train to Enter Bobcaygeon—A Public Holiday There—Will be a Great Convenience.

The Lindsay, Bobcaygeon & Pontypool Railway, which opens for traffic on Monday, was yesterday taken over by the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has secured a perpetual lease of the road. The line leaves Burketon station, on the C.P.R. line from Toronto to Montreal, and runs in a north-easterly direction through Lindsay to Bobcaygeon. The total length of the road is 38 miles, and it passes through not only a beautiful and wealthy agricultural district, but also a very fine fishing and sporting district, for the road skirts the River Scugog and Sturgeon Lake for nearly their whole length. With this new road these summer resorts will be less than two hours' run from Toronto.

The line has been constructed by Mr. E. J. Fauquier, contractor, in about eighteen months, and, according to the report of the Government engineer, the whole line is above even the Government standard of construction.

Yesterday the first passenger train was run over the road, and the verdict of the passengers and officials was that every inch of the line was "well and truly laid." A special car attached to the C.P.R. Montreal express carried to Burketon Messrs. Henry P. Timmerman, General Superintendent; A. H. Notman, Assistant General Passenger Agent; R. Preston, Master Mechanic; W. J. Grant, commercial agent, Hamilton; A. McAulay, roadmaster; A. L. Smith, chief train despatcher, and W. Marshall, inspector of telegraphs, all officials of the C.P.R.; Mr. G. B. Clarke, K.C.; G. Prior Deacon, Toronto; Mr. G. B. Walker, a director of the Hull & Barnsley, England, Railway, and others.

At Burketon a special train was made up, and from there on to the last stopping place before Bobcaygeon was reached a number of township and county representatives joined the train.

At Lindsay luncheon was served, and on their arrival at Bobcaygeon a great welcome was accorded them, and the day was observed as a holiday there.

Mr. Wickham, who is recognized in Bobcaygeon, as the chief promoter of the line, was met by the village Council, and Reeve Byng presented him with a congratulatory address and a gold-headed cane in recognition of his services in promoting the road.

In reply, Mr. Wickham said it was more than 30 years since the scheme of a railway to Bobcaygeon was mooted, but now it was an accomplished fact, and he believed it would prove beneficial to the village and the whole district.

The visitors were then taken for a short drive round the village and along the canal, by the Council, and were served with light refreshments by Messrs. M. and W. Boyd of the Trent Navigation Company.

There will be eight or nine stations on the road, but only four are as yet named, these being Nestleton, Lindsay, Eureka and Bobcaygeon. The names of the others will be settled tomorrow.

The line receives a bonus of about $150,000 from the Dominion Government, $50,000 from the Province and $75,000 from the towns and townships it passes through. The cost of the road will be almost $780,000. During next week there will be one train daily, except Sunday, each way, and about August 15th there will be two trains daily each way, and perhaps more.

Bobcaygeon's decorations were reminiscent of the relief of Ladysmith, but the people said their town was also relieved by the new line, for until yesterday the nearest railway station was at Fenelon Falls, twelve miles distant. A big programme of aquatic sports was provided in honor of the event.

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

BASEBALL.

At the meeting of the Midland Executive held last night in Port Hope, the two protested games with Lindsay and Bowmanville were ordered to be played over again in Peterborough. The following representatives were present—Messrs. Weeks, Bowmanville; Hambly, Oshawa; Perkin, Lindsay; Mulhall, Cobourg; Graham, Peterborough, and Orton of Port Hope.

The reason for the protests was that the locals had played a couple of non-resident men, as their own pitcher was out of town at the time. The executive ordered that only local men shall hereafter be played.

Lindsay defeated Cobourg at the latter place yesterday by the score of 6—2. An excursion from Lindsay accompanied the team.

THE TURF.

Entries in the running events for Monday's races close tomorrow evening.

Prospects are good for holding the best race meet ever held in Peterborough next week, if the weather is good. Several horses have arrived already and others will be here tomorrow.

A New York paper says that Nat Ray on Wednesday, besides losing his race on Cock Robin in the steeplechase, on returning to the grand stand learned that his wife had lost $2500 that he had intrusted to her Pinkerton detectives were called in at once and began to fine-comb the grand stand and betting ring, but nowhere could be noted the face of a man who even remotely resembled the pick-pockets known to the Pinkertons. Al Butler had been at the gate for the agency and no one had passed in who could be suspected of proficiency in finding rolls hidden by women. The affair still remains a track mystery. The grief in the Ray household is touching to witness.

LACROSSE.

President Crowley ordered Tweed and Havelock to play yesterday at Norwood, but as Tweed refused to play the game was given to Havelock.

The T. A. S. team play an exhibition game here on Monday with the I.C.B.U. team of Toronto, and it promises to be interesting.

1,626 C.L.A. certificates have been issued this year, 14 less then last year.

St. Catharines play the Tecumsehs at the Island to-morrow.

BOWLING.

Notwithstanding the discomforts of the evening the following enthusiasts played last night:—

M. G. Constant	G. E. Elliott
D. Kerneghan	Wm. Martin
W. Lang	D. H. Moore
W. Smith, sk...15	S. T. Medd, skip... 5
G. Meredith	S. Sharpe
A. R. Kidd	G. A. Cox
R. Waddell	W. O'Brien
E. Runnals, sk...18	R. Frost, sk..... 7

Schedule for To-night.

Giroux vs Moore.
Kerr vs Runnells.
Frost vs Matthews.
Stratton vs McIntyre.

For Monday Night.

Dixon vs. Stratton.
Frost vs. Waddell.
Brooks vs. Smith.
Ferguson vs. Sailsbury.

The following challenge has been handed to us for publication:—

THE PHAULASMAGORICAL AZTECS

of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Association, composed of the following:—

Oku Kerneghan,
Nodsu Moore (commonly called Dave),
Togo J. Johnsing,
Ku-rockey Frost (this gentleman, notwithstanding his name, never had cold feet) challenge any and every possible combination of the remaining semi-comatose members of the aforesaid club, to be put wholly to sleep, in a game of bowls, to be played anywhere, except in the vicinity of water, special inducements being offered for the gore of bunches including the following:—

Grand Duke Alexis Kerr,
Kur-o-Pat-Kin Giroux,
Reminicantski Sturgeon,
Roaming-off Runnals,
The Bould McIntyre,
Beas, Buyer-off Billski Talbot (the Count can be thrown in as a collateral) and others with names too longitudinal to mention.

Any individual bunch can be composed of all skips, or they can skip a skip if they want to.

Remember we are the yellow peril and are the only combination that can allow an eight end against us and win out.

To guard against heart failure on your part, we beg to say that our actuaries inform us that out of the number of automatums challenged, 1,689,646 7-8 (allowing for Brother Sam Sharpe), combinations can be made against us. This will give us the gratification of 1,689,647 victories, if men be allowed us in the last end of the last game.

Come One, Come Mostly.

INQUEST COMMENCED.

Jury Empannelled and Adjourned Until Tuesday Evening.

The inquest on the body of the late Olive Kidd, who was drowned on Monday night, was commenced yesterday afternoon at 5.30 o'clock, before Coroner Gray. After the jury were empannelled, the child's body was viewed, and an adjournment made until Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock, when they will meet at the Wolfe street wharf and examine the boat, after which an adjournment will be made to the Council Chamber. Following are the jury:—Messrs. C. N. Brown, foreman; W. H. Dayman, W. Shilsbury, R. N. McWhinnie, Wm. Rudkins, F. J. R. Mitchell, W. R. G. Higgins, G. W. Fitzgerald, Wm. Armstrong, Frank Hamilton, J. A. Tully and Dickson Davidson.

POLICE COURT.

Drunk Fined and a Boy Discharged This Morning.

Allan Armstrong, the "man from Glengarry," who was remanded for a week to sober up, came before Jas. Stevenson, J.P., this morning and was fined $1 and costs, amounting to $5.50. Armstrong was up last winter and claimed that he had a wife and seven children to support, and was let off, but it was found out afterwards that this was only a hoax.

A little boy, Herbeert Taylor, was charged with throwing stones at a man. He was discharged with a warning.

BURLEIGH FALLS MORTGAGE.

Culverwell Wants Lindsay to Cancel His Mortgage for $1,500.

In reference to the discussion of which we give a report in another column in the Lindsay Town Council in reference to the Burleigh Falls power mortgage, the Watchman-Warder says editorially:

"Lindsay took a mortgage on the Burleigh Falls power because it wanted assurance that if it centred its interest on the scheme to develop that power is would be developed and brought to Lindsay. The town is just as interested in the development of that power and its coming to Lindsay as ever, and it stands as ready as ever to give its moral support—and no more:—to all attempts towards these ends. While these conditions remain it is hard to see why the guarantee given the town in consideration of that attitude should be cancelled. There appears to be just as much need for the guarantee today as ever there was. Lindsay has followed the Burleigh power, and will follow it, until it secures it, or realizes equitably at least upon its securities against a failure—a failure for which it will be in no wise to blame."

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Charles Ashley Struck by a Train and Seriously Injured.

Mr. Charles Ashley, 4th con. of Hope, near Quay's Crossing, met with an accident today which no doubt will prove fatal. He was driving to town with his team, and while crossing the track near Choate's farm, was struck by the 12.45 train from the north. The engine struck the rear end of the wagon, knocking Mr. Ashley out and carrying him and the fragments of the wagon for a considerable distance down the track. The train was stopped as quickly as possible and the injured man brought to town. Dr. Powers was at once summoned, but his injuries are so numerous and severe that little can be done to relieve him. His right arm and leg are terribly smashed, his head badly cut, and besides a number of serious internal injuries. The right leg was in such a condition that it had to be tied on by ropes before he could be removed.

Mr. Ashley died in about an hour after being brought to town. The body is at Mr. George's undertaking establishment.—Port Hope Guide.

CRIME AT OMEMEE.

Serious Offences Committed by Young Men on a Lindsay Couple.

The preliminary hearing of a case that threatens to get some folks into serious trouble was held before County Magistrate Deacon at Omemee on Tuesday.

On the 24th of May a young man and woman from Lindsay went to Omemee. They stayed there for a couple of days drinking more or less, and made the acquaintance of some people who did not prove to be friends. These people were some young men of Omemee, who are now in an unenviable situation.

On the 25th the Lindsay couple started to drive to Lindsay. Their new acquaintances came with them two or three miles out. There they persuaded the Lindsay pair to go into a foundry building which is near the road. There they beat the man so severely that he has been spitting blood ever since, robbed him of $30, and outraged the young woman. Now they are in the toils of the law.

Mr. J. E. Weldon and Mr. Hugh O'Leary are prosecuting lawyers.—Lindsay Watchman-Warder.

OSHAWA HERE TOMORROW

A Good Game Expected as Both Teams are Leaders.

The game to-morrow between the locals and Oshawa promises to be one of the best of the season. The locals have been practicing batting lately, and "Frills" Parker will have to think some tomorrow. It is quite probable that the young fellow working in the Canadian General will be tried out tomorrow. He was out at practice last night, and showed pretty fair form. The two teams will be:—

Oshawa— Hambly lf, Crowley c, Brockman 2b, Costello cf, Bowden 1b, Cawker 3b, Gynett ss, Giles rf, Parker p.

Peterborough—Sheridan, Lamont, J. Pilling, Graham, Whiteroft, T. Pilling, Simpson, McDonald, Earls.

Miss Clara Halpin is visiting Miss M. Kennedy, Lakefield.

Miss Laura Edwards, of Lakefield, is visiting friends in town.

Miss Pearl Fitzgerald is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Maude, Lakefield.

Mrs. George Nicholls and Miss Edna were visiting friends in Lakefield last week.

Mrs. O. A. Kidd is visiting at the home of her parents in Warsaw, Mr. and Mrs. E. Snider.

Miss Nellie Davies, of Peterborough, was the guest of the Misses Sherry, of Norwood, this week.

Miss Mona O'Shea, town, is visiting Mr. Jerry O'Shea, the Misses Smith, and others this week in Norwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Learmough, of town, have been spending a week with friends around Norwood.

Mrs. W. H. Christie and children, of Peterborough, were the guests on Friday and Saturday last of Mr. and Mrs. E. Laing, Norwood.

Bandmaster Henderson, of the 35th Regiment, is making steady progress. He is now able to walk about the corridors of the hospital in Barrie without assistance.

Mrs. J. C. Henderson und Master Arthur Henderson, who have been the guests of Mrs. A. W. Cressman, returned to their home in Norwich today.

Miss A. S. Gertrude McFadden of Elm st., town, has returned from a pleasant visit with friends in Emily and Ennismore. She reports crops as looking well and also states there are no fish in Pigeon Creek.

WEDDING BELLS

A Napanee Wedding of Interest to Peterborough Friends.

Napanee, July 28—The Presbyterian church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, when Miss Winnifred Beatrice Templeton, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs. Wm. Templeton, became the bride of John Fair Van Every, B.A., of Owen Sound. The ceremony was performed by Rev. (W. W. Peck.

The bride was gowned in white silk crepe de chene, with panel and insertions of wide silk Cluny lace, the waist with a yoke and half sleeves of lace, with trimmings of lace and chiffon. The customary long white tulle veil was worn, and a shower bouquet of white roses carried by the bride.

The bridesmaids were Miss Constance Harshaw, gowned in dove grey; Miss Winnifred Robb, Montreal, in pink; Miss Edith Cull, Mitchell, in maize; and the maid of honor was Miss Margaret Templeton, sister of the bride, in pale blue. All the maids wore coronets to pink flowers, and carried large bouquets of pink and white carnations, tied with white tulle.

The groom was assisted by Mr. W. A. P. Wood, B.A., of Toronto, During the ceremony the organ was played by Miss Janet Templeton, sister of the bride. The ushers were Mr. W. A. Tooke, Montreal; Mr. W. W. Van Every, Peterborough; Mr. J. L. Robinson and Mr. C. P. Templeton, Napanee.

A reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents by Mr. and Mrs. Templeton, assisted by Miss Van Every, sister of the groom, dressed in white voile silk, with trimmings of handsome lace, white hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Every left on the midnight train for a honeymoon in Muskoka. Later they will reside in Owen Sound.

The groom is an old Peterborough boy and his many friends will extend hearty congratulations.

Brevities.

—It is expected that the street railway will be running by the middle of August.

—The excursion from Oshawa tomorrow is expected about 10.30 a.m., via G.T.R.

—A large party of fishermen went down the river this afternoon to enjoy an afternoon's outing.

—Some boys broke the railing in front of the store lately occupied by Richard Hall & Son the other night.

—A large number of people drove to Chemong last night to hear the band concert by the 57th Regiment band.

—A party from Rochester, N.Y., are camping at Heeley's Falls, where they are trying to capture some large members of the finny trible.

—The Chief has received a letter from the south ward complaining of people riding on the sidewalk on Albert and Chamberlain sts. Nuf said.

—The year book of the American Canoe Association contains a photograph of Major and Mrs. Leigh, formerly of Lakefield, at their home, on Sugar Island, in 1903.

—A general meeting of the committees who have the Chemong regatta in charge will be held in the Park Hotel to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock A full attendance is requested.

—The trustees of the Trent Valley Navigation Co's sup have decided to put it up in competition in the dinghy race at the Chemong Regatta on Saturday, Aug. 6th.

—A young lady in town today received a beautiful ostrich fan from South Africa. It has tortoise shell sticks, and the feathers are the natural grey color. It is very unique, and the young lady prizes it very much.

—The Lindsay Watchman-Warder, describing a lecture given there by the Rev. J. J. Ree, of Picton, says "He has a lecture on Fools, but he is keeping that for Peterborough." Having little experience in that line, we are certainly more in need of information regarding it than Lindsay.

—Next year the entrance exams. will be conducted differently from the present system. A certificate from the principal of the public school will admit the pupil. The new system will go into effect before midsummer of 1905. The different boards will have the discretionary power of using either examinations or certificates.

—In backward townships it is customary for statute labor men to mend the roads by throwing onto them mud from the side drains. Is it necessary to adopt this plan in the town of Peterborough? Why should the macadam be covered with a layer of mud so that in wet weather it is an inch or two deep even on the crossings?

MARRIED.

HALF FALSE JEWELS.

How One Diamond Makes Two Each as Big as the Original.

The lapidary was splitting a diamond. He leaned forward with intent brows. His tiny machine buzzed like a bee. A delicate and shining dust arose.

Then suddenly everything was stilled, and the diamond, split in halves, lay in the lapidary's white, thin hand.

"Out of one diamond," he said, "I am going to make two, and each of these two will be as big and brilliant as the original one was."

As he scraped up the glittering dust he explained:

"First I will make in paste an exact duplicate of each of these two halves. Then I will join to the bottom of each genuine half its artificial complement, making the junction so carefully that no one will be able to perceive it. Finally I will mount these two half false and half genuine stones. Each then will appear to be altogether genuine. Their paste foundations will not detract in any way from their brilliance. The owner of the big diamond will have two big diamonds.

"The making of fake jewels," the lapidary said, "is an interesting study. Do you know what the best fake pearls are made of? They are made of fish scales—silvery and iridescent fish scales pasted on the inside of balls of glass. The fish these scales come from is called in France the ablette and in England the bleak. It is smaller than a minnow. Its scales must be picked off by hand, and only a small portion of them can be used. It takes 18,000 ablettes, or bleaks, to yield a pound of scales."

Separating Them.

"In the old days, when the capital of Alabama was located at Tuscaloosa, there was a good deal of open gambling at that seat of legislation," said a southern man. "It was the custom in those times for men of all grades of society to risk their money at games of chance, and the lawmakers who gathered at Tuscaloosa were among the best patrons of the gaming tables.

"The proprietor of one of those resorts, wishing to keep the state solons separated from the ordinary customers of his place, put up a big sign in the apartment devoted to faro, poker, roulette and the like, which read:

"'Members of the legislature please take the table to the right; gamblers take the table to the left. It's hard to tell you apart.'"

Germany's First Windmill.

The first windmill in Germany was built at Windsheim. The Augustine monks at that place desired to build one such as they had seen in Italy, but the lord of the manor forbade them, declaring that the winds belonged to him. The monks applied to the bishop of Utrecht, who promptly laid down the fundamental principle that no one had any power over the winds of his diocese but himself. He gave permission to build the mill and it was erected in the closing years of the fourteenth century.

Time and Money.

The counterfeiter was in prison for ten years.

"What are you doing here?" asked a visitor.

"Passing time."

"Ah, what for?"

"Passing money." And the visitor passed on.

After Midnight.

Wife—I'm sorry to see you come home in such a state as this, Charles. Husband—I knew you'd be sorry, Carrie, and that's why I told you not to sit up.

A SOLDIER OF COMMERCE

By JOHN ROE GORDON

Copyright, 1903, by F. H. Toombs

"We are to permit ourselves to be overtaken by Domitan's army," said Harvey, "and ask to be assisted on our way. Let me do the talking. And, what you see me do, do also. I must plan as I go along, for after we join the Zannucks there will be no time."

Slowly they tramped along the road, and at last, judging themselves to be about half way between the camp and the monastery, they waited.

"Here they come," said Harvey. "Be ready and keep cool. It will be the effort of our lives."

CHAPTER XXII.

A RACE FOR LIBERTY.

DOMITAN'S caravan came on slowly, for the men were walking. They had sent a portion of the force round another way to get the horses that had been left on the cliff.

Domitan and his captains rode ahead mounted on horses they had taken from the Bokharans. Following came the little army, straggling along in anything but military style, laughing, singing and celebrating their victory. It was Domitan's watchful eye that discovered two bowed and bent priests resting by the wayside, their great hoods concealing their faces except for the eyes.

"It is well," he said to one of his captains, "that on the first day of my chieftainship I meet with two holy men upon the way. I will give them alms and have their blessings upon me."

"Most holy fathers, holy ones of the sun, bless me," he said, "for I am but today the chief of the Zannucks."

"I bless you," said Harvey, with a weak and trembling voice as he pocketed the gold. "We are weary, and the temple is far. Hast thou no seat for us on a camel? I see there are two with apparently but little load."

"It is well that thy presence augurs good," said Domitan in a sort of exultation. "Those camels bear the one who will be my bride and the one who will be the bride of my brother. Surely it will be well for us if the holy men ride with them. Come."

He went back to the camels and commanded them to kneel.

"Holy companions wilt thou have, my sweet ones," he said. "These holy men have blessed me, and I have made them presents. I shall win great victories."

Harvey got into the bowdah by the side of Alma, and Orskoff, with apparent feebleness, climbed in with Koura. The camels rose to their feet again, and Domitan proudly led on. It was not every day that a chieftain had two lamas in his caravan.

Orskoff was fidgety. He knew that when they reached the monastery they would be expected to leave, but he had faith that Harvey would surmount the difficulty. He saw Harvey scanning the sky and mumbling and making peculiar signs. Harvey called to Domitan, and the chief rode back.

"I see mysterious signs in the heavens," said Harvey in a manner that would inspire awe. "I see but an hour's ride from this spot a band of soldiers of the ameer coming to give you battle. They are mighty men and armed. I have blessed thee, and therefore thou wilt surely win. But these tender children must not be taken into danger if thou wouldst have them for wives. Take thy fighting men and go meet the foe. We will remain here, where it is safe."

"How many of the ameer's soldiers dost thou see, holy one?"

"Ten score of horse."

"We are their equals. We will obey thee, holy one, leaving only enough to guard thee."

He appointed an officer and part of a company to remain to guard and led the remainder on to meet the foe. The caravan came to a halt. The camels laden with merchandise were brought up, and the soldiers put aside their arms to make camp.

"Now, you gallant Russian!" shouted Harvey as he turned his camel and gave it a prick with the blade of his knife. The beast flew like the very wind toward Siloon, with Koura's camel in hot pursuit.

Cries of rage and consternation rose from the soldiers. A few shots were fired, but no bullet touched them. On, on, they went. Nothing stayed the mad flight. The howdahs rocked and swayed and the girls became sick. Harvey goaded his camel to the utmost. He could picture to himself a soldier on the best horse sent to inform Domitan; the chief's wild ride back in pursuit; his awful rage when he knew he had been duped; his murderous desire for revenge. Harvey gritted his teeth and egged the camel on. Many a long journey had he taken on the beasts and knew well the handling of them.

Thus they raced on the fleetest camels in all Bokhara. For ten hours they kept up the pace. Then he knew it would be safe to rest, for the best horse Domitan possessed could not overtake them.

Then on again for hours they sped along the pass; then another stop for water and fruit. They passed a shepherd's cottage, and he gave them a good meal.

"That's enough," said Harvey. "That will do till we reach Siloon. There's plenty on the gunboat."

On again they went, slacking the pace but little. They reached Siloon in two days. The caravan was four days in making the distance.

Siloon was agape with astonishment when it saw the camels of the ameer racing into the place with the two pretty women and two monks. It was eager to know the particulars. The streets were filled with Russian sailors, and Russian guns frowned from a gunboat in the harbor.

Harvey and Orskoff alighted, while the Russians and people of Siloon gathered round.

"Where is Lieutenant Nevisky?" asked Orskoff, removing his red hat and robe and showing himself in his regular uniform.

"Lieutenant Nevisky has been sent back to Salain," was the reply of a sailor. "Admiral Platoff is here with the gunboat, yonder, waiting for you."

"Does he understand?"

"I suppose so. We knew you were coming here."

"Signal the gunboat."

While the boat was coming Harvey arranged with a bazaar merchant to have the camels returned to the ameer, who, he said, would give a reward for their recovery.

The gunboat showed signs of activity, and the small boat soon took them to it. On the deck stood a grizzled old officer wearing the uniform of an admiral. He did not greet them, but looked with some curiosity at a girl in the uniform of the inspector of prisons, a grimy American clad as a lama, a naval officer with a monk's hood in his hand and Koura, the girl who had twice been stolen from Tiflis.

"I inform you that you are my prisoners!" he said curtly.

"You place us under arrest!" exclaimed Orskoff.

"I do. You for deserting your gunboat and entering forbidden territory and releasing captured robbers, the American as being an escaped prisoner. Alma Jurnieff for releasing said prisoner. Koura Biartelkis is not under arrest. You shall go at once to Tiflis for trial."

"How many of the Ameer's soldiers dost thou see, holy one?"

* * * * * * *

In the office of the governor's palace at Tiflis sat a man of powerful build wearing a uniform that betokened exalted rank. He was General Urieff, governor general of the province, a man of blood and iron and one in whom the czar placed so much confidence that it was said that a command from Urieff was a command from the czar himself.

Before him stood three prisoners. He listened attentively while they told the story of their adventures. It is not necessary to repeat the testimony that was given before the governor general. In the main it was Harvey Irons' cool voice that rehearsed the adventures that culminated in the arrests by Admiral Platoff.

When the story was ended, General Urieff said:

"With his knowledge of the matter, having been told by Lieutenant Nevisky what he knew, Admiral Platoff was justified in making the arrests and bringing the prisoners here. As a matter of fact, it was fortunate for you that he did so. Conditions have changed in Tiflis. I came from Stavropol solely to investigate the fact that an American, of whom I had never heard, was in a Russian prison. I supposed it was one of those blatant nihilists who claim American citizenship, but after a thorough investigation I learned that the man's only crime was loving a Russian beauty. I heard all about the Biartelkis case and had my own officers investigate it, with the result that Hafiz Effendi and a Bokharan named Mizik are now in the prison from which the American escaped. There is no charge against the American.

"This brings us to the case of Alma Jurnieff, who really did commit a serious offense in the eyes of Russian law. But I have weighed this matter well. I have taken into consideration her youth and the fact that the man she released was guilty of no crime, but was imprisoned by intrigue and false swearing. Therefore I have decided that there is no charge against Alma Jurnieff.

"As to Captain Orskoff, it appears from the testimony of Lieutenant Nevisky that he had arrested the American and four robbers, whom he should have brought at once to Tiflis, instead of which he gave them their liberty and went upon Bokharan territory, which is forbidden. This, too, I have studied well. My decision is that Captain Orskoff performed his duties. He is here to see that the law against selling women is not disregarded. It is his duty to follow and rescue any taken away. He has done this in the case of Koura Biartelkis.

"I am glad that the news of the escape came to me, for justice would not have been done had the affair been left in the hands of local officials. I brought charges of conspiracy against Colonel Jurnieff and threatened him and his brother, the general, with Siberia. He became enraged and died of apoplexy. Prince Dellnikoff has been disgraced and removed from the army for permitting a woman to wear his uniform and impersonate him."

"I sincerely thank you for your just decisions," said Harvey. "Somewhere on the Volga I have some valuable windmills, and I want to find them and take them to the fair at Nijni Novgorod to sell. Alma and I shall be married as soon as we can find some one to perform the ceremony, and I shall take her with me."

"Koura and I shall be married at the same time you are," said Captain Orskoff to Harvey.

Harvey's Novgorod trip was a grand success.

THE END.

Extending the Analogy.

"I tell you," contended the boarder with the bristling hair, "the man who says we ought to live to be a hundred years old is right. Look at the horse. It takes a horse four years to get its growth, and it lives to be twenty. It takes a man twenty years to get his growth, and by the same ratio he ought to live to be a hundred. There are lots of things we can learn from analogy."

"I don't know but you are right," responded the unemotional boarder. "For instance, there is the flea. It jumps thirteen hundred times its own length. There is no reason, therefore, why a man six feet high should not be able to jump—let us see—7,800 feet, or a mile and a half, at one leap. Yes; we can learn a great many curious things from analogy."

But here the conversation drifted to other topics.—Youth's Companion.

The First Gas Machine.

A gas machine is generally understood as an apparatus for producing carbureted air, which may be used like carbureted hydrogen or coal gas for illuminating purposes. When gasoline, which is a very light and volatile product of petroleum, comes in contact with the air it is dissolved by the air—in other words, the air becomes charged with its vapors to such an extent that the air and vapors form a fairly good substitute for coal gas, requiring a slightly different burner. Oliver P. Drake, a philosophical instrument maker of Boston, was the first to use gasoline for this purpose. The Drake machine was made in the form of a cylinder with a partition through the center. One end was provided with a water meter wheel driven by a weight and clockwork. This meter wheel pumped air, which was taken into the other end of the cylinder, where it came in contact with the gasoline, the gasoline being constantly presented to the air by a rotating evaporator made of wicking. The air in passing took up sufficient of the vapors to enable it to be used for illuminating purposes. These machines went into use to a limited extent.—Sir Hiram Maxim in Harper's Weekly.

Lever's Y-2 (Wine Head) Disinfectant Soap Powder is a boon to any home. It disinfects and cleans at the same time.

An Indignant Scotchman.

A sheep farmer in the Cheviot hills of Scotland had been told that it was useful to have a barometer in the house, for it would let him know when the weather would be good or bad. He was accordingly persuaded to procure a mercurial instrument with a large round dial, which he hung up in his lobby and duly consulted every day without much edification. At last there came a spell of rainy weather, while the barometer marked "set fair." The rain continued to fall heavily and still the hand on the dial made no sign of truth. At last he took the instrument from its nail and marched with it to the bottom of the garden, where a burn, swollen with the drainage of the higher slopes, was rushing along, brown and muddy. He then thrust the glass into the water, exclaiming, "Will you believe your ain een noo, then?"

The Sovereign Was Safe.

A carpenter in a Scotch village, to oblige the local undertaker, who was ill, went to screw down a coffin lid. The dead man's wife gave him full and particular instructions respecting the task. "Weel," she asked when he returned, "hoo did ye get on?"

"Fine," was the reply. "But there was hauf a sovereign in the corp's hand. What was that for?"

"Oh," said the lady, "that's a custom some folks hae. He's supposed to gie that the ferryman wha rows him o'er the river o' death!"

"Do ye tell me that? It's a queer warld. But I'm sayin', missis"—

"Yes?"

"I'm feared yon chap will hae to swim."

FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1904.

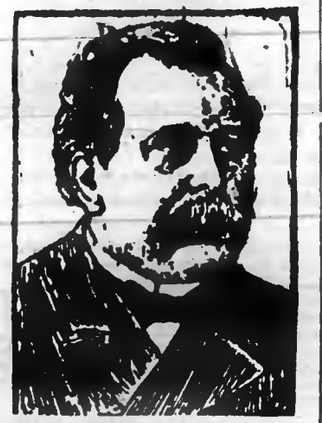
SLAIN BY AN ASSASSIN

Russian Minister Plehve Victim of Widespread Plot.

M. Plehve's Head Was Torn Off—Murderer, a Finn, Named Legio, Though Badly Hurt By the Fatal Bomb, Was Arrested in Attempting to Escape—Bomb's Force Was Almost Sensationally Terrific—Incidental Damage From Explosion.

St. Petersburg, July 29.—M. Von Plehve, Minister of the Interior, was assassinated at 9.30 o'clock yesterday morning by means of a bomb thrown at his carriage, while he was driving to the Baltic Station to take a train for the Palace at Peterhof, where he was to make his weekly report to the Emperor.

The assassination is believed to be the outcome of a widespread plot,



M. VON PLEHVE.
(Russian Minister of Interior.)

the existence of which has been suspected for several days. Numerous arrests have already been made, including that of the assassin, a young man who is believed to be a Finn named Legio, and who is now in a hospital, severely and perhaps fatally injured by the explosion of his own bomb.

An accomplice of Legio, also apparently a Finn, but whose name is unknown, has been arrested. He had in his possession a bomb, which he tried to throw, but he was overpowered by the police just in time to prevent great loss of life. The assassin stood on the sidewalk just as Minister Von Plehve's carriage was about to cross the canal bridge, near the station. The Minister was escorted by a number of detectives on bicycles, and one of them jostled the assassin, who then rushed into the road and threw the bomb after the carriage.

Minister Killed Outright.

The missile struck the hind wheel and exploded with fearful force, killing or wounding over a score of persons. Minister Von Plehve and his coachman were killed outright and an officer of the guard was fatally injured.

One of the cyclist detectives arrested the assassin, who endeavored to escape, though wounded by splinters in the face, arm and abdomen. He made no attempt at resistence, however, when seized by the detective and confessed his crime, but refused to give his name.

The police immediately after the explosion arrested a suspicious individual who took refuge in a hotel opposite the scene of the tragedy. He carried a bomb similar to that thrown by Legio. As soon as the police saw the bomb they scattered, but an employe of the hotel rushed up behind the accomplice and pinned his arms. The explosive is believed to have been composed of pyrovolin, as it gave off little smoke.

Bomb's Terrific Force.

The force of the explosion was so terrific that it not only broke every window within a radius of half a mile, but reduced the heavy paving stones to powder, heaved up the pavement and flung a heavy piece of the iron work of the carriage across the canal, severing the thick mast of a barge, which fell, stunning the captain of the barge. Everybody in the street was knocked down, and more or less bruised.

When the officers of the law, headed by Minister of Justice Muravieff, had terminated the necessary formalities by drawing up a written report of the crime, the mangled remains of the Minister of the Interior were conveyed to a humble chapel adjoining the station, the windows of which miraculously escaped destruction.

The priests and people, with characteristic Russian piety, at once joined in a solemn requiem.

Reported to the Czar.

The Minister of Justice, M. Muravieff, went to the Peterhof Palace yesterday afternoon to report the assassination of Minister Von Plehve to Emperor Nicholas. His Majesty did not leave the palace during the entire day, although he had arranged to go to Oranienbaum (19 miles from St. Petersburg), to attend the consecration of the new harbor.

The Empress has not been informed of the tragedy in view of the hourly expectation of the birth of an heir to the throne.

His Head Torn Off.

The bomb was thrown from a window of the Warsaw Hotel. Von Plehve's head was torn off, the lower portion was completely shattered, but the upper part was untouched. There were only two conspirators, one of whom threw the bomb from the window and then bolted. When captured, another bomb is said to have been found in his pocket.

Next to the Emperor.

Von Plehve's assassination was officially announced at about 1 o'clock and was followed immediately by the issuance of extra editions of the papers. Although they contained only four lines referring to the tragedy, the newsboys were fairly mobbed by the crowds in the streets, so eager were all for details of the crime. Intense excitement reigned everywhere. Only the assassination of the Emperor could have created more of a sensation, as next to His Majesty himself, Von Plehve was regarded as the most powerful personality in the Russian Government.

Who Assassinated Mac Mac.

Von Plehve was appointed Minister of the Interior April 18, 1902, succeeding M. Sipiaguine, who was assassinated April 16, 1902, by a student named Balschaneff. He had formerly been Director of the Department of Police. Plehve conducted the prosecution of the assassins of Alexander II. in 1881, and from that time on his power increased until it became only second in importance to that of the Emperor. Several plots to assassinate him have, according to reports, been discovered during the past two years.

After Others Too.

As Minister of Justice Muravieff was driving to the Peterhof Palace yesterday afternoon to report to Emperor Nicholas the assination of Minister of the Interior Von Plehve stones were thrown at him and his carriage windows broken. The identity of the minister's assailants has not yet been discovered.

Plehve Regarded With Abhorrence.

Former United States Ambassador to Germany Andrew D. White was seen by a Post-Standard reporter just before he left for Ithaca yesterday afternoon. When asked if he had the acquaintance of Mr. Plehve, Russian Minister of the Interior, Mr. White answered that he knew him well. Mr. White said:

"I think both Gen. Bachellor and myself found Mr. Plehve very agreeable, and apparently, as far as his Government allowed, reasonable. I also met him socially at various times and found him agreeable and interesting. I was, therefore, greatly surprised at learning when he was promoted to the first place, that his whole character seemed to change.

Helped to Kill Jews.

"His part in the horrible massacre and plunder of the Jews, men, women and children, at Kishineff, caused him to be regarded with abhorrence by the whole world. Even more frightful has been his connection with the destruction of the liberties of Finland. In my mind that is the most wicked thing in the history of the last two centuries. There is no time to go into it here further than to say that it has turned the best, the most civilized, the most educated and most loyal province in the Empire into a land in which the opposite of all these characteristics is more highly developed than in any other part of the Empire. Other things done by him were also calculated to bring most bitter hatred against him.

Doesn't Wonder at It.

"I do not wonder at his assassination, although I deeply lament it. Among other reasons for this regret, it will doubtless be made a pretext for new oppression and new cruelties toward the Jewish population and toward the Finlanders. Assassination always defeats its purpose, and this will be, I fear, no exception to the rule."

"UTTERLY SHAMELESS."

R. L. Borden's Scathing Denunciation of the Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Ottawa, July 29.—The House did not go into supply yesterday morning, because Mr. Bennett brought up the case of J. B. Jackson of Ingersoll, appointed commercial agent at Leeds, Eng. He claimed Jackson had been a useful man to the Minister of Trade and Commerce in the matter of election conventions, and he went into Jackson's connection with the case to unseat Mr. Sutherland, the Conservative member for South Oxford in the Ontario House.

Sir Richard Cartwright, in reply, accepted freely the responsibility for Jackson's appointment.

Utterly Shameless.

Mr. R. L. Borden concluded a magnificent speech as follows.

"I believe, sir, that there never was in the public history of this country, or of any other country, so far as I am aware, has there been a more damnable doctrine more unblushingly avowed. (Cheers.) I do not understand how a gentleman who has in the past preached such doctrines with regard to the purity of public life, could ever have found it in his heart to stand up in this House of Commons and to make the avowal which the Minister of Trade and Commerce has made to-day. It was bold, it was more than bold, it was unblushing, it was audacious, and if I were not transgressing Parliamentary decorum I would say that it was utterly shameless. That this man so stigmatized by Mr. Justice Street should be promoted in the public life of Canada, and that the Minister of Trade and Commerce, speaking for the Government, should not be ashamed to stand up and justify him, is an unheard of degradation of our public life. We are indebted to the hon. member (B. Bennett) for bringing the matter to the attention of the House, and in my opinion it deserves grave consideration from the House and the country."

Mr Borden concluded by offering the following motion: "In making appointments to public offices, and particularly those of a representative nature, party services should not alone be considered, but selections should be made with regard to capacity and to personal character."

The House then divided and the motion was defeated by 70 nays and 43 yeas, a Government majority of 27. Mr. Erb (Liberal), South Perth, voted with the Opposition, and Mr. Puttee of Winnipeg, with the Government.

Capt. Graham to Resign.

London, July 29.—(C.A.P.)—Capt Graham, lately aide-de-camp to Lord Minto, is resigning his commission in the Coldstream Guards.

Sole Meets With Accident.

Toronto, July 29.—While performing the leap-the-gap feat at Crystal Beach, near Buffalo, on Wednesday, Oliver Belz, the young man who did the performance at the island two weeks ago, lost control of his wheel and plunged over the trestle to the ground, 40 feet below. His skull was fractured, but he is expected to recover.

New Chief Justice.

Montreal, July 29.—Sir L. N. Casault, recently appointed commissioner for the codification of the revised statutes of the Province of Quebec, will resign his chief justiceship in consequence. He will be succeeded as chief justice of Quebec by Hon. F. Langelier, one of the most brilliant of the French-Canadian judges.

Drowned in Canal.

Cornwall, July 29.—Arthur Lally, the 13-year-old son of John Lally, lockmaster at the foot of the Cornwall Canal, was drowned at noon yesterday. He was crossing the old locks and fell into the water. Some one saw his cap and in a few minutes the body was recovered, but life was extinct.

Doctor Settles.

Toronto, July 29.—Dr. Charles Stansbury will pay his wife $200, releasing him from all claims for five years. He was yesterday allowed his freedom by the police.

Canadian Riflemen Coming Home.

London, July 28.—(C. A. P.)—Private Perry, Staff-Sergt. Bayles, Capt. Crowe and Staff-Sergt. Crowe, of the Canadian Bisley team, will sail for home to-day on the Bavarian.

Row Boat Upset.

St. John's, Que., July 29.—Eugene Laroque, painter, and a member of the Philharmonic Band, was drowned by the upsetting of a rowboat above the C. P. R. bridge yesterday afternoon. A brother-in-law named Leger arrived from Montreal to spend the day with his wife and family, who were on a visit to the Laroques. Laroque and Leger went out for a boat ride. Leger says Laroque stood up in the boat when near the drawbridge, and losing his balance upset the boat, and both were precipitated into the river.

He May Die.

Niagara Falls, July 29.—Thomas Parker, resident of Stamford, and employed as hoist runner at the Queenston quarry, while on his way home on the Grand Trunk tracks, about a mile west of the station, was run over by the 8 p. m. eastbound express, and his right arm was cut off near the shoulder and face badly cut. His chances of recovery are slight. He has a wife and four children.

For Over Sixty Years.

An old and well-tried remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Sold by all druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

CHEESE MARKETS.

Medec, Ont., July 28.—There were 960 boxes of cheese boarded; sold, 200, at 7 11-16c; 50 at 7¾c; balance refused 7¾c.

Brockville, July 28.—Offerings to-day on the Brockville Cheese Board were 600 white and 1800 colored; 1130 boxes were sold on the board at 7¾c.

Kingston, July 28.—The regular meeting of the Frontenac Cheese Board was held this afternoon. Inspector C. H. Robinson was present and gave an instructive address to the members. He commented on the quality of the cheese being shipped to Montreal and said that the cause of any inferiority in the finished article could be traced back to the quality of the milk originally. The boardings were 695 colored and 740 white. Nearly all the boardings were cleaned out at 7¾c.

Barrie, July 28.—Barrie cheese board met to-day, when eight factories boarded 565 cheese; market dull; bidding slow; D. Guss, Toronto, bought 315 at 7¾c to 7⅞c. C. Moore, Orillia, got 75 at 7¾c; C. A. Perkins, Barrie, 125 at 7¾c; Brown & Co., Barrie, 50 at 7¾c. All the cheese sold.

Tweed, July 28.—There were 600 cheese boarded; all sold at 7¾c. Magrath and Brintnell buyers.

Vankleek Hill, Ont., July 28.—There were 1421 white and 114 colored cheese boarded here to-night. Fraser started the bidding at 7¾c, McRae finally raised bid to 7¾c, and, after several calls and no sales, as the patrons would not sell at figure offered, all the buyers present seemed to be anxious to get the cheese at 7¾c, so privilege was given to sell on the street.

Winchester, Ont., July 28.—The regular meeting of the cheese board was held here to-night; 1240 cheese were registered, of which 1454 were white and balance colored. Price bid for white cheese 7⅞c, and for colored 8c; 34 boxes of colored cheese sold at 8c on board.

Crushed to Death.

St. Thomas, July 29.—Wednesday night Miles, the five-year-old son of L. H. Page, while getting off a moving street car, fell under the wheels and was crushed to death.

No Difference.

No distinction is made as to the kind of Piles that Hem-Roid cures. The names internal, external, bleeding, blind, itching, suppurating, etc., are simply names of the different stages through which every case will pass if it continues long enough.

Piles are caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and it takes an internal remedy to remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally.

It is a permanent cure and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure.

THAT AWKWARD WORD FOREIGNER

It is Used in England Now as a Jest.

The following letter appears in the Toronto News:

To the Editor of The News.

I have been living in London, England, for about a year, and was there when the cable informed the British people that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had spoken of Lord Dundonald as a "foreigner." This was considered an unfortunate expression, and was to some extent resented. But the English have a sense of humor and soon turned their resentment into humorous retaliation by calling the Canadians "foreigners." This was always in jest, and by way of chaffing the Canadians, who must, of course, be foreigners, in England if Englishmen are foreigners in Canada.

This is the real explanation of the incident reported from Henley, where it is said the expression was used, "The foreigner wins" in speaking of Mr. Scholes' success. Those Canadians who, in England, after Sir Wilfrid's speech, were saluted by their best friends jocularly with "Good morning, foreigner," will fully appreciate the spirit in which the term was used in a good-natured crowd enjoying the sports at Henley.

There are no better sports in the world than the English, nor are there any more hospitable people, and Canadians get the full benefit of their hospitality. Mr. Scholes testifies to this; so do the Canadian bowlers, and it has been the experience of other Canadians and Canadian teams who have gone to England to take part in various British and international sports. I happen to know the Master of Magdalen College mentioned in the despatch of the Canadian Associated Press correspondent, and I know there is not a more genial man in England, nor one more friendly to Canadians.

In the Parliament and political councils of Great Britain, Canadians are taking a prominent part, and several new candidates for the next election to the British Parliament are Canadians. As in public so in social and business affairs, and I do not hesitate to say that a Canadian has a better chance of success in London than an Englishman from the Provinces. Our country is fully appreciated in the Mother Country, and the present great movement towards a closer union of the Empire is largely influenced by the appreciation of the Imperial and commercial importance of Canada.

SINK HOLE STILL EXISTS

Gang of Two Hundred Men Working on It.

The sink hole at Ardendale, on the Ontario division of the C.P.R., east of Tweed, was responsible for a blockade of about five hours the other morning. It has been for a long time a source of worry to the officials, and a further subsidence began Thursday afternoon. A gang of 200 men were at once set to work and thousands of yards of earth and rock were dumped in again before it was considered safe to allow the trains to cross. Even then they crawled over a section which looked like the lake with a choppy sea. The passengers who left Montreal Thursday evening expecting to reach Toronto Friday morning were decidedly hungry after their five hours' wait, but the company took them all to the hotels in Tweed, and gave them a good warm breakfast.

It's Dean Locke Now.

Prof. George H. Locke, a graduate in arts of Victoria University, who has been for the past three or four years an associate professor in the School of Education, connected with the University of Chicago, has been appointed dean of the school. Dean Locke has many friends in town, who will be pleased to hear of his continued success.

BURLEIGH FALLS POWER.

Lindsay Wants the Power and Will Hang on to Its Security.

It is pretty hard for the Lindsay aldermen to get interested in water. But they had to give it attention for an hour on Tuesday night.

Three or four years ago when Mr. J. Alexander Culverwell was promoting the Burleigh Falls project here, he gave the town a mortgage of $1,500 on the water power as a guarantee that he would bring the power to Lindsay. He didn't bring it; now he wants the mortgage cancelled. Tuesday night's meeting was held to hear his reasons why it should be cancelled. Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., came with him. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee to be considered next Saturday night.

The mortgage was given merely to protect the town against loss from its support of the Burleigh project. No loss resulted, therefore the mortgage should be cancelled. Mr. Culverwell had worked on the power project not for his own benefit, but for the benefit of this community; therefore he should not be fined $1,500 because he failed.

Mr. Culverwell's efforts spurred up the Light, Heat & Power Company to buy, develop and bring to Lindsay the Fenelon Falls power; therefore he had done the town a good turn, and hence deserved well at its hands.

The mortgage is not valid, anyway. Mr. McLaughlin and Town Solicitor Hopkins had known that and discussed it at the time.

By his own work in behalf of the Trent Valley Canal, Lindsay had been placed under obligation to Mr. Culverwell.

These were the chief arguments by which Messrs. McLaughlin and Culverwell sought to secure the cancellation of the mortgage.

The town paid $400 to get an expert opinion against the Fenelon Falls power, when Mr. Culverwell was promoting that; but that was a year or two before the bond regarding the Burleigh proposition was given and, hence it was argued by Mr. Culverwell and his solicitor that the $400 should not be considered in connection with the bond.

Mr. William Flavelle, who was a chief advocate of the Fenelon project at the time it fell through, advised council in the following letter to cancel the mortgage:—

"I understand Mr. Culverwell is anxious to have the town release the claim they have upon the Burleigh power giving us a guarantee for the light contract. It seems to me that we ought to be willing to do this, as it was really no fault of his that the matter did not go through, and I think the town is now having the Fenelon Falls power in its present shape owing to the enterprise which he threw into the matter at the time. Yours truly, W. Flavelle."

Mr. McLaughlin sketched Mr. Culverwell's efforts to get power to this town, and said that the mortgage, given merely to protect the town against loss which it did not suffer, kept New York bankers from putting up money to develop the Burleigh power now.

The mortgage, he said, was no good anyway. He and the town solicitor had discussed that fact at the time it was drawn. The law did not allow a town to give a private individual a franchise of its streets.

Ald. O'Reilly—Did you say Hopkins knew that?

Mr. McLaughlin—Yes.

Ald. O'Reilly—Well, then, he fooled the town.

Mr. McLaughlin—Well, for the sake of getting the power, we strainedd a point. The mortgage is not valid.

Ald. O'Reilly—Why ask us to cancel it, then?

Mr. McLaughlin—It is easier to cancel it amicably than by a law suit. It is almost a certainty that when the power is developed, it will be brought to Lindsay.

The Mayor argued that the moment the power came to Lindsay, the town's claim by that fact would be cancelled, so the town's claim did not injure the proposition at all to any syndicate that intended to bring the power to Lindsay.

That was practically the council's view on that point, but it was replied that no syndicate wanted to be bound to reach Lindsay in order to get a clear title. They must be perfectly free.

Both Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. Culverwell spoke of Wright, who made the adverse report on Fenelon Falls as dishonest or incompetent—"and he is not incompetent," added Mr. Culverwell.

Mr. Culverwell said the $1,500 had to be wiped off, and if the town did not release him, he would have to pay it out of his own pocket.—Lindsay Watchman-Warder.

THE HYDRAULIC LIFT LOCK

A Great Undertaking viewed From a National Standpoint.

When Peterborough's hydraulic lift lock was formally opened on July 9, the Peterborough Review fittingly celebrated the occasion by issuing a "lift lock edition." The Review's spirit of enterprise found a worthy theme in the wonderful lock, and the edition, with its illustrations and detailed description of the Trent Valley Canal, the lift lock and the town itself is a valuable souvenir of a memorable occasion. This lift lock was built to overcome the fall in the waters of the river Otonabee, the difference in elevation being 77 feet. The canal is now open for continuous navigation from Heeley's Falls, on the Trent river 90 beyond the shores of Balsam Lake, a distance of 126 miles, through a rich agricultural district, and, so its advocates claim, offers the shortest route from the Northwest wheat fields to Europe. Of the above difference in levels, the lift lock disposes of 65 feet, the other being overcome by a lock of ordinary type at the debouchment of the canal into the lake. The lift lock it is calculated, is equivalent to at least five ordinary locks, when the elevation to be overcome, the time in which this is to be done, and capacity for a large quantity of traffic are all considered. An enormous quantity of cement was used in the construction of the body of the lock. It would occupy too much space to give full and minute details of its operation or of the materials which entered into the construction of this gigantic work, but it may be stated that there are two steel plate chambers each of them 140 feet long by 33 feet wide, and 9 feet 10 in. deep. The guide towers measure 100 feet from their foundation, while at their base they measure 25 ft. 6 in. by 40 ft. 8 in. The breast wall is 80 ft. high, 40 ft. thick and 126 feet long at the base. The outside diameter of the cylinders is 8 ft. 3 1-2 in., diameter of ram, 7 ft. 6 in., working stroke, 65 ft. The weight of the water in each chamber is about 1500 tons. The time occupied by lockage is 12 minutes, while the actual vertical motion is accomplished in 1 1-2 min. From these few particulars may be conceived something of the nature of this great undertaking, and of the importance which may rightfully be attached to it not only with respect to Peterborough, but from a national standpoint.—Stratford Herald.

MILITIA MEN'S RIGHTS.

Do Not Forfeit Position as Citizens—An Authoritative Decision.

The Gazette is reminded by one of its readers, who commends its article on the right of militiamen to speak or write on militia questions, of the fact that this was settled many years ago when Sir Patrick Macdougal was Adjutant general of Canada. Sir Mackensie Bowell was a militia officer, an editor of a paper in Belleville, and a member of Parliament. On the platform, in his newspaper and in the House of Commons he criticised Sir Patrick's Macdougall's administration, and Sir Patrick issued very peremptory orders that the young officer must refrain from doing so. Mackenzie Bowell refused to obey, contending that he was a citizen although a militiaman, and being a citizen he had a right to criticize and express his opinions about the policy of his superiors. As a soldier as well as a citizen it was more than a right, it was his duty to expose weaknesses which the Government or the senior officer might like to hide. He agreed that his seniors would be justified in compelling him to obey any commands they might issue during actual training, or on active service, or on parade in uniform. The matter was referred to the Home Government, and they decided against the Adjutant General, who resigned his command.

It is a coincidence that many years ago Sir Patrick Macdougal came to this country and was for a time administrator of the Government, and as the administrator one of his advisers was Mackenzie Bowell.—Canadian Military Gazette.

Fibroid Tumors Cured.

A distressing case of Fibroid Tumor, which baffled the skill of Boston doctors. Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., in the following letter tells how she was cured, after everything else failed, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice—although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt.

Mrs. Hayes at her above address will gladly answer any letters which sick women may write for fuller information about her illness. Her gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so genuine and heartfelt that she thinks no trouble is too great for her to take in return for her health and happiness.

Truly is it said that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women, and no other medicine; don't forget this when some druggist wants to sell you something else.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

STONEY LAKE NOTES

What the Many Campers are doing at this Popular Resort.

Messrs. F. Oliver, "Dip" Newman, Dr. R. A. Fraser, spent Sunday at "Dulce Domum."

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Lillierap spent Sunday at their cottage at the lake.

Mr. C. J. Blomfield, Miss Bell, Miss M. McLean are at Mr. Blomfield's cottage for the month of August.

Mrs. Lillierap, sr., Miss G. Lillierap and Miss Traill will be at Mr. F. J. Lillierap's inland for the next month.

A number of narrow escapes from drowning have taken place at the lake recently. Fortunately assistance arrived at an opportune time.

The rush up the lakes has now commenced in earnest, and every cottage is occupied. The steamboats are giving splendid service, which is greatly appreciated by the cottagers and campers.

Messrs. W. Clifford and O. Cotton spent Sunday at "Star Cottage."

Miss Gertie Clifford is spending a few days at the lake this week.

Mr. C. Reynolds has opened up his cottage at "Black Rock" for the season.

Dr. Race and party, of New York, went up to "Boscobel" on Monday. Capt. Grylls commands the yacht "Estelle" as usual.

Why Not Have a Raffia Hat?

It is not such a tedious, difficult matter as most people suppose to make one of those pretty raffia hats that are so popular just now. Of course elaborate designs may be attempted, but the plain woven hat looks as pretty when worn as the more fancy ones. These woven ones may be made in a couple of evenings and are very pretty made up in the wide sailor or trio corner shape and trimmed with bands of velvet or foliage. The raffia, which comes in black, red, green, brown and natural shades, is on sale at the Review Office, which is open every evening.—2d.

PT. ARTHUR HAS NOT FALLEN

The Rumor from Wei-Hai-Wei Yesterday Unconfirmed

A GENERAL ASSAULT BEGUN

The Heaviest Bombardment of the Russian Fortress Since the Beginning of the Siege — Japs lose a Cruiser and Gunboat—Kuropatkin Not Surrounded.

Special to The Review.

TOKIO, July 30—The rumored fall of Port Arthur yesterday, from Chefoo, is officially pronounced to be untrue.

Shanghai, July 30.—A telegram received here from Wei-Hai-Wei confirms other telegrams received here yesterday from Che Foo to the effect that Port Arthur has been captured. The Wei-Hai-Wei telegram says that the British fleet, which has been cruising, will return there today.

At Wei-Hai-Wei there is a British wireless telegraph station and the British warships are equipped with this means of communication. It is possible that Wei-Hai-Wei has been in wireless communication with the fleet and that the information of the fall of Port Arthur was received in this manner.

Not Confirmed.

London, July 30.—In view of the fact that there has been no confirmation of the report of the fall of Port Arthur, and considering the probability that such important news would be likely to reach other points near the seat of war besides Shanghai, from which it would be cabled, it would be well not to attach undue importance to the Shanghai despatch.

No further news regarding the reported fall of Port Arthur or war news of any kind has reached the London morning newspapers.

Legation in Dark.

Up to midnight the Japanese Legation had received no news indicating the fall of Port Arthur.

General Assault Begun.

Che Foo, July 30.—Refugees who have just arrived from Port Arthur confirm reports that a general assault has been begun by the Japanese on that fortress. The Russians are sanguine that the Japanese could not capture the place. The Russians, according to refugees' story, are still hoping for succor from General Kuropatkin. They are unwilling to believe the reports of his defeat at Tatchekiao.

Heavy Firing Heard.

Che Foo, July 30.—A junk, containing thirty refugees from Port Arthur, who are all foreigners of the better class, arrived here last night, having left Port Arthur on Thursday. The refugees report that exceedingly heavy fighting by land and sea to the east and northeast of Port Arthur, occurred on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, and they express the belief that a general assault was begun on Thursday. They say that this bombardment was the heaviest experienced since the beginning of the siege and that the Russian forts made very little reply to the Japanese fire. These foreigners confirm previous reports of the serious condition of the Japanese fleet. Field Marshal Marquis Oyama accompanied by his staff, left Port Dalny on Tuesday. He is conducting the Japanese operations in person. The fresh meat supply in Port Arthur is exhausted. Only the troops are getting salt meat. Non-combatants are subsisting mainly on oatmeal and rice.

Firing Outside Newchwang.

Newchwang, July 30.—Heavy firing was heard outside Newchwang until 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Japs Lost Two Boats.

Che Foo, July 30.—Refugees who have arrived here from Port Arthur say that the Japanese lost a cruiser and gunboat last Thursday night, as a result of striking mines.

Russian Casualties About 2,000.

Washington, July 30.—The Japanese Minister has received the following cablegram from the Foreign Office at Tokio, dated yesterday: "General Oku reports further that according to the statements of Russian officers captured during the recent battle, Gen. Kuropatkin was present on the battlefield, and that Generals Sakaloff and Kondramovitch were wounded. Also that the Russian casualties were about 2,000. The Japanese casualties were about 1,000, and Gen. Oku reports that investigations are being made regarding the number of prisoners taken and the quantity of munitions of war, etc., captured."

St. Petersburg, July 30.—The general staff denies the report circulated in European papers of the wounding of Gen. Kuropatkin at the battle of Tatchekiao. The general, it is added, is perfectly well.

Russia's Protest to Britain.

London, July 30.—Russia has filed a formal protest at the Foreign Office against British shipments of contraband to Japan.

Report on the Arabia.

St. Petersburg, July 30.—A brief report was received by the Emperor yesterday from Vice-Admiral Skrydloff, announcing the arrival of the German steamer Arabia, captured by the Russian cruiser Grombol, July 22, at Vladivostock. The report says: "The presence on the Arabia of a cargo declared by the Imperial Government to constitute contraband compelled Admiral Jessen to send the vessel to Vladivostock, as being the nearest Russian port, in order that the matter might be examined by the local prize court."

Squadron Near Tokio.

London, July 30.—A correspondent of The Times at Tokio, cabling under date of July 30, says:

"The cruisers of the Vladivostock squadron were seen south of the Island of Idsu (at the entrance of the Bay of Tokio) this morning. It is believed that the Russian cruisers will be driven off or brought to bay in the course of a day."

Many New Postoffices.

Ottawa, July 30.—The Postoffice Department continues to expand. The list for July makes provision for the distribution of the mails to 37 new offices, scattered throughout every province, with the exception of Prince Edward Island. There are five in Ontario, viz., Jocko River, Nipissing; Grenadier Island, Leeds; Pineland, Simcoe; Brough, East Middlesex; Lothian, Huron. Improved routes for distribution have been adopted for 42 postoffices, Algoma, has been changed to Dean Lake. Only five offices have been closed, including Kilgorie, in Simcoe County, and one at Mine Centre, Algoma.

FRANCE AND HOLY SEE.

French Ministry Keeps Its Decision in the Matter Secret.

Paris, July 30.—The Council of Ministers, after sitting until 5 p.m. yesterday, discussing the Vatican situation, decided to keep its decision secret.

Premier Combes, when questioned after the Ministers had adjourned, declared that diplomatic etiquette forbade him to speak. This statement is interpreted to indicate a complete rupture of diplomatic relations with the Holy See.

The French Government's note was telegraphed last evening to M. De Courcel, the secretary in charge of the French Embassy to the Vatican, who will communicate it to the Vatican authorities to-day.

It is believed that the Embassy staff will leave Rome to-day, and that the Papal Nuncio will leave Paris.

AUTHOR McLENNAN DEAD.

Distinguished Canadian Died at Vallambrosa, Italy, at 46 Years of Age.

Montreal, July 30.—News was received by cable yesterday of the death at Vallambrosa, Italy, of William McLennan, the distinguished Canadian author. He was 46 years of age, and was the second son of the late Hugh McLennan, in his time one of Montreal's most prominent merchants. Deceased graduated from McGill in 1880, and after practising law here gave his whole attention to literature.

Mr. McLennan's best known publications included "Songs of Old Canada," translated from the French; "Montreal and Some of Its Makers," "A King for a Week," "A Gentleman of the Royal Guard," and many short stories, essays and poems.

SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1904.

ACCOMPLICES OF CRIME

The members of the Laurier Administration seem determined to try to what depths of degradation they can bring the public business of Canada. Sir Richard Cartwright in the House had the inconceivable effrontery to defend the conduct of himself and his colleagues in sending their criminal friends and agents to represent us in the Mother Country. The other Cabinet Ministers and their venal crew of followers voted with him, with an honorable exception, Mr. Erb M.P. for South Perth, in favour of this disreputable practice. Sir Richard apparently without any compunction placed himself on the same level with Jackson K.C., the suborner of perjury, by justifying his crimes and defending his appointment which sends this criminal to disgrace us in the eyes of every honest man in the United Kingdom. He impudently assumed the responsibility for this nefarious act, but he cannot thus take it all upon himself. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues by their acquiescence have made themselves equally responsible and have committed themselves to the policy that no crime, however heinous, when committed for the benefit of their party, debars the perpetrator from a high place in the public service. The similar case of Preston was also mentioned and he was therefore included in the vote endorsing such appointments. Men whose hands no honest man would touch are thus declared by the new Liberal leaders to be worthy of their friendship and fit persons to be flaunted in the eyes of the people of the United Kingdom as specimen Canadians, and these patrons and accomplices of criminals are at the same time dismissing an exceptionally valuable public servant because he resisted and exposed their corruption.

How to Keep Well

The vast efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

COL. GREGORY'S ANSWER

Says Sir F. Bordens Charge Made in House is Ridiculous.

Lieut.-Col. R. W. Gregory was seen by the News to-day in reference to the debate on his case in the Commons yesterday. The Colonel is not inclined to talk much about any phase of the case, but feels that he is in the right and that the public is of that opinion and would be more convinced if they had an as intimate knowledge of the facts as he himself.

"What about the Minister's assertion that he does not believe your statement that you had an interview with the G.O.C., and had an assurance that your command would be extended?" he was asked.

"I have no remarks to make on that statement of Sir Frederick's," he said. "My statement of the facts of my case was absolutely true in every particular, and I stand by it."

"The Minister also accuses you of playing a game to keep in the command by having a second who could not succeed you," remarked the reporter.

"Such a statement is perfectly ridiculous," replied the Colonel quietly. "I never sought an extension of my command of the Second Dragoons, but I was several times urged to remain after my time expired. I replied that I had no desire to have an extension, but that if one was made, I wanted it to be for five years. I had heard nothing when the time for camp drew near, and I wrote to Col. Otter, saying that if I was to retire I wanted to know it and if it was to get an extension I wanted to know. But I was so far from desiring an extension and working for it, that I was not decided when camp time came whether I would accept or not, for the position was making serious inroads on my business. When I got word I had been granted an extension for one year I promptly resigned."

"What about the appointment of Major Glasgow?"

"I refused to recommend his appointment when Col. Otter asked me. He subsequently told me that if I recommended Major Glasgow as second in command I would get an additional year's extension. I refused to be made a political catspaw of. I have said nothing and written nothing in this matter which I do not think was justified, and my right, and I stand by everything I have done, said or written. The facts show clearly that I was not trying to hang on to my command but that I had been urged to hold it for a time."—Toronto News.

Turn Time Backward. Be Young Again.

At last there is hope for the army of young, old middle-aged men who suffer any nervous debilitation, under the impression that they themselves lacking in virile power. How many of you are now reading this because of your frailty? At last you are face to face with the possibility that nature cannot be forced to do her work. Call it what you will, whether through ignorance or otherwise but the penalty almost always comes with the amount of abuse mentioned. Do not, however, lose hope, as there is a cure, thanks to Dr. Goldberg, the noted specialist, who can give you what is rightfully yours, perfect manhood. If you are not what you should be; if you have shrinkage, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotency, rheumatism, kidney or bladder trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc., write at once to Dr. Goldberg, and he will send you his method of curing these diseases free of charge.

The doctor has received fourteen diplomas, certificates and licenses from colleges and state boards of medical examiners, which should convince you as to his standing and abilities.

His acceptance of a case for treatment is equivalent to a cure, as he never accepts an incurable case for treatment, and should you decide to doctor with him you may

Pay When You Are Cured.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It is to your interest, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor at once and confidentially lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as an booklet on the subject, containing the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him Dr. S. Goldberg, 230 Woodward Ave., Room 179 Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you, free, in a plain, sealed package.

DUNDONALD'S SERVICE

He Exposed the Use of Partisan influence in Military Appointments.

Lord Dundonald has given a denial to the rumor that he intends returning to Canada for the purpose of taking an active part in Canadian politics. He will not return. We believe that decision will be learned with satisfaction by the majority of sensible Canadians. By his vigorous protest against the introduction of party politics into the militia Lord Dundonald has done a public service; he has directed public attention to certain sources of weakness in the militia system, and for this he deserves the gratitude of the Canadian people. If he were to come back and mix in our party politics, his advice and warnings would be no more heeded than are the utterances of other party politicians, and his political career (even if it were not suddenly cut short at the polls) would be full of bitterness and disappointments, and would be likely to do more harm than good. His resolve to stay away is a wise one.

Government organs continue to harp on Dundonald's offence and deserved dismissal, as if that were the whole matter. The fact is that his indiscreet public protest while he was in office, and his dismissal from office as punishment for his offence, are not important phases of the "Dundonald incident." The important question is whether there is just grounds for Dundonald's protests and warnings. With regard to partisan influence in militia appointments there certainly is ground for his indignant protest. The facts revealed in the debate in parliament yesterday on the subject of promotions in the Second St. Catharines Dragoons are sufficient to show that. That partisan pressure was exercised to secure the promotion of an unqualified officer in that corps seems certain. Such intriguing has been made more odious in the eyes of Canadians by Dundonald's protest.—Hamilton Herald, Indep.

DIZZY SPELLS AND DYSPEPSIA

Soon Disappeared When the Nervous System Was Set Right by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. M. A. Sharp, 246 Dublin-st., Peterborough, Ont., states: "For some years I was troubled with indigestion, which developed into nervous dyspepsia, and besides suffering from nervousness, strange dizzy spells would come over me. Hearing of the good results obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I decided to try it. After a pretty thorough test of this medicine I can say that I never used anything that did me so much good. It seemed to be the very treatment that I needed, and as a result of the use I am quite restored to health."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

A New County Map.

The Review has issued, for general distribution, a new edition of its well known map of the County of Peterborough. The map has been re-drawn and brought up to date and is the most accurate map existing of the county. It is of convenient size and yet legible and handy for reference. Copies may be had by calling at the Review Stationery Store, or will be sent by mail on receipt of 5 cents in stamps to cover postage.

SUMMER COW FEEDING.

The Profit to be Made From Expenditure in This Line.

To make cows profitable they must have an abundance of good milk producing food the whole year round—both winter and summer, said Mr. C. P. Goodrich, before a Wisconsin farmers' institute.

There has never yet been a summer in Wisconsin where pasture alone would supply a sufficient amount of such food all the time. If the pasture is large in proportion to the number of cows, then the grass, during the rapid growing season in the fore part of the summer, grows much faster than the cows can eat it. This excess of grass soon ripens and dries up, becoming innutritious and unpalatable, so that cows will not eat it. Then when the heat and drought of midsummer and autumn comes fresh grass grows so slowly that cows cannot get enough without working too hard for it, and to do well they must then be fed something else. This is not an economical way of doing, for there is a large amount of good feed wasted, and one cannot afford that, especially where land is as valuable as it is in most parts of Wisconsin.

A better way to do is to have the number of cows proportioned to the pasture, so that they will keep the grass fairly well fed off during the most growing season, and supplement the pasture with a succession of green forage crops. First may be rye, (which, by the way, should be fed rather sparingly, for green rye, if it is the exclusive feed, will likely impart a disagreeable flavour to the milk) then follow in their order, first crop of clover, green oats and peas, second crop of clover, early fodder corn, latter fodder corn, ever green sweet corn and sorghum.

It is not necessary that these supplementary crops should be fed perfectly green, making it necessary to cut it each day as it is fed. In fact I think it is even better that they be wilted or partially cured, so that enough can be cut at one time and somewhat dried to last several days. If there should be more of these supplementary crops than are needed to feed during the summer they can be cut when at the right stage and made into hay or cured.

I have found that it is a good way to feed some dry forage in connection with succulent pasture grass or any other succulent food. For more than twenty-five years the cows on my farm have been fed every day during the summer nice early cut hay, usually clover hay. It is put in their mangers every time they are put in the stable to be milked, and they always eat some with great relish, no matter how good the grass may be in the pasture. I am sure it is good for them or they would not eat it. It checks the tendency to scouring, which is common when their feed is nothing but the green rapid growing watery grass of spring. It also makes them proof against any trouble from bloat when their pasture is young clover.

Many years ago I tried feeding a small amount of grain food to cows while they were on pasture, and I was so well satisfied with it that the cows on my farm which were giving a good flow of milk have ever since been fed a grain ration equal to about one-half of the usual winter ration, consisting usually of equal parts of ground oats and corn and bran. I found that, although it might not always immediately increase the milk flow sufficient to pay for the extra feed, yet with cows of a strictly dairy type, which were almost sure to milk down pretty thin and poor on grass alone, it would enable them to keep up their strength and condition, so that they did much better in the fall and following winter for having been fed grain while on pasture. I think they also did better the next summer, because they were in better condition.

(Whether it will pay a man now with the high price of grain to feed it in summer depends on the type of cows and the ability and skill of the owner as a dairyman. If the cows are not of strictly dairy type and the man who handles them is not a first class dairyman it will not in my opinion, pay to feed grain on good pasture.

I have known of some men, who have been very successful in dairying who did not pasture at all, but fed their cows all summer in the stables on green forage crops, with some grain, letting them have the run of a small field for exercise, with a grove where they could lie in the shade and take comfort. In this way many more cows could be kept on a given number of acres and the income of the farm greatly increased. Of course it took more work, but these men say that they cannot afford to pasture good tillable land worth from eighty to a hundred dollars an acre.

Now, I will tell you how I think is the cheapest, easiest and best way to provide summer feed for cows. It is to have a good silo and put up corn silage. If you have good pasture this silo needs to be only about one-half as large as the one which holds the winter silage. It should be smaller in diameter, but just as deep, so that enough can be fed from the top each day to keep the silage from being damaged by exposure to the air. In this way you can have the best of feed to tide over a time of drought and short pasture. It will be always ready and in the most convenient form possible to feed. The cows will eat the silage with great relish every day, no matter how good the pasture is, though they will not eat as much as in winter, when on otherwise dry feed.

I know personally several men who practise this way and feed silage every day in the year, and I need not tell you they are very successful men. I know a few man who feed silage the year round who do not have any land in pasture. I have in mind one now who has a small farm and keeps as many head of cattle as he has acres of land. He has nearly one third of his land in alfalfa and the balance, outside of that occupied by buildings and yards, is used for growing oats and corn. He has the material for a good, well balanced, succulent ration the year round and his cows produce splendidly. Practically one acre feeds a cow. If he needs to buy a little concentrated feed the pork made from the skim milk is ample for that purpose.

Need I tell you that this man is getting for his labor and his feed a very high price indeed. They who do as he does are getting many times as much as some men who work harder than they do, just because they use intelligence, judgment and skill in summer cow feeding, as well as in winter cow feeding, and in selection, breeding and care of cows.

CANADA'S DEFENCES

British Fleet at Sea, Uncle Sam and Monroe Doctrine on Shore.

The Globe has announced its defence policy. For land defence we will depend upon the kindness of our good neighbor, Uncle Sam. For maritime defence we already shelter behind the skirts of Great Britain. This is definite, and, of course, carries with it a high spirit and self-respect eminently suited to young Canada. Certain aspects of the policy, however, are puzzling. The Globe is perfectly ready to spend $2,000,000 a year on the militia, but no more. Our former military expert, according to the Globe, has assured us that if we spend $4,000,000 a year we will be in a position to take care of ourselves. Our present expenditure of $2,000,000 a year, he adds, has left us defenceless. The Globe favors both the spending of the present sum, and reliance upon the Munroe Doctrine. In other words, dependence upon the United States is to be preferred to the spending of an extra two millions. But why spend the two millions we are now casting into the vortex of militarism? Better save them, add them to our surplus and make a thorough job of our trust in Uncle Sam's protection. U—Toronto News.

CURE THE MOST EXTREME CASES

Stone in the Kidneys Cannot Stand Before Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. S.A. Cassidy, of Ottawa, Permanently Cured After Years of Suffering by the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Ottawa, Ont., July 29 — Special—While all Canada knows that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the standard remedy for all Kidney Complaints it may surprise some people to know that they cure such extreme cases as Stone in the Kidneys. Yet that is what they have done right here in Ottawa.

Mr. S. A. Cassidy, the man cured, is the well known proprietor of the Bijou Hotel on Metcalf street, and in an interview he says:

"My friends all know that I have been a martyr to Stone in the Kidneys for years. They know that besides consulting the best doctors in the city and trying every medicine I could think of I was unable to get better.

"Some time ago a friend told me Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. As a last resort I tried them and they have cured me.

"I could not imagine more severe suffering than one endures who has Stone in the Kidneys and I feel the greatest gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

If the disease is of the kidneys or from the Kidneys Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

Dainty Creations in Smart and Fashionable Costumes of Light Materials for Women who like Dress Fitness

In Woman's Realm
Shades and Fabrics

Embroidered Cotton and Linen Goods are Predominant this Season, and are Very Becoming in Appearance

THE LATEST MODES.

Spots In All Materials Are Smart. Wash Dresses Are Elaborate.

Spots are excessively popular, and spotted fabrics are shown in every color.

All washable materials are made up very elaborately this season. The short round length of skirt is now universal. This is only short in the sense that it has no train, for it is cut so as to barely escape the ground all around. Fullness is seen at the waist line, both back and front of the blouse and of the skirt.

BLACK CHANTILLY HAT.

The general effect is ample and puffed out to give a plump effect to the figure.

Besides shirrings, broad flat tucks are equally popular as a trimming. These are folded and stitched on separately, and they are used both to trim waists and skirts.

Deep cape collars with stole fronts are sold to wear with cotton gowns, and the economical girl can make one of these go with several dresses. Pongee comes in a heavier weave suitable for blouse suits. It also comes dyed in a variety of new tones, among which are bright red and a beautiful shade of pink.

It is hardly possible to make sleeves too wide or to fill them in with too many frills of lace or lingerie plaiting. Sleeve puffs are gradually creeping upward, so that fashion designers are predicting the full sleeve puffs of several seasons ago.

For young children the long waisted, short skirted effect still prevails, and the lower edges of the full skirts are tucked and elaborated after the fashion of those of older people.

The illustration shows a hat of black chantilly trimmed with roses, and a fancy stole of black chiffon, also trimmed with roses. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Condensed Sentiment.

The English custom of abbreviating familiar phrases by using the initial letter of each word is one of the first to arouse the interest and occasionally the amusement of Americans.

"R. I. P.," signifying "Rest in peace," is frequently inscribed on monuments, and recently on a very old stone a tourist discovered an epitaph which read something like this:

Here lieth my beloved wife,
ELIZABETH ANNE,
Born —— Died ——
Let her R I P.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE OLD FOLKS

Mr. Angus McMillan Tells Them Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Cure Their Stomach Troubles.

Of peculiar interest to the aged is the story of Mr. Angus McMillan, of Laggan, P.O., Glengarry Co., Ont. Mr. McMillan is now over 82 years of age, and looks hearty enough to reach the 100 mark. He attributes a large part of his splendid health to Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. He says:—

"I suffered from Dyspepsia for more than 30 years, but never met with anything to cure me until I commenced taking Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. After using them for two days all the pain and restlessness left me.

"I am in one sense a new man and have great reason to be thankful for all the good Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets have done me."

Stomach troubles are one of the burdens the old folks have to bear. It is good news for them that there is a speedy and effectual cure for them in Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

A YACHTING SUIT.

A Smart and Fashionable Costume of Much Utility.

This yachting suit, illustrated by Vogue, will be a very useful one on many other occasions of the summer. It is of gray linen piped with pale green. The skirt has a narrow graduated panel front, with circular sides tucked on hips and in three deep tucks above the graduated circular flounce, which is similarly tucked at the hem. The sides extend to the hem in panel straps trimmed with wheels of pale green linen soutache set on edge.

GRAY LINEN YACHTING GOWN.

Green linen pipes each tuck edge and the panels. The waist is entirely in deep, piped edged tucks below the yoke which extends in squares over the tops of the sleeves, which also have a group of tucks at the hem and a deep tucked cuff on the undersleeve to match the collar. A crush girdle of green leather is worn. A straw bow and gilt buckle trim the gray straw hat.

THE LATEST FROM PARIS.

Embroidered Cottons and Linens the Rage—Novelties In Laces.

Embroidered cotton and linen goods promise to be all the rage for warm weather wear. The less transparent muslins are also delightful for afternoon wear, specially in white. These dresses are trimmed with embroidery and valenciennes insertion. Batiste in light tan shade is very pretty embroidered in white.

Valenciennes lace is used on the thin muslins. The other dress materials, even the veilings, are trimmed this season with quite heavy laces and embroideries. Detachable medallions play also quite an important part among the season's trimmings, and scallops and detachable figures ornament the edges of the full sleeves.

Embroidered and dyed laces are among the novelties, and a palm leaf design seen recently was enriched by pink roses embroidered in the center of each of the large leaves. This was to be used to trim a pink veiling gown. The long shouldered effect is in evidence more than ever, and the linings of transparent yokes are cut out off the shoulder instead of round, as formerly, in order to give this wide sloping effect.

Collarless waists are not to be worn as much as formerly, although a few are seen.

Among the season's novelties are suede buttons overlaid with metal, the color of the suede harmonizing with the shade of the gown. Perfectly exquisite are those of orange suede with a design in steel. Suede buttons with just a rim of metal will also be much in evidence.

The picture shows an ecru straw hat faced with pink tulle. It is trimmed with a ruching and an ostrich feather.

UP TO DATE GOWNS.

White Costumes of Supple Materials, Fashionable Nile Green.

Many of the most beautiful gowns of today are of supple white silk or crepe de chine. Some of the new white taffetas are as supple as any silks, and they have a delicate luster which is most becoming.

There is a perfect furore for old rose and many odd shades of rather vivid blue. These are trimmed with embroideries dyed to match.

Nile green is an ultra fashionable shade, and it is very beautiful for an evening gown in a combination of satin, chiffon and velvet mingled with old lace.

SHIRT WAIST SUIT.

Parisians just now are very fond of different shades of orange mingled in one frock. If these are softened with deep yellowish lace the effect is particularly good. Shirrings of taffeta intermingled with yellow valenciennes are a very smart and pretty trimming. It is these dainty finishing touches which make a gown a success.

Manufacturers are earning the gratitude of women with small dress allowances by sending out really artistic and at the same time cheap materials in blue, ecru and white.

The cut shows a shirt waist suit shirred on the shoulders. It has a lace yoke and cuffs and is trimmed with a piping of narrow satin of a deeper shade. JUDIC CHOLLET.

DRESS FITNESS.

A Potent Factor In Making the Well Gowned Woman.

The definition of a uniformly well gowned woman is she who dresses with a strict regard to appropriateness—in other words, one who adapts her mode of attire to the character and form of each and every occasion. In this simple conformity the keynote and secret of the art of dressing is sounded and revealed. Appropriateness, with a large, a very large, capital, should be the guiding motto of every woman's dress inclinations. Along with the aptitude for designing, planning and even creating, there should be assiduously cultivated by every woman a taste for the fitness of attire. This with practice may be acquired and will serve as a more valuable gift than all the other lore relating to this distinctively feminine branch of science.

The woman who is fortunate in the possession of this valued trait and its evincement is often credited with being better attired than she is in reality, for her appearance at any time and upon all occasions is characterized by a distinctive and appropriate individuality, which bears an impress of refined taste and singles her out of a group of gayly, ill appropriately attired women as the best gowned among them. A simple though significant rule, which, if regarded, would assist in accomplishing more than even rigid observance to the powerful factors of "style" and "detail," is to dress with unfaltering regard to the time, place and character and form of the occasion, and never for an instant swerve from this path of dress fitness, for it is a far more potent feature than is ever considered in the determining of a well gowned woman.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Attractive Modern Kitchen.

Sightliness is no longer considered an unimportant factor in kitchen furnishings, as the displays at house furnishing stores testify. Everything is made as attractive as use warrants. Cleanliness is more easily obtained in the modern kitchen than in the old time one, because metal, enamel and earthen wares have taken the place so largely of wood and iron. Dark, unsavory corners and nooks are no longer possible in the up to date kitchen.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Dainty Fronts For Linen Costumes. The New Summer Shirt Waists.

The new fronts to wear with the tailor made linen costumes are models of smartness. They are made of lace ruffings, of pale blue or pink muslin trimmed with ruffings of narrow valenciennes, or of dotted mull. They have plain foundation sleeves reaching to the elbow, but from there down the sleeve is composed of a multiplicity of ruffings which show below the short bolero sleeves of the linen coat.

Very attractive shirt waists are of the lingerie order. Coarse linen ones look well with frocks of the more severe description, and these are enriched with French knots and heavy embroidery done in white or pale blue linen thread.

VEILING SUIT.

For warm weather nothing, however, can be prettier than the blouse of fine Persian lawn trimmed with flower application done in lace, combined with handwork embroidery.

A smart taffeta frock in an odd shade of green seen recently had a very full skirt eased in at the waist. The bolero was quite full and was trimmed with tiny suede buttons and gray cording of the same shade.

Crepe marquise is a pretty new summer fabric that may be washed. It has a background of monotones with embroidered dots. Crepe armadine is similar to crepe marquise, having, however, silk stripes instead of dots. Very lovely, too, is the new cotton material, crepe princesse. Pompadour crape is a new dress material combining the softness of crape with the luster of silk and printed in Pompadour designs.

The cut shows a veiling suit trimmed with guipure lace and made up over lustrous white silk.

TALK TO YOURSELF.

Why are there so many "don't feel well" moments? What is the cause of these aches and pains? Can I banish them?

When you don't feel well your stomach is not well. That is when the ills of the body commence, and they will never end until the stomach is made right. When the stomach is wrong the whole body is liable to go wrong—Poisonous formations are thrown into the circulation in too great a quantity for the other organs to resist—Nerve tissue poisoned—Sleepless, excitable, nervous, heart irregular, headache, kidneys overtaxed, backache, kidney pains, liver clogged, constipation and bowel trouble. You can end these afflictions by keeping the stomach with ANTI-KILL. It is just what a deranged stomach needs. You can prove it yourself by addressing Wilson-Pyle Co., Niagara Falls, Ont., for a free box of pills. Regular size 25 cents (a certain treatment).

Coats of Taffeta In Light Shades. Tailor Modes of Linen.

Paquin is making some pretty coats of taffeta in every dainty shade. They are ruched and befringed with a thousand minute details.

Tailor mades of linen or pongee are being made for well known society women. They are relieved with embroideries and touches of vivid green or scarlet.

THE COOKBOOK.

Salt in the oven under baking tins will prevent pastry scorching on the bottom.

If it is desired to keep cakes moist put them in a stone jar. If crisp cakes are preferred use tin as a receptacle.

When weighing molasses sprinkle the scale well with flour, and then it will slip off again quite easily without sticking.

In washing woollens and flannels, Ivory Soap (a powder) will be found very satisfactory.

Those Pretty Raffia Hats.

Why don't you make a raffia hat to replace the one that was spoiled on the day of the opening of the lift lock? They are easily and quickly made, and are light and durable. The most popular colors are black, brown, red and the natural shade—a light champagne color. Directions for making these pretty hats may be found in the July Delineator, and the raffia is on sale at the Review office, the only place in town where it may be procured. 2d

SEVER THEIR CONNECTION

LAST PRACTICE OF THE GEORGE-ST. CHOIR UNDER OLD MANAGEMENT.

Choir Members Presented Mrs. Mowat and Mr. Mulligan with Addresses — Pleasant Evening Spent.

On Thursday evening after the regular practice of the George street church choir, Mr. Mulligan briefly addressed them, expressing his regret that he had found it necessary to sever his connection with the choir in the capacity of leader. He had thoroughly enjoyed the two years and a half that they had spent together, and hoped that the members of the choir would be as faithful to their new leader as they had been to him. He paid a high tribute to the ability of Mrs. Mowat, and remarked that it was to a great extent due to her efforts that the choir had progressed so satisfactorily, and the harmonious relations between the choir and the management was materially contributed to by her.

At this juncture in the proceedings, Mr. W. Hill was asked by the choir to take the chair, and the gathering was enlarged by the arrival of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Crothers, and a number of others. In assuming charge of the meeting, Mr. Hill called upon Miss Detcher to read the following address:—

To Mrs. Mowat, organist, and Mr. G. W. Mulligan, choir master, of the George street choir:—

Dear Friends,—We are sure that words of ours are not necessary to-night, to express to you the regret which each of us feels that this will be the last time that we will gather in our present relationship as members of the choir and leader. It is also superfluous for us to refer to the fact that during the years in which you have been associated with the choir in your present respective capacities, the utmost harmony has prevailed in our ranks, and the fact that a severance of these relationships is about to take place, is a matter of the most sincere regret to those who have during the past years so thoroughly enjoyed the association, which we are now called upon to end.

The circumstances which rendered such a course necessary are deeply deplored by us, and particularly so, since in the case of Mrs. Mowat it means that she will no longer be associated with the choir. We cannot refrain from expressing our conviction that the harmonious and pleasant period of the last few years in our history has been in a more than ordinarily large degree contributed to by the constant, cheerful and willing services rendered by Mrs. Mowat, and we gladly pay this tribute to her worth.

We are pleased that while Mr. Mulligan will no longer occupy the position in the filling of which we have learned to experience such a regard for him, he will still be one of us, and we assure both that the memory of the past two years will always be cherished by us, and we also express the hope that to you too, the relationship about to close will be remembered as a pleasant one.

Signed on behalf of George street Choir.

MAUD DETCHER,
Secretary.
JAS. EDGCUMBE,
Treasurer.

Miss Bertha Parnell presented Mrs. Mowat with a handsome bouquet of flowers.

Mrs. Mowat replied briefly, but feelingly to the address, saying that she appreciated very highly the kindness of the choir as shown by the address, and would always remember with feelings of pleasure the two years and a half which she had spent in association with the members.

Mr. Mulligan again spoke for a few minutes, thanking the members, and expressing the hope that in the future, as in the past, the choir would sing music adapted to the worship of God.

This was followed by a solo, "Sing Me to Sleep," rendered very effectively by Miss Bessie Sperry, and a few appropriate words by Mr. R. J. Chowen, who is the oldest member of the choir, having been connected with it for twenty years. He remarked that he had seen many changes in the choir in that time, but none had caused him as much regret as the present one. He was very sorry that the present happy combination was to be broken up, and also paid a high tribute to the efficient work of Mr. Mulligan, as leader, and Mrs. Mowat as organist.

Mr. Jack Bowes then favored the company with a solo, "Under Southern Skies," and Mr. Edgcumbe, the choir treasurer, and affectionately called by the members, "The Father," added his words of appreciation of the services of the leaders who were about to sever their connection with the choir. He remarked that he thought Mr. Mulligan owed the choir an apology for ending the combination which had been so successful.

A solo "Barcorolle," by Miss Bertha Parnell, was rendered very sweetly, after which a number of others, including Messrs. C. Moore, M. J. Hutchinson, and Rev. Dr. Crothers, spoke briefly.

Refreshments served by the ladies brought the evening to a close.

Tomorrow will be the last day that the present leader and organist will officiate in the choir.

The period during which they held office has been a very successful one to the choir, every member of which regrets that they are leaving.

THE VISITORS TO-MORROW

WILL ARRIVE ABOUT FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING BY C.P.R.

Church parade at 10.15 to St. John's and St. Peter's — Sacred Concert at 3 o'clock—Programme on Monday.

The Murray st. grounds look very warlike this afternoon, with the tents pitched in military style, in readiness for the Ottawa Foot Guards who will arrive early to-morrow morning. The advance guard arrived this morning and proceeded at once to pitch their camp. The grounds are very suitable and convenient, as the members of the Guards are taking their meals at the different hotels. The visitors will arrive about 5 a.m., and the 57th will meet them at the station and escort them to the grounds. At 10.15 the two regiments will form up on Central Park and proceed to St. John's church and St. Peter's Cathedral, where services will be held. The route of the march will be down George st. to Charlotte st., where the two parties will separate, the Roman Catholics proceeding west on Charlotte to Reid st., and the remainder east on Carlotte st. and up Water st. to Hunter st., thence east to the church. After the services they will meet again at the corner of Hunter and George sts., and parade back to the Central Park for dismissal.

The sacred concert in Victoria Park to-morrow afternoon by the band of the Foot Guards promises to be very delightful and will be greatly appreciated by the citizens of the town.

On Monday morning the Str. City of Peterborough will be at the disposal of the visitors and trips will be made from Wolfe st. wharf, beginning at nine o'clock, to the lift lock and return. In the afternoon the visiting officers and the officers of the 57th will enjoy a trip over the lift lock and up the canal, having tea at the golf links at 4o'clock. The non-commissioned officers of both regiments will take a trip down the river per Str. Sovereign, and be entertained at the Y.M.C.A. rooms during the day. In the evening the visiting officers will be tendered a banquet at the mess rooms by the local officers, the regiment leaving about 9 o'clock for their return to Ottawa.

T.A.S. WON AGAIN

Defeated Millbrook Yesterday by the Score of 3—2.

Well, we guess it's up to the Trent Valley League executive to send the trophy to the local lacrosse team, the T.A.S., as they look very much like the winners. The team has not lost a game this season, defeating Hastings twice, Millbrook twice and Port Hope once. Yesterday they travelled to Millbrook and played with the home team, defeating them by the score of 3-2, and after they meet Port Hope next Saturday they will likely meet Havelock in the finals. The Port Hopers have strengthened up considerably since the last game and no doubt will give the locals a hustle, but they can go some too, as they have evidenced in their games already. The game yesterday was a fine exhibition and the visitors were used right royally by the Millbrook team. Following were the players who went down—Boyle, Darcucher, W. Donovan, Meagher, Crowley, Graham, Parnell, F. McCoy, Judd, L. McCoy, Connors and Mahoney. The Millbrook team were—Richards, Strain, Irwin, Reynolds, Armstrong, Forsyth, Fisher, Donnelly, Grandy, Coom, Russell and O'Brien.

CONTRIBUTED TO MUSEUM

Photograph of Isabella Valancy Crawford Presented by Miss Grundy.

The following letter has been received by Lt.-Col. H. C. Rogers, from Miss Mary Grundy, and explains itself:—

Peterborough, July 10, '04

Lt.-Col. H. C. Rogers, President of the Peterborough Historical Society:

Dear Sir,—Will you please accept for the Historical Museum in Peterborough, the accompanying photograph of Isabella Valancy Crawford, and autographed volume of her poems. It was my good fortune to have the distinguished poetess as an intimate friend, and it is a pleasure to me to make this presentation, in remembrance of a warm and true friendship, and of a Peterborough citizen of the past, whose genius has brought distinction to the town where she resided for years, and which is honored by possessing her remains.

Yours truly,
MARY GRUNDY.

Here's What There's for You

It is considered the finest trip of the Civic Holiday, is that of the Forester's excursion to Toronto and Niagara Falls. You go by special G.T.R. train, and Palace steamer, from Toronto across the lake. Every one should see Niagara Falls. From Peterborough the return fare is only $2.20 to Niagara Falls, and to Toronto and return, $2.05. To give all particulars, the following is printed, and it is a good plan to cut it out and paste it in your hat.

All tickets valid going only on special train and steamer, leaving Toronto at 11 a.m., August 18th.

Train arrives in Toronto at 9.30 a.m., and stops at Yonge street wharf for boat passengers.

Steamer leaves Yonge street wharf, Toronto, for Queenston at 11 a.m.

Electric cars to Ningara Falls leave Queenston on arrival of steamer from Toronto.

Toronto tickets good for two days from Peterborough to Lindsay inclusive, to return by any regular train up to and including August 19th, from Uxbridge to Markham inclusive, Toronto tickets good for day only.

Niagara Falls tickets good for three days from Peterborough to Lindsay inclusive, to return by any regular train up to and including August 20th. From Uxbridge to Markham inclusive, Niagara Falls tickets good for two days, returning by any regular train up to and including August 19th.

Tickets for sale at all stations named, and at Peterborough from W. Bunton, the up-town G.T.R. Ticket Office, and from members of the Committee.

Members of the Order will be on the train and the boat to look after the interest of excursionists.

TRENT CANAL OF NATIONAL VALUE

MR. F. D. KERR, OF TOWN, INTERVIEWED AT ST. THOMAS.

Explains Object of the Canal and the Lift-lock—Also Speaks of Other Features of Peterboro.

The following is clipped from the St Thomas Journal:—

"The Trent canal is destined to be one of Canada's greatest commercial highways." This opinion was expressed today by Mr. F. D. Kerr, barrister, of Peterborough, who is at present visiting in S. Thomas. In an interview granted to our representative, Mr. Kerr pointed out that the completion of this canal immediately is absolutely necessary, not only as an outlet for Canadian grain, but also to prevent the Canadian trade of the Great Lakes being diverted to United States ports. The canal or waterway runs from Midland to Trenton, for a distance of 203 miles, and already 160 miles are navigable and 3 miles of actual canal and 14 miles of canalized river work will complete the whole route. The waterway is really a chain of deep lakes and rivers connected by short stretches of actual canal, and lies on the shortest route from Georgian Bay to Montreal. The amount required to complete the work is only $5,000,000, which, after all is a very small sum when compared with $101,000,000 about to be spent on the Erie and $85,000,000 estimated for the Ottawa canal. Four and one-half millions have already been expended, but as the canal is corked, so to speak, at both ends, the expenditure so far is useless until outlets to Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario are made.

Mr. Kerr pointed out that the enlarged Erie, like the Trent, is a barge not a ship canal, and reminded our representative that the New York State committee of experts reported against a ship canal and in favor of a barge canal. He pointed out that the canal was being built to have a depth of 8 feet 4 inches, allowing plenty of room for 800-ton barges with a carrying capacity of 25,000 bushels. These barges will proceed in tows of four or five, conveyed by a steam barge, and one tow will easily carry 125,000 bushels, equal to 120 loaded freight cars, or five trains with 24 cars in each train. The Trent route is over 700 miles shorter to Liverpool, counting the return trip, than via the Welland and 1,500 miles shorter than the Erie canal route.

Mr. Kerr made it very clear that the Americans, even after an expenditure of $101,000,000 on the Erie, would have a much inferior route to the Trent, as the Erie would only have 1,000-ton barges, and a depth of 10 feet, as compared with 800-ton barges and 8 feet 4 inches depth on the Trent. This slight disparity, however, the Trent was more than compensated for by the fact that a return trip on the Trent could be made in shorter time than a single trip on the Erie, owing to the shorter distance and the fact that the Trent, being nearly all natural water, the tow of barges could steam at full speed.

Mr. Kerr emphatically remarked: "Yes, the Trent is the shortest and most direct route to the Canadian seaports. It is the most inexpensive route of any proposed, and is so near completion that no obstacle should be placed in the way of its immediate completion. It is land-locked and absolutely safe from storms from Georgian Bay to Montreal, and its great feature is that it is essentially a national Canadian route, for grain once placed on the barges at Midland will sail entirely in Canadian waters until the great Canadian seaport of Montreal is reached."

"What about the lift lock at Peterborough?" our reporter asked.

In reply to this query, Mr. Kerr stated that this great work was worth a visit from every Canadian. Lying within the corporation limits of Peterborough, and about three-quarters of a mile from the heart of the town was this great engineering achievement. The lift (or elevator) into which the steamers or barges sail, raises or lowers the boats a height of 65 feet with perfect ease and without the slightest jar. The Cabinet Ministers and Members of Parliament, who were present at the opening, and who had the privilege of being in the first passenger boat to make use of the lift, were enthusiastic in its praises. It is not only the only lift lock on the American continent, but it is the largest in the world.

"Is Peterborough growing?"

"Most certainly. Peterborough is advancing with great rapidity. It is increasing in population daily, and progress in every avenue of trade is quite marked. It is now one of the commercial and manufacturing centres of the Midland district and will become a large city in the near future."

A Scientific Experiment

By Robert C. V. Meyers

Copyright, 1904, by Robert C. V. Meyers

MRS. VAN STYLERT heard her secretary's foot on the stairs. "I must keep it up," she said. "It is a duty I owe her. I went to school with her mother."

That day she was specially hard with the young lady, who for nearly three months now had been coming an hour each afternoon to write little notes and cast up troublesome accounts, an office which she also undertook for several of Mrs. Van Stylert's most intimate friends.

It was on that same day that Mrs. Van Stylert, noticing the neatness of the girl's prim collar and cuffs, accused her of being cut out for an old maid. The secretary smiled, as cheerfully admitting the impeachment. Also that afternoon Tom Harroway stopped for 5 o'clock tea, as had been the case many days of late. As he sipped the cup that cheers, but not inebriates, his hostess expanded upon the charms of Charlotte Templeton.

Harroway put his cup down laughingly.

"You know enthusiasm has gone out," he said.

"Along with a good many other honest things," she grumbled, "girlishness and all that sort of thing. Everybody is too sophisticated nowadays; prettiness is swamped by so called artistic ideas, and so on. Look at this room. Everything is pink that can be made pink, and furbelowed and flouncy—not a bit artistic. The low tones in the furnishings of some of my friends give me the blues for a week after I have encountered them. I like brightness. I never will believe in hiding light under a bushel of dingy rugs and draperies which began their existence in wretched oriental huts, half dwellings and half camel stables."

"Yes," he laughed, "I have a rug that was a prayer carpet, covered all over with Syrian remarks in worsted that I am positive are wriggling expostulations against the dull reds and blues. It is delicious."

"And look how young women dress," she went on, ignoring him. "That is, young women with ideas. For instance, Miss Sefton. Pardon the personality, Amy, but you are such an example. You come here day after day looking like a masculine nun in your severe tailor made black frock. I like fluffiness in the street in daytime as well as under the awful electrics of ballrooms at night. Electric light! No complexion will stand it, and yet girls today brave it as though they intend some time to become unChristian martyrs."

The ormolu clock on the lace draped mantelpiece struck 5. The secretary closed her desk.

"There's another thing," Mrs. Van Stylert continued. "You engage a person for an hour's work. On the stroke of that hour the person vanishes—no interest in the work, no appreciative gratitude."

The secretary's face flushed.

"Good evening!" she said, moving toward the door.

"Tomorrow afternoon," her employer said crisply, "at 4, sharp."

The girl left the room.

"Don't you think," Harroway remarked, "you are a trifle—ah—severe with the lady, Mrs. Van S.?"

"I am sick of the status of employed people," retorted Mrs. Van Stylert. "Everything nowadays is 'respect for labor,' none for those who employ it. No, Miss Sefton is alone in the world. She has imbibed too many lofty notions. I am treating her as my mother might have treated a secretary, if secretaries had been a part of my mother's miseries."

He shrugged his shoulders.

"I know," she said, "you do not admire her"—

"Rather say," he interposed, "I have scarcely noticed her till the last month or so."

"When my 'severity,' as you call it, attracted your attention to her," she responded. "And she admitted only yesterday that she had not noticed you either."

He gave her a quick look.

"Oh, yes," she pursued; "I have told her that it has been a year since you left college and that now you are a full fledged idle man of fashion. She curled her lip—they used to 'curl' their lips in the stories I read when I was young—and said the world is no place for idlers; that a man should do his best to achieve a position not already established for him by his father. Still, I like her. I went to school with her mother, and I feel a sort of responsibility for her. That is why I am trying to make her realize her true position. She can't afford to give me up. I have had her employed by my friends and could easily take that employment from her. She was quite helpless when she came to me. She had nursed her mother for years, and her income died with her mother. I advised her to become a secretary. Hand me that fan, please; this heat is unbearable," though the room was certainly not warm.

She continued to fan herself after Harroway had betaken himself to other scenes. "No wonder I am hot," she told herself. "I em an advanced woman, too, though I never discovered that till recently. However, I intend to investigate the tendencies of today, to find out if young men and young women are the same as they used to be in spite of all their superiority to the little things of life. But how vulgar scientific experiments make you feel! All the same, Tom Harroway's father was one of my earliest beaus, and I went to school with Amy Sefton's mother."

Next day when the secretary came Mrs. Van Stylert was more difficult to please than ever.

"Pardon me, Amy," she said at one moment, when she had severely condemned the present mode of calligraphy, which, as she insisted, was too bold and energetic for any lady to employ, "it is all Tom Harroway's fault. Charlotte Templeton is the most beautiful girl in town, and no end of a catch, and yet he is letting Count Destaing have the innings. I am doing what I can, though. I am interested in Tom; he is my heir—his father was one of my earliest beaus. Think what a match it will be! Charlotte Templeton has a million in her own right and Tom will not have more than two thousand a year till I die."

The secretary arranged her papers. "Here are three invitations to dinners," she said.

"Accept them all," gloomily replied her employer. "I might as well kill myself that way as any other."

The secretary accepted for Mrs. Van Stylert the three efforts toward self immolation.

"Here," then she said, "is a letter from the Society For Assisting Indigent Widows and Single Women."

"Not a dollar," responded Mrs. Van Stylert. "I will assist no indigent single woman. And I am a widow myself."

Just then Harroway came in.

"Won't you spare me a cup of tea?" he asked.

"By the way," said Mrs. Van Stylert, "isn't this the day of the Templeton reception? I don't go to afternoon receptions. They are so unearthly. But you do."

"After my tea," he replied.

"I don't begrudge you the tea," returned his hostess, "but I should think you would want to be with Charlotte as much as possible now that the count is so terribly in evidence."

He caressed the flower in his buttonhole.

"Charlotte and I understand each other," he informed her. Whereupon she managed to overturn a teacup.

"Then I am to congratulate you?" she cried.

"No, no," he hastened to say, "I meant nothing like that."

"In my young days," she said, "when a young man confessed that there was an understanding between him and a young lady, the inference was that there was—something between them."

"So there is," he rejoined. "We are good friends, comrades, chums."

"Impossible!" and she shook her head. "No chumming among young people of opposite sexes. As for you, you don't know what you are missing. Charlotte is just the wife for you, and—Really, Amy, you are in a great hurry; it is ten minutes of 5." The secretary had risen.

"I will make up the ten minutes tomorrow," the young lady said, and left the room.

Harroway looked after her.

"No wonder you are critical," said Mrs. Van Stylert. "She dresses so stiffly. And she went away because she thought she had no right to hear our private talk."

"It seems to me," he returned, oblivious to the latter part of her words, "that her costume is very well chosen for her work. What a fine face she has!"

"She looks like her mother," was the reply. "I went to school with her mother. There, now, run to the Templetons'—and Charlotte."

Thus dismissed, Harroway left the house. Outside, he saw the secretary going down the street.

Now, the secretary was annoyed. Mrs. Van Stylert's manner was becoming atrocious. Before these last two weeks the lady had been kind and friendly. But for Mrs. Van Stylert's kindness and friendly interest she would not have got along so well. But all that was changed now. And what had she done to merit the slights to which she had recently been subjected?

True, Tom Harroway had been frequently at the house of late, developing a craving for afternoon tea that verged closely on dissipation, and all the time he was there his hostess was full of encomiums for Charlotte Templeton and as full of miserable fault finding for the girl who acted in the capacity of secretary.

Harroway saw her going along in front of him. He made up his mind that he must join her. She may have seen him, but she suddenly shot round a corner, and when he reached the corner she had disappeared from view.

"How unkind women can be to women," he mused. "Mrs. Van is letting herself out. Maybe, though, she has been all along like this in private, and now I go there so frequently she is getting not to mind me. And I am to blame!" And he went on to the Templeton reception.

To be continued.

Killed in a Gallery.

Winnipeg, July 30.—Jack Gold of Milwaukee was shot and instantly killed by a shot from a revolver in the hands of B. Huffman, a boy from Minneapolis, on the Pike at the Dominion Exhibition grounds, yesterday afternoon. They were both employed in a shooting gallery. Huffman, who is only a boy of 17 years, was handling the revolver when it was accidentally discharged, killing his friend. Huffman was placed under arrest, pending an investigation. Gold was only about 21 years old, and the two were on the best terms of friendship.

A Second Visitation.

Toronto, July 30.—Warwick Bros. & Rutter did not exhaust their bad luck in the big fire last April, but were visited again yesterday evening in their temporary premises on the south side of East Queen street near Yonge. The fire brigade did prompt work and prevented what might easily have been a disastrous fire. Mr. Rutter stated that it was impossible to give an estimate of the loss, which was over $5,000 and might run to $10,000.

No Canadian Cattle.

London, July 30.—(C.A.P.)—Secretary Tooth of the Foreign Cattle Traders' Association of Birkenhead, wires London that the result of the meat strike in America is very heavy arrivals of United States cattle, but no Canadian cattle are coming in at Birkenhead.

To Go to the Coast.

Montreal, July 30.—General Manager Hays of the Grand Trunk Pacific, William Wainwright and Hon. R. Prefontaine, Minister of Marine, will leave on Thursday next for Vancouver.

POLICE KNEW OF A PLOT

Notified a Minister of Arrival of Party of 15 Anarchists.

Had Watch Set on Assassin's House Night of July 14, But He Did Not Return Home—Identity of the Slayer of Minister Von Plehve Still a Mystery—His Accomplice Was a Jew—M. Witte Offered Vacancy.

St. Petersburg, July 30.—The police have not yet established the identity of the assassin of M. Von Plehve or his accomplice, though it has been ascertained that the former is a little Russian, which accounts for his noticeable accent. The accomplice is a Jew. It has developed that the police for some time past have been aware that a plot was maturing against the Emperor and notified one of the ministers that a party of fifteen anarchists had arrived in St. Petersburg. Several arrests were actually made some days before the assassination of the Minister of the Interior and the police had the assassin's house marked and a trap set for his arrest on the night of July 14, but he did not return home.

Bomb Was Foreign Made.

The bomb which the accomplice dropped in the canal after the assassination has been recovered by the police. It is foreign made, though it is believed to have been loaded in St. Petersburg. It is small and melon-shaped, and is believed to be fully as powerful as the one that killed M. Von Plehve.

The requiem service at M. Von Plehve's house last night was most impressive. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers. Madame Von Plehve and her son were present at the ceremony, as were also many officials and diplomats. A nun in the habit of her order knelt before the coffin intoning prayers for the dead. These prayers will be continued without interruption until after the interment.

The Emperor was not present at the requiem last night, but he will attend the funeral Sunday afternoon.

M. Witte Is In.

London, July 30.—The Daily Telegraph's Berlin correspondent says that Emperor Nicholas sent a telegram to M. Witte, president of the Russian Council of Ministers, asking his advice, and offering him the post of Minister of the Interior with the title of Chancellor.

What Russian Papers Say.

St. Petersburg, July 30.—All the newspapers this morning agree that in the assassination of Minister of the Interior Von Plehve, a great personality has been taken off in the midst of his work.

The newspapers print unusually full and free accounts of the crime, having been officially notified that no restriction will be placed on news or comment, save as they might interfere with the work of the police in unravelling the conspiracy back of the crime, which work is already well under way.

King Sends Condolence.

London, July 30.—King Edward has telegraphed to Emperor Nicholas his sympathy with him on the loss of his distinguished Minister, Von Plehve, and has received a very appreciative reply.

Anarchists in New York.

New York, July 30.—Five thousand persons cheered themselves hoarse over the death of the Russian Minister of the Interior, Von Plehve, and shouted praise for his assassin in Cooper Union last night. Many anarchists, who waved red bandannas, were present.

Moulders on Strike.

Ottawa, July 30.—The moulders of the city went on strike yesterday morning and the following foundries are affected: Ottawa Furnace and Foundry Co., A. Flecks, Chaudiere Machine and Foundry Co., Law Bros., Thomas Lawson, Ottawa Steel Castings Co. and Victoria Foundry Co. About 35 moulders laid down their tools and a number of apprentices went out in sympathy. They are fighting for an advance in wages.

Boy of 7 Drowned.

Carleton Place, July 30.—A sad drowning accident occurred yesterday, by which Wilmer Neil, a boy aged 7 years, only son of Wm. M. Neil, lost his life. The little fellow and another boy named Melville Poivin were playing along the edge of the millrace, near Gillies' machine shops, when young Neil fell in.

PERISHABLE PRODUCTS

Government Criticized Re Inadequate Facilities.

Sir Richard Cartwright Shifts Blame to Hon. Sydney Fisher, But Dr. Sproule Showed That He Made the Contracts and Thus Was Responsible—Mr. Smith's Motion Defeated on a Vote of 62 to 38.

Ottawa, July 30.—On the opening of the House yesterday Sir Wm. Mulock introduced his bill to consolidate and amend the acts respecting alien labor. At the request of Mr. Borden, he explained the measure at some length.

Of Interest to Farmers.

For failing to give adequate facilities for the shipment of the perishable products of Canada the Government was vigorously criticised by E. D. Smith of Wentworth, in the House to-day. Mr. Smith concluded his speech with a motion asking the House to condemn the Government for not securing for the farmers of Canada "a safe and speedy transport for the perishable products of the farm and competitive low prices for freight."

Sir Richard Cartwright gently shifted the responsibility for the defects complained of to Hon. Sydney Fisher.

Blames Sir Richard.

Dr Sproule showed that the contracts with the steamship companies in the matter of cold storage and ventilated chambers were loosely drawn. They did not impose hard and fast conditions on the steamship company. For this state of affairs, Dr. Sproule blamed the Minister of Trade and Commerce. It was Sir Richard Cartwright who made the contract, and he was responsible for the defects in them. Provision should be made for a thorough system of inspection. The Government appeared to be indifferent to the interests of the producing class. Though professing great concern for the farmers, the Government was not sufficiently interested in their welfare to give them a good system of cold storage.

Guilty of Neglect of Duty.

Mr. Broder of Dundas, passed severe censure on the Government for its failure to make proper provisions for the shipment of butter and cheese. Its indifference to this important question could only be characterized as guilty neglect of duty. The Government claimed credit for assisting the butter and cheese industry.

"Vote for Laurier and 11½c. cheese," was one of the Liberal campaign cries in 1896. The 11½c. cheese had not materialized. In the past seven years the price of cheese had increased by only three-tenths of one cent a pound. Mr. Broder expressed the opinion that this increase in the price of cheese would not be maintained if the Government continued its policy of indifference towards the dairy interests.

The House then divided on Mr. Smith's amendment, which was negatived on a vote of 38 to 62.

As to Hon. Russell.

Col. Sam Hughes called attention to the report that E. Russell, M.P., for Hants, was to be appointed chief justice of the Nova Scotia Supreme Court.

Mr. Fitzpatrick replied that nothing had yet been decided on in regard to this appointment. He thought, however, that it would be hard to get a better man for the office than Mr. Russell.

Mr. Borden wanted to know the reason for the delay in making the appointment. He understood that the position was being kept open for reasons of political expediency. To this Mr. Fitzpatrick answered that the appointments of the chief justices and the judges of the Supreme Court are not included in the patronage of the Minister of Justice. They are left to the Prime Minister. Mr. Fitzpatrick promised to give his attention to the vacancy of Nova Scotia as soon as Parliament prorogues.

To the Exchequer Court.

Col. Hughes asked if it was the intention to appoint a second judge to the Exchequer Court.

Mr. Fitzpatrick replied that it might be necessary to make such an appointment, but there was no intention of making it at the present time.

Praise For the Army.

Mr. Fitzpatrick stated that an appropriation of $2,000 to pay for the supervision of paroled and discharged prisoners was put in the estimates at the suggestion of Superintendent Archibald of the Salvation Army, who had done an immense amount of good in connection with the prison gate work of the army. The Salvation Army had men to attend at the prison gate, knowing through information given by the police department when prisoners would be liberated. The liberated men are taken hold of, employment is found for them, and they are given all possible opportunity. It was absolutely necessary, Mr. Fitzpatrick said, to give a man a chance if he has fallen into trouble, and the best way when he gets out of jail is to let him see that society does not turn its back upon him.

The reading of the vote was changed to include traveling expenses so that it would be possible to buy a kit for a discharged convict or anything to enable him to earn a living. The item passed.

Canada's Sovereignty.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier gave the House an interesting account of the measures taken by the Dominion Government to assert Canada's sovereignty over the waters of Hudson Bay. The question came up in connection with an item of $200,000 for the purchase, equipment and maintenance of vessels to be employed in patrolling the waters in the northern portion of Canada; also for establishing and maintaining police and customs ports at such points on the mainland or islands as may be deemed necessary from time to time.

A Row at Midnight.

An item of $60,000 for a wharf at Seven Islands developed a rather nice little "job." Last session $25,000 was voted to build a wharf at Seven Islands, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, but the fact was elicited by E. F. Clarke that the money was really paid over to the North Shore Power Company, for its own benefit.

Although the Government engineer did not recommend the deal, the Government took over the wharf at $24,000, and allowed the company $21,000 for "material on hand." The statement was read that doubtless a portion of this $60,000 was required to help Mr. Girard of Chicoutimi and Mr. Fitzpatrick to secure their elections.

Mr. Fitzpatrick in an excited manner declared that his law firm had nothing to do, as alleged, with the purchase of the pulp limit, which, he said, was bought at public auction, and that he would willingly grant a commission of enquiry in this matter.

Mr. Taylor insisted that a commission, untrammed by limitations, should be granted, in which event the author of the statement would prove his assertions.

Finally, Mr. Taylor moved that the $60,000 item be struck out.

His motion was defeated by 35 to 21.

The House adjourned shortly after midnight.

COLONEL LAKE SUGGESTED.

As Probable Chief of Staff of the Canadian Militia.

Ottawa, July 30.—(Globe Special.)—Sir Frederick Borden has taken the initial step toward the reorganization of the Canadian militia in accordance with the new Militia Act. He has applied to the Imperial authorities for a suitable officer to fill the position of chief of staff, one of the most imporant positions in the new militia council. The position of general officer commanding no longer exists, but Sir Frederick deems it advisable to obtain the services of an experienced Imperial officer of the militia, and would be well pleased if he could obtain the services in that capacity of Col. Lake, chief of staff of the first army corps, under Sir Evelyn Wood. Col. Lakes is well acquainted with the Canadian militia, having at one time been quartermaster-general of the militia, and on several occasions he acted as general officer commanding temporarily. He is a thorough soldier, who well understands and appreciates the conditions which prevail under the Canadian system. He was decidedly popular with all ranks, and on leaving Canada was highly recommended by Sir F. Borden to the Secretary of State for War. If his services can be secured, his appointment will no doubt meet with general favor among the militia.

Two Boatmen Drowned.

Toronto, July 30.—Information has been received of the drowning of two boatmen belonging to T. B. Speight's survey party on the Abbitibi River. It was contained in a letter from him to A. J. Van Nostrand, dated July 13. On the previous day Joseph Burns and a man named Defoe, connected with the party, set out to move about 800 pounds of supplies to a new camp. They were accompanied by David Lacelle and Arthur Fleury, two boatmen from Mattawa. Unfortunately the canoe was swamped, and both Lacelle and Fleury were drowned. Defoe grasped the canoe and managed to get ashore. Burns caught a box and with its aid drifted ashore half a mile below.

Matches Caused the Fire.

Toronto, July 30.—An open case of matches, one of some half a hundred, which were stored in the upper floor of the Eby Blain grocery warehouse on East Front street is held responsible for having been the cause of a fire which gutted the entire flat. The loss will be between $75,000 and $100,000.

Artist Goodall Dead.

London, July 30.—Frederick Goodall, the artist, is dead. He was a member of the Royal Academy and was born in 1822. His first picture was exhibited in 1839. "The Flight Into Egypt," "The Finding of Moses," and others of this period, about 1864, were very popular.

"Slocum" Indictments.

New York, July 30.—Capt. Van Schaick, Federal Steamboat Inspector Fleming and former Inspector Lundberg were indicted yesterday by the federal grand jury in connection with the disaster to the General Slocum on June 25 last, when nearly 1,000 lives were lost.

Indictments also were reported against President Barnaby, Secretary Atkinson and Treasurer Dexter of the Knickerbocker Steamboat Company, and Capt. John Pease, the commodore of the company's fleet.

Expects Big Yield.

Winnipeg, July 30.—The crops in the province are coming on finely, and the prospects are for the largest harvest yet gathered. The only setback has been due to the rain in some localities where crops are still a little green, but the season is now favorable. Many Americans are investigating the farming situation.

What Fruit-a-tives are

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices in tablet form. They are the laxative, tonic and curative principles of fruit—combined into pleasant tasting pellets. They contain all the virtues of fruit—but by the secret process of making them, their action on the human system is many times intensified.

What "Fruit-a-tives" are for "Fruit-a-tives" are the natural and logical cure for all Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. Their action is that of fresh fruit, only very much surer and more effective. Then too, they are free of fruit acids, sugar and woody fibre which often prevent fresh fruit being beneficial.

Try "Fruit-a-tives" and see how quickly they cure you of Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bilious Headache, Loss of Appetite and Kidney troubles.

SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1904.

FELL AND KILLED

Mr. John Bagshaw of Mariposa Fell in his Barn.

(Lindsay Post.)

On Wednesday evening, July 20, the whole community was startled by the report of the accident which had befallen Mr. John Bagshaw, at his home on the 12th concession of Mariposa. It seems that while unloading hay the small rope of the hay fork became entangled. Mr. Bagshaw started to readjust it, and was climbing the ladder in the barn for that purpose when the pin broke and he fell from the upper beam to the floor. Dr. Henderson, of Cannington, was summoned, and it was found that the backbone was fractured at the neck and that there was no hope for his recovery. He gradually sank, and finally passed into rest early Saturday morning.

Mr. Bagshaw was for forty-five years a consistent member of the Methodist church. He was a Liberal in politics, and a good citizen. The funeral on Sunday afternoon was one of the largest ever seen in that community. The service was conducted at the home by the Rev. J. Garbutt, pastor of the Methodist church, Cannington, and from thence the cortege proceeded to Cedar Vale cemetery for interment.

Mrs. Bagshaw and her daughters have the sympathy of the entire community in their great bereavement.

About Your Complexion

A yellow, muddy complexion tells of derangements of the liver, and indicates the presence of bile poison in the blood. THE TRENT WATERWAY

An Interesting Debate in the House of Commons.

On July 15th, according to Hansard, which has only just come to hand, there was the following interesting debate in Committee of Supply on the item of $100,000 for Trent Canal construction:—

Mr. Clarke—Was there not some discussion as to where the outlet of this canal is to be?

Mr. Emmerson—That is not yet determined.

Mr. Sproule—Has the government sent an agent to examine the different routes?

Mr. Emmerson—Yes, and I laid on the table the reports of those engineers. I think there were two different engineers. The people of Trenton and Port Hope have taken exception to the conclusion of the engineers and there will have to be another survey. There is a difference of opinion among the engineers and we will have to get some sort of arbitration.

Mr. Sproule—Do the government engineers not make a recommendation?

Mr. Emmerson—They report the facts?

Mr. Sproule—Has the government reached any conclusion yet?

Mr. Emmerson—Not yet.

Mr. Sproule—When do they expect to reach a conclusion?

Mr. Emmerson—Very shortly.

Mr. Fowler—What portion of this canal has been completed?

Mr. Emmerson—It is a canal without an end, it is short at both ends.

Mr. Emmerson—Is it of any use until it is completed?

Mr. Emmerson—Yes, it is of use. The other day we went to Peterborough and examined it and were much pleased with what we saw. It is navigable now for 170 miles of water stretches, with the locks.

Mr. Clarke—What depth for traffic?

Mr. Emmerson—I think it is about eight feet deep, with six feet of water on the mitre sill.

Mr. Clarke—The people of that district would like to get some more information about it.

Mr. Emmerson—Do you want me to go into the whole matter?

Mr. Clarke—No, but I think some opportunity ought to be given to gentlemen who represent that district to speak upon it.

Mr. Emmerson. That is all arranged for.

Mr. Vrooman—Could the minister say whether the work is being pushed on on the upper division, the division that is called the Simcoe and Balsam Lake division? I think it is under contract now. That work seems to be going on very slowly, it has been on the tapis ever since I was a boy, and seems to be interminable. I would like to now what is being done.

Mr. Emmerson.—The Simcoe and Balsam Lake Division is being pushed on. The section known as the Larkin and Sangster division is nearly completed. On the other, I think the work is progressing now quite rapidly, but there has been some delay in the past.

Mr. Vrooman—Is the Larkin & Sangster contract completed?

Mr. Emmerson—No.

Mr. Vrooman—Does the minister mean to say that there are 170 miles of continuous navigation on that canal now?

Mr. Emmerson—The section between Balsam Lake and Kirkfield is under contract to Larkin & Sangster, and is just about completed. Then the section between Larkin & Sangster section and Lake Simcoe, is progressing well, that is the Brown & Aylmer section. Another lift lock is to be put in on the Larkin & Sangster section, but the steel work is not yet completed. It is not yet under contract.

Mr. Vrooman—Will that be as high as the Peterborough lift lock?

Mr. Emmerson—That will be a fifty foot lock, fifteen feet less than the Peterborough lift lock.

Mr. VroomanWhen may we expect that will be completed?

Mr. Emmerson—The steel portion of it within a year. The substructure is completed now. However, we have got our hands in now and we will carry it right along.

Mr. Vrooman—I think the minister must be mistaken when he says there are 170 miles of continuous navigation.

Mr. Emmerson—I was wrong in making that statement. You can navigate from Healy's Falls below Peterborough, through to Kirkfield, a distance of 120 miles.

Mr. Clarke—How much remains to be done to complete the work?

Mr. Emmerson—I am not in a position to say that. $30,000 were expended on that canal prior to confederation.

Mr. Clarke—How long will it take to complete the work?

Mr. Emmerson—Perhaps that could be worked out by the rule of three.

Mr. Vrooman—I would like to hear from the Minister a little more with regard to his visit to that canal, and of what use he thinks it is going to be? Is navigation complete from Peterborough to Lakefield?

Mr. Emmerson—Yes, that is complete. I was delighted with everything I saw in Peterborough, and I am sure no one went away without feeling impressed with the importance of that water stretch.

Mr. Vrooman—That is a very brief account. I am pleased, however, to hear the minister express himself in this way, because for many years, in fact ever since I can remember anything about politics, I have been hearing hon. gentlemen now sitting on the opposite side, traducing and running down this work as being of no use. I am glad to see that the government and the party sitting behind them, appear to have changed their minds on that subject. What is the length of the construction from Lake Ontario and what would be the probable expenditure there? I understand that $4,000,000 has been spent on this canal already.

Mr. Emmerson—It is estimated to cost about $6,000,000 to complete. The cost will depend on the route. Some say that to go by one route will cost a great deal more than to go by the other. And, under any circumstances, the cost will exceed $6,000,000, according to the estimates of the engineer.

Mr. Vrooman—What weight of freight can be lifted at one time on the lift lock at Peterborough?

Mr. Emmerson—A vessel containing about 25,000 bushels of wheat can be lifted.

Mr Haggart—It would be interesting to know the policy of the government with reference to the completion of the canal. If I understood rightly, it is completed to within 15 or 16 miles of the Bay of Quinte. What will be the cost of finishing that portion, and what will it cost to finish the uncompleted work at the Lake Simcoe end, which, if I remember well, is about the same distance? And I would like the hon. gentleman to tell us how those lift locks work—I see he was at the opening of them. Besides the one at Peterborough, which has been completed, I understand there is to be another at Lake Simcoe. What progress is being made upon it, and what amount is required to complete it? This is an important work, and we ought to have the fullest possible information.

Mr. Emmerson—My hon friend asks what it will cost to complete from Healy's Falls to the Bay of Quinte, and also what it will cost to complete the section to Georgian Bay. It will cost upwards of $4,000,000 to complete the Bay of Quinte end, and about $1,500,000 to complete the part to Georgian Bay.

Mr. Haggart—What are the distances to be completed?

Mr Emmerson—About 13 miles on the Georgian Bay end and about 17 or 18 miles on the Lake Ontario end. The lift lock at Peterborough works very satisfactorily. In saying this, of course, I give the judgment of others, for my own judgment would not be of great value. The substructure of the other lock is completed, but the superstructure has not been contracted for.

Mr. Haggart—Are any contracts proposed to be made for the work at the lower end of the canal and at the Georgian Bay end?

Mr. Emmerson.—It is not routed yet.

Mr. Lennox—The minister speaks of an expenditure of $6,000,000 to complete this canal. I understand that to cover the whole of the Trent Valley canal system. But I find that on 12st March last the present minister, in answering a question in this House, said that if the canal were carried out by way of Trenton it would cost $6,950,000, and if it were carried out by way of Port Hope it would cost $6,850,000. This, I presume, was made on the basis of careful estimates.

Mr. Emmerson—That was according to the estimates made by the engineers who were sent.

Mr. Lennox—That is as I understand it. But I presume the minister was speaking more definitely than he is just now. The estimates show an expenditure to be made of about $7,000,000 either way. What I would like the minister to explain is how much work this covers, and to what point it would carry the construction. We understand, of course, that we get to what is practically the St. Lawrence, whether the canal is made by way of Trenton or by way of Port Hope. The minister speaks of the Georgian bay end. Do his estimates cover all the expenditure required to carry on the work through to Georgian bay; and, if so, by what route?

Mr. E Mr. Emmerson—By the river route from Lake Couchiching to Georgian bay.

Mr. Lennox—That would be by the River Severn. So this would include all the expense estimated to be incurred in carrying the canal by way of the River Severn to the Georgian bay. Has the department under consideration the idea of carrying it through by way of Barrie, coming out at Collingwood, or probably some miles east of Collingwood, by way of the Nottawasaga river? I can direct the hon. minister's attention to that by saying that I understand that the Transportation Commission—I think it is only fair to refer to this—have that matter under consideration, and have been receiving evidence as to both these routes. From all the information I have been able to collect, it seems to me that the best course is to proceed to Orillia, thence to Barrie, through the open waters of Lake Simcoe and Kempenfeldt bay, and so west to the Georgian bay. That route would go through a magnificent country. And even if it cost more money—and I do not know that it would cost more—still I believe it would be found to be much more desirable than the route by the River Severn. However, I have no doubt that the hon. minister is waiting, the same as the people are waiting, for the report of the Transportation Commission in relation to this matter.

Mr. Emmerson—I would ask my hon. friend if the route he is advocating is through the riding that is represented by my hon. friend?

Mr. Lennox—No, it is not. It is through the riding which is temporarily represented by the hon. member for North Simcoe (Mr. McCarthy) and which I hope will be better represented when we assemble again in the new parliament.

Mr. Emmerson—You anticipate being the man?

Mr. Lennox—No, I have a better riding still. Nothing would induce me to leave old South Simcoe. There is no riding which has such a pleasant ring in the ears of the Liberal government as South Simcoe and I have the honor to represent that riding. We have no canals in it.

Mr. Emmerson—I think you are both to be congratulated.

Mr. Lennox—We have no canals in it and no public works of any kind, but we have a magnificent Conservative majority, I am happy to say. I hope the hon. minister will take this matter into his most serious and careful consideration. Of course, I do not expect him at the present time to be influenced very much by what may be my opinion or the opinion of any one who is not an expert in matters of this kind as to which is the best route, but I am in hopes the matter will be carefully considered by the Transportation Commission that we will soon have a report upon it. The other day when I called the hon. minister's attention to the Transportation Commission he told me that it had made an interim report in reference to some ports in the maritime provinces. I think the whole of the evidence has been taken in regard to the Trent Valley canal. If that is the case I would urge upon the hon. minister to endeavor to get a report in reference to this matter without waiting for the general report of the commission. There was a time when there was some division of opinion as to the utility of this work. I am exceedingly glad that there is no division of opinion as to that now and that the present government, as represented not only by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, but as represented by the hon. Postmaster General, recognize that this is a great work and that there is great necessity for immediately pushing it ahead. I want to urge upon the hon. minister and upon the government that it is a loss of money if this matter is not taken in hand now and finished. I do not mean dribbling out a little money from year to year. I mean a sufficient sum of money to complete this work in the same way as the government would go at the construction of a railway, not dragging it out for an indefinite period of years but doing it within a few years, and I would say a very few years as to that. There is no system that is to be more condemned than the system that governments practice once they have committed themselves to a certain scheme, of merely making a parliamentary appropriation from year to year. What is the fact in reference to this canal? It has cost us up to the present time almost $4,500,000. That means that it is costing the country for interest, without receiving anything by way of compensation, in round figures $150,000 a year. What is the use of that? The moment the canal is completed we will be getting a return in some form. This is the only theory upon which this work can be prosecuted. That is the theory on which the government have continued the work, and until it is completed, until communication is opened from the Georgian bay by whatever course may be adopted down to Trenton or Port Hope, the country is not getting the benefit of this great work. It will get a great deal of benefit from it, not only the direct advantage of affording means of transportation to a large class of people along the line of the canal, which traverses a farming district which in many parts is unsurpassed, but it will be of great incidental advantage to the people by affording direct competition with the railway and so reducing and controlling rates. In this I think the hon. minister will be ready to agree with me. Therefore, I think there can be no excuse that the government could urge or that the government would be disposed to urge for not taking this work in hand as a definite work to be completed within a reasonable date. I cannot prescribe the date but I would say within a few years, probably within four or five years at the outside. We have $4,500,000 in it now and within ten years we will have, according to the present rate of progress, $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 more so that it will then cost us about $300,000 a year in interest. Until the whole work is undertaken as we undertake a railway or undertake to erect a public building, that is that we keep at it and do not let up until it is finished, we will be losing money by the transaction. I trust the hon. minister will give us a promise more or less definite now—I hope very definite—that some such policy as this will be pursued. I think the people look for it, I think it is fair, I think it must commend itself to a man of the astuteness and energy of the present minister as being the only wise and proper policy to pursue.

Sir William Mulock — My hon. friend (Mr Lennox) is in error in saying that the canal as far as it has been constructed is unproductive.

Mr Lennox—I did not intend to advance the idea that it is absolutely unproductive, but as compared with what it will result in I consider that it is unproductive. I understand that there are a number of miles in use.

Sir William Mulock—At the present time I understand there are 120 miles of continuous navigation, made possible by these improvements which are the subject of discussion for the present moment, and that this facility for traffic is of very material advantage to the district locally at the present time. Before the completion of the lift lock the navigation was divided into two parts, north of Peterborough and south of Peterborough. There were on the waters from Peterborough northward thirty steamers engaged in various classes of business, and seven below Peterborough, making thirty-seven steamers with 120 miles of continuous and uninterrupted navigation. These vessels are engaged in carrying passengers, lumber, cordwood, grain, and other native products. There are, as my hon. friend is aware, at Peterborough at the present moment certain cereal works, manufacturing foodstuffs of various kinds and consuming daily enormous quantities of grain.

Mr. Sproule—They do not bring that in by the canal.

Sir William Mulock—No, except from some local adjoining district.

Mr. Sproule—I was there some time ago and the manager told me they were obliged to bring it in by train, and he spoke of the advantage the canal would be.

To be continued.

Sunlight Soap is recommended, by those who have investigated the different kind of soaps, as being the best and purest on the market. Those who have gone still farther and tried the different methods state that the Sunlight way of washing is greatly superior to ordinary methods because it requires much less work and makes the clothes whiter and cleaner. Because Sunlight Soap is quite pure and free from adulteration it will not injure delicate fabrics or the user's hands.

THE DAVIS CONTRACT

Ministers Hiding the Facts—The Changed Agreement a Confession.

In dealing with the Auditor-General's presentation of the Davis contract in his annual report, the Minister of Justice advanced as an answer to the allegations of Mr. McDougall the fact that the original contract had provided for three renewals, which would carry it for eighty-four years. It will be remembered that one of the points made in the auditor's report was that the contract made with Mr. Davis by Hon. John Haggart in 1896 was for twenty-one years. This the Liberal Government extended to eighty-four years. Reading from the first contract Mr. Fitzpatrick showed that the longer term was contemplated by the stipulation for renewals. That information had been withheld from Mr. McDougall, which accounts for it not appearing in his reports.

But it is not in any sense an answer to the charges made by the Auditor-General. It does not touch the fact that definite and exorbitant quantities of power and light were to be paid for, whether used or not, at prices largely in excess of commercial rates. Mr. Fitzpatrick did not see fit to go into that phase of the question. The contention is that in the first instance the contract was improvident. It was limited, however, by the provision that Mr. Davis should supply only such quantities of power and light as the Government engineers should call for. The second contract fixed the quantities absolutely and provided for payment for the maximum quantity of light and power all the year round. That is the point to which the Minister of Justice should direct his explanations. We have some light as to how the transaction was viewed by the Administration in the way the contract was modified after Mr. McDougall's protest had been entered. The minimum of horse power was released from 600 to 125, and instead of are lights every night in the year the period was limited to eight months.—Toronto News.

Why Not Have a Raffia Hat?

It is not such a trifling, difficult matter as most people suppose to make one of those pretty raffia hats that are so popular just now. Of course elaborate designs may be attempted, but the plain woven hat looks as pretty when worn as the more fancy ones. These woven ones may be made in a couple of evenings and are very pretty made up in the wide sailor or trio corner shape and trimmed with bands of velvet or foliage. The raffia, which comes in black, red, green, brown and natural shades, is on sale at the Review Office, which is open every evening.—2d.

Taking a Look
INTO AUGUST
A Lively Forecast

August is the month to make a dollar do duty for two at the Golden Lion. As the ranks of the summer goods get thinner, the prices get slighter and slighter.

Saving is rampant all over the store. Here is a woman buying a skirt that she has been longing for for two months, and it costs her half what it would two months ago. Here is a prudent one buying three Shirt Waists at their reduced prices and tucking them away for next summer.

That is the "why" and the "how" of August bargains here.

The low prices make it very easy for you to finish out the Summer with a new hat and other Dress Accessories, for there is a sharp cut in every department of Fair's.

If we're not making money we're making friends. Doing lots of business with little money in it, but clearances are absolutely necessary. That's how we look at it. The extraordinary bargains we will offer this month will attract many friends permanently to the store.

It costs quite a little to pack and store away odds and ends that accumulate at the end of a season's business, and it ties up a lot of capital, too.

Is it any wonder, then, that this progressive store wants to save all such items of expense, and that we are willing to lose our profit for the sake of a clear stock and the ready money?

Now is the time. This is the month that the price tickets speak loudly at FAIR'S.

JAPANESE ENVELOP RUSSIANS

Three Armies Have Kuropatkin in a Corner.

HARD PRESSED AT HAICHENG

St. Petersburg Admits That They Must Fight or Retreat Northward--Situation at the Front Is Critical--Heavy Fighting for Days.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 1.—Although public attention has been distracted from the events of the war during the past week, first, because of the fear of international complications, and, second, because of the assassination of Minister of the Interior Von Plehve, the situation at the front is regarded as critical.

The enveloping movements of three Japanese armies of Generals Kuroki, Nodzu and Oku around Gen. Kuropatkin's position appears to be almost complete, and the extended line of the Japanese seems to be the only drawback to concerted action. It is realized here that the Russian general must now either fight or withdraw the whole army northward. He is being closely pressed at Haicheng. At that place, Gen. Kuroki's northern column makes it extremely dangerous to remain there, because, while holding the position to give battle against the Japanese, whose advance is notoriously slow and careful, Gen. Kuroki might push through and cut his railway communications to Liaoyang.

While nothing is definitely known, there are some unofficial indications that matters are rapidly maturing for either a battle or a retreat.

A few days are expected to determine which course Gen. Kuropatkin has elected to pursue. The indications are that the Baltic squadron is on the eve of an important movement. The Emperor had arranged to inspect the squadron, but his plan was given up, owing to the assassination of Minister Von Plehve.

Japs Surround Port Arthur.

Che Foo, Aug. 1.—A Japanese merchant has received word from a Chinese whom he trusts to the effect that the Japanese have occupied every position surrounding the besieged fortress of Port Arthur, with the exception of Golden Hill. The Chinese stated that both sides suffered tremendous losses in the operations necessary to bring about this state of affairs. The members of the Russian Intelligence Bureau here, while denying the report that Port Arthur has been captured, are inclined to believe that the reports are true to the extent that the Japanese have made great progress about the operations of the besieged fortress.

Siege of the Fortress.

Tokio, Aug. 1.—The General Staff announced Saturday evening that five Japanese officers had been killed and forty-one wounded, in the fighting which has been going on around Port Arthur since last Tuesday. The losses in the ranks are not given.

This is the first announcement of its kind since the beginning of the siege of the fortress, and it indicates that there has been serious fighting.

Still Standing.

Tokio, Aug. 1.—The rumored fall of Port Arthur is officially pronounced to be untrue.

Fighting at Haicheng.

London, Aug. 1.—A telegram received from Haicheng says the Japanese attacked the Russian southern army on Friday morning. The Japanese infantry pushed from the south along the railway in the face of a heavy artillery fire. The Japanese continued to advance until 11 o'clock, when at last they were checked. Later in the day the fighting was vigorously renewed.

Fighting For Two Days.

London, Aug. 1.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Newchwang, in a despatch dated July 31, says that there has been heavy fighting for two days in the marshes south of Haicheng, during the gradual retreat from Tatchekiao of 5,000 Russians forming the rear guard, and that the peril of this force increases daily.

Russian Warships For Host.

Copenhagen, Aug. 1.—Two Russian cruisers and two torpedo boats have traversed the great belt going northwards.

Back to the North.

Frankfort, Germany, Aug. 1.—The Tokio correspondent of The Zeitung says that the Vladivostock squadron has returned to Vladivostock.

No Details Received.

Valdivostock, Aug. 1.—No details have been received here of the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Vladivostock squadron, except the statement to the effect that a portion of the crew and passengers and the ship's papers are held for production as evidence in court to justify the claim that the ship was a legal prize, and therefore subject to confiscation.

Prize Court For Arabia.

Vladivostock, Aug. 1.—The prize court here will begin an examination into the case of the Portland and Asiatic Liner Arabia, which was seized by the Russian Vladivostock squadron to-day. The German captain of the steamer declares that when the American companies in Portland hired the boat he did not know that he was expected to carry contraband material.

Found Dead.

Merrickville, Aug. 1.—Thomas Musgel, aged about 66, was found dead in the barn of one of the local hotels Saturday afternoon. He had been drinking heavily of late. There is no reason to suspect foul play, and consequently no inquest will be held.

Flour Goes Up.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—The Ogilvy Milling Company have sent notice to the local agents that commencing to-day flour will advance twenty cents a barrel on all grades. Scarcity in supply is the alleged reason.

PROF. CAMPBELL DEAD.

Demise Took Place Suddenly at Ye He Island, Muskoka.

Port Cockburn, Muskoka, Aug. 1.—Prof. John Campbell died suddenly at his summer home, Ye He Island, seven miles from here, Saturday morning. His death was entirely unexpected, as the professor seemed to be in the best of health when he came here from the general assembly at St. John, N.B., in June, and went to his summer home on Ye He Island.

It will be remembered that Prof. Campbell resigned his place as professor of church history and apologetics in the Presbyterian College at Montreal last June. The occasion of his resignation was the appointment of a successor to Principal McVicar.

Career of the Dead Scholar.

John Campbell was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1840. He was educated at Roxboro House Preparatory School, London, and on the continent. His father, the late James Campbell, the well-known Toronto publisher, designed him for commercial life. John Campbell was in a business occupation first in New York and afterwards in Toronto, till 1861, when he entered Toronto University. He was a member of the University Company and fought at Ridgeway in 1866, and while a student helped Robert Baldwin to establish the Y.M.C.A. of Toronto. Completing his theological course in the New College, Edinburgh, he was ordained in 1868, and became minister of the Charles street Presbyterian Church, Toronto, where he remained until he was called to his life work in the Presbyterian College, Montreal. Prof. Campbell was married in 1875 to Mary Helen, eldest daughter of John S. Playfair, and a cousin of Lord Playfair.

Funeral in Toronto.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—The body of the late Prof. Campbell arrived from Gravenhurst early on Sunday morning and was conveyed to the residence of his sister, Mrs. J. Hubert Mason, "Ermleigh," 677 Sherbourne street. It was accompanied by Mrs. Campbell, Gerald Campbell, youngest son of deceased; Mrs. Mason and Stuart Playfair. The funeral will take place this afternoon at three o'clock, and the interment will be at the Necropolis, where Prof. Campbell's father and mother are buried. Death was due to a clot of blood on the brain. The deceased left a family of three sons, Dr. R. P. Campbell of the Montreal General Hospital staff, who arrived here yesterday; Dr. John Campbell, surgeon on a steamer now on its way to the west coast of Africa, and Gerald, who was with his father in Muskoka.

The Daily Review.

MONDAY, AUG. 1. 1904.

The Port Hope Guide says that it was misinformed when it said that the Hon. Geo. A. Cox had acquired waterpower on the Trent. We disputed the accuracy of the statement when we called attention to it.

The Tarmack organs are protesting that Lord Dundonald's advice to Canadians to keep their hands on the Union Jack is unnecessary. We think it was very timely when a member of the Laurier Administration had just been uttering threats in London of the disruption of the tie binding us and the Empire.

Sir Fred. Borden in the House of Commons uttered the falsehood that Major Glasgow was the senior major of the 2nd Dragoons, and was promptly exposed by Col. Sam Hughes, who produced the army list, which showed that there were two other majors in the regiment gazetted on the same date, and whose experience was as combatant, not medical, officers. Yet the party organs are repeating the Minister's invention.

JACKSON AND HIS CHAMPION

Sir Richard Cartwright Defends and Rewards Subornation of Perjury.

There is a limit to everything, and Sir Richard has apparently reached the limit of patience and charity by appearing as the champion of J. B. Jackson. The defence offered by the Minister of Trade and Commerce of the insult to public decency involved in the appointment of a man like Jackson is as painful an evidence as could be presented of the depths of political degradation to which it is possible for political exigencies to drag a respectable man.

It is unnecessary to recall the story of the services by which Jackson gained his reward. The people of this district are already too familiar with the abominable details. There is not a respectable Liberal in Oxford, North or South, who is familiar with Jackson's political career, who does not blush at the mere mention of his name. Yet Sir Richard Cartwright feels it to be no outrage on public decency to stand up in defence of Jackson's conduct and to assume the full responsibility for accepting and rewarding his nefarious work.

It is impossible to believe that Sir Richard was in ignorance of the true character of his factotum's work in South Oxford; he does not plead ignorance, but boldly offers justification. The only alternative, therefore, from the conclusion that Sir Richard's own estimate of public morality is very low, is that he is helpless in the hands of his own factotum. Has all Sir Richard's fine talk about public decency and public morality been canting shame? Or was J. B. Jackson in a position to make his demands and enforce them? Whichever explanation is accepted, it is evident that no lustre will be added to Sir Richard's reputation.

Sir Richard, it will be noticed, boldly accepts the sole responsibility for the Jackson appointment. Unfortunately for his colleagues he is unable to do this. He may shoulder his own fair share of the odium, and that undoubtedly is the greater portion, but he can do no more. It is significant, however, that he is anxious to take all the blame. His anxiety in this respect may be taken as an indication of the feeling of his colleagues in the matter. It may be taken for granted that it is not because of pride in his own handiwork that he seeks to assume the sole responsibility; the probability is, rather, that he finds it difficult to distribute the honors, and so makes the virtue of a necessity.

There is one statement in Sir Richard Cartwright's defence of Jackson which the public will not willingly allow to pass. Jackson's work, he declared, was not nice work, but it seemed necessary. This is a slur on self-respecting people which calls for prompt repudiation. The kind of work that Jackson did is not necessary, and it is an insult to the people to say that it is. If such work were necessary as that by which Jackson gained his reward, it would be a sad lookout for Canada. It is because the people are convinced that such work is not necessary that respectable Liberals—and, after all, they constitute the mass of the party,—not only in the Oxfords, but throughout the country, feel ashamed and humiliated at the mention of Jackson's name. Such work is not necessary; such men are not necessary, and such champions of such men and such work are not necessary.—Woodstock Express, Indep.

Medicines You Can Trust

PRODUCE THE EVIDENCE

Concealing the Documents that they may Calumniate Lord Dundonald.

It was intimated by the Globe that Lord Dundonald had been striving to induce the Government to convert Canada into an armed camp—to introduce into this country the military system of Europe. It accused Lord Dundonald of recommending the expenditure of thirty to forty millions of dollars on military armament and the erection of a chain of fortresses along the national frontier—"Gibraltars," the Globe called them, and denounced the wicked project.

Lord Dundonald has repudiated the Globe's accusations as groundless and absurd and as having been published for the purpose of bringing him into contempt. In spite of this denial the Globe asserts, as quoted above, that the rumors to which it gave publicity "were in the main correct" and therefore that the Government did right in suppressing Dundonald's reports.

Does it not appear necessary in view of these conflicting statements to publish Dundonald's suppressed reports? If the Globe's statements are accurate, Lord Dundonald has been guilty of deliberate untruth. But we respectfully protest against the procedure by which Dundonald is condemned for something said to be in documents which are in the hands of his enemies, which might be produced as evidence, but which are kept secret against the wishes and protests of the accused.—Hamilton Herald, 2nd p

THE BODY OF THE SUN.

Is Its Density It Resembles Somewhat a Globe of Tar.

It is generally agreed that the main body of the sun—the nucleus within the photosphere—must be purely gaseous. This seems to be an unavoidable conclusion from the sun's low mean density and its tremendous internal temperature, which must almost certainly be far higher than that of its outer surface, so high that even the enormous force of solar gravity is able to compress the vapors to a density only one and four-tenths that of water, although among the constituent elements are many of the metals (iron being the most conspicuous) which in the solid or liquid state are from three to eight times as dense. The reader must not imagine, however, that this gaseous nucleus is like air or other gases as we encounter them upon the earth. Denser than water and strongly viscous from the heat, it more resembles a globe of tar except near the outside. There the vapors relieved from pressure are free to expand and to cool both by the expansion and by radiating heat to outer space in a region of powerful currents, ascending, descending and cyclonic.

The photosphere or luminous surface is generally believed to be what it looks like—a sheet of clouds enveloping the nucleus and consisting of minute drops and crystals formed from those vapors which condense at the highest temperatures. These clouds float in an atmosphere composed of the permanent gases like hydrogen and helium mixed with the more numerous vapors which condense only at far lower temperatures than those that form the clouds. As to the substances which compose the cloud particles, opinions are unsettled.—Professor C. A. Young in Harper's Weekly.

An Odd Globe.

A great globe ornamented with the map of the earth carved in stone decorates the estate of an eccentric Englishman at Swanage. It stands overlooking the sea and is visible for quite a distance. One may walk about it and study it in detail. The plain surfaces, such as the oceans, lakes and deserts, are decorated with Scriptural texts, which are supposed to apply especially to the locality they occupy.

Shooting at St. Louis.

East St. Louis, Ill., Aug. 1.—While Deputy Sheriff Louis Burke was making an arrest Saturday night, Wm. McLaughlin, a packing strike sympathizer, interfered and Burke drew a revolver and shot McLaughlin, killing him instantly.

A short time later two unidentified negroes employed by the packing houses to take the place of strikers, became involved in a quarrel with Otto Swartz and Bud McCandless, striking employes. One of the negroes fired several shots, and the white men were badly wounded.

Drowned in Gatineau.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—Pat Murtagh, 23 years of age, son of a farmer in Hull Township, was drowned in the Gatineau River at Ironsides last night. He was in swimming with a brother and Chas Joiner, and took a cramp and sank. His companions threw a plank to him, but he was unable to catch it.

VON PLEHVE'S FUNERAL

Attended By the Emperor and the Dowager Empress—Czar Was Visibly Moved—Murderer in Prison.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 1.—M. Von Plehve, late Minister of the Interior, was buried yesterday, and in every city and hamlet of this vast Empire church bells were tolled and masses and prayers said for the repose of the soul of the murdered Minister. The services were of an impressive and imposing character. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning high mass was said in the stately chapel adjoining the Ministry of the Interior. Emperor Nicholas and the Dowager Empress stood with the widow and children of the Minister at the foot of a great mound of flowers, on which rested the casket.

Emperor Visibly Moved.

The Emperor was visibly moved, and upon the conclusion of the mass he followed the casket, which was taken upon the shoulders of the ministers and borne down the broad marble staircase to the street. The body was placed in a great white open hearse drawn by six black horses. A black-garbed groom stood at each bridle, and in advance went sixteen similarly clad lantern bearers. The Emperor walked a short distance, but as the Novedevichy monastery, where the burial took place, was over five miles, he soon returned to the Peterhof Palace. It is the custom in Russia to walk at funerals. The sidewalks along the route were crowded, but lines of police kept the streets clear. Fifty thousand people watched the procession.

Murderer Placed in Prison.

The murderer of M. Von Plehve has been removed from the hospital to the Wyborgsky prison. The police decline to reveal his alias, on the ground that it might defeat the ends of justice.

Father of Assassin Arrested.

Helsingfors, Finland, Aug. 1.—The father of Eugene Schaumann, the assassin of Gen. Bobrikoff, Governor-General of Finland, has been sent to St. Petersburg under an escort of gendarmes.

Prof. Gummerus of the University of Finland has been exiled to Russia, being the fourth professor from this institution to be exiled since the murder of Gen. Bobrikoff.

Nothing is known here of Leglo, the alleged name of the assassin of Minister Von Plehve, though rumors are afloat that he was here three weeks ago.

New Target For Bomb.

London, Aug 1.—A special despatch from St. Petersburg to The Agence Rusa says that Count Ignatieff will succeed the late M. Von Plehve as Minister of the Interior.

Nicholas Paulovitch Ignatieff was born at St. Petersburg in 1832, and entered the guard when seventeen years old. Later he was appointed military attache to the Russian embassy in London, and in 1858 was sent on a special mission to Khiva and Bokhara. In 1860 he was appointed Russian ambassador at Pekin, and ambassador to Constantinople in 1864. He was appointed Minister of the Interior under Alexander III., but was dismissed in 1882, though he remained a member of the Council of the Empire. He has since been conspicuous as a leader of the Pan-Slavic party in Russia.

DR. TELFORD ARRESTED.

Charged By Coroner's Jury After a Two Days' Session—Police Looking For A. G. McHarg of Vancouver.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 1.—A coroner's jury, after two days' session, has brought in a verdict charging Dr. Robt. Telford, one of the proprietors of the Bernard Sanitarium in this city, with causing the death of Miss Hattie Bowell, daughter of Collector of Customs Bowell, by performing an illegal operation. Dr. Telford has been placed under arrest.

Warrant For McHarg.

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 1.—A. G. McHarg of Vancouver, who is wanted by the police on a charge of criminal complicity in the death of the late Miss Bowell of Vancouver, daughter of Collector of Customs Bowell, and granddaughter of Sir Mackenzie Bowell of Ottawa, in the Burnard Sanitarium, Victoria, was in Victoria Friday night and is now believed to have escaped to the Sound. McHarg is charged with having taken a prominent part in the procuration of the operation, which, it is alleged, resulted in the death of Miss Bowell, whose body has been exhumed by order of the authorities. The police are searching the city for McHarg.

Beloved By All

A Vancouver paper of July 25, in announcing the death of Miss Bowell, said: The news of the death of Miss Hattie Bowell came as a sad shock to the many friends of the family. Early this morning, after a brief illness, she passed away surrounded by her sorrowing relations. Born in Winnipeg in 1883, she came to Vancouver when her father, John M. Bowell, was appointed collector of customs at this port in July, 1897, and was educated here. Clever and bright, she was greatly beloved by all who knew her.

Killed Near Milton.

Milton, Aug. 1.—Richard Knox was struck by a C.P.R. freight one mile west of Milton, about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, and instantly killed. The body was found by Duncan Reed, who immediately returned to Milton and notified Constable Bradley and Coroner McCall, who took charge of the remains and brought them to Milton. An inquest will probably be held this morning. He formerly resided at 117 Markham street, Toronto, where his mother lives, and was employed by the Toronto Pressed Brick Co.

One Way to Foretell Weather.

There were weather prophets before the weather bureau. A correspondent of the Springfield Republican says that once when Dudley Leavitt, for many years the maker of the New Hampshire Almanac, was driving northward through Nottingham he encountered a farmer hoeing by the roadside.

"A fine morning," said Leavitt.

"Yes," was the answer, "but it's going to rain before long."

There was no hint of rain in the summer sky, but before Leavitt had got through Northwood narrows a heavy shower came down upon him. Wishing to find out how the farmer could predict so exactly, he turned back and found him out in the field again after the rain.

"I should like to know," said the astronomer of Winnepesaukee, "how you could tell so exactly what the weather was going to be."

"Well," said the sage, "when my old ram scratches his ear with his left hind foot in the morning I'm certain 'twill rain before night. Besides, if that old fool of a Dud Leavitt says in his almanac, 'Fair weather may be expected,' I know 'twill be just the contrary."

Sat in the Chair He Will Die In.

"Dutch" Fisher, the condemned murderer from Toledo, sentenced to die July 7, was the subject of a mock execution in the penitentiary at Columbus the other day. At his own request Fisher was taken to the death chair. The clamps were adjusted, the straps tightened and the black cap slipped over his face. He laughed as the cap was taken off. "I'm not afraid of it," he said. "I just wanted to see how it felt. One is certainly locked in tightly." He walked back to the death cell as if he had forgotten how fatally his next "sitting" would result.

What Target Practice Costs.

Cash prizes are offered by the navy department for the best records, and to meet this expense congress appropriates about $200,000 yearly. England appropriates $26,000 for prizes, and in 1900 Germany's budget included an item of $482,000 for ammunition in target practice.

Severe Pains in the Back

Caused from Deranged Kidneys--Now Well and Gives Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1904.

THE TRENT WATERWAY

An Intresting Debate in the House of Commons.

Sir William Mulock—They consume great quantities of grain and the bulk of it is brought in by train. I am told by the grain buyer for that concern, that they were grinding 22,000 bushels of oats per day and were looking forward to a greatly increased output. He told me that the great bulk of it came at present by rail, but nevertheless the canal will serve, and is today serving, a very good local purpose. I mention that to show that the expenditure up to the present is not dead money altogether. As to what should be the policy of the future with regard to that enterprise, it is not a matter that at this day need be regarded as open to any doubt. When the country committed itself to this enterprise by various expenditures, it committed itself to completing the enterprise as rapidly as circumstances would warrant, and we may look forward to the Trent Valley canal in the near future as completed to connect the Georgian bay with Lake Ontario at Port Hope or Trenton, or some other point, which may be determined upon as under all circumstances the best. I had the honor of visiting Peterborough on the occasion of the opening of this lock, and I came away filled with delight at what I saw there. The work itself is a credit to all who had a part in its construction. The only thing I have to regret is that though this enterprise had been pressed upon our predecessors for so many years, their interest in it was chiefly made known on the eve of the election, and that the prosecution of the work seemed to cease on election day. That has not been the case with the present government. We have not made it an election card; we have not made any boasts, but we have steadfastly pursued a policy continuing expenditure on that work, and today there are 120 miles of navigable water. I trust that before long we shall see that canal system completed, and not only interprovincial trade passing through it, but that we shall also see it serving a very important local purpose. I would think that the wisest course to pursue would be for the government at the earliest moment to have a most complete inquiry as to the proper route to connect the system with Lake Ontario and with the Georgian bay, and when a decision is reached proceed with the work vigorously to completion.

Mr. Haggart—The Postmaster General took a great deal of trouble to state that all the progress on this work was due to the present administration. Would the hon. gentleman point out what part of the work his government initiated on the Trent canal? My memory is that all the contracts that are under way at the present time were let by the Conservative government. He says that the government intends to push this work to completion, but look at the paltry vote of $100,000 which they ask for, and which would not pay for the contracts already let. What are these gentlemen doing in connection with making the Trent canal an election issue? When I asked the minister when he was going to let the contract down to the Bay of Quinte, his answer was that it was not routed yet. The Postmaster General says that when they decide where the outlet is to be, the canal will be proceeded with energetically. He is thus in a position to say to the people of Port Hope: Support our candidate if you wish to have the canal at Port Hope; and to the people of Trenton he will say: Unless you behave better than you have in the past there is no chance whatever of having the entrance at the Bay of Quinte. The decision as to the entrance of that canal should have been arrived at long ago. The members of this House should have been told where the entrance was to be before they voted any money. The government now take credit for the lift lock. What had they to do with it? I listened to the speeches them gentlemen made the other day at Peterborough, and the name of the man who started the first lift lock in America was never mentioned. I myself let the contract for the lift lock and decided upon the principle of it, and yet the present Minister of Railways thinks it was all done under the able administration of himself and his Liberal predecessors. They had nothing to do with it. No work has been done on the Trent canal that was not initiated by the Conservative government, and the contracts for it let by that government. The present government had to go on and complete it because the contracts were let. That is the truth of the matter. I am glad to hear the Postmaster General say that this work will be of benefit to the people fo Canada. That is a new idea of his, because when any expenditure on the Trent canal was proposed by the Conservative government, it was denounced by the Liberals when they were in opposition. I say that the expenditure of $4,000,000 on the Trent canal has been returned twice over to the people of that section, and that is true if for no other reason than that it has controlled freight rates. But, Sir, we have no expenditure on public utilities in our section of the country. Poor Ontario fares badly; the public money is reserved for other places. What do you think of an expenditure of $100,000 on the Trent canal, a work which the people of that district have been expecting the completion of for years. Even today the government state that they do not know what route will be taken by the canal. Well, I can tell them that the route is decided. They are within 18 miles of the Bay of Quinte; are they going to stop there and go to Port Hope. I would like to see both routes adopted.

I think it would be better that the canal should be built both to Trenton and to Port Hope; then you would satisfy both sections of the country. However, in my opinion, the work is one of great utility to the people in that section of the country. The expenditure is a justifiable one, and one that will have the result of equalising freight to any man who lives upon any part of the canal and I am glad to hear that this undertaking, for which I let the contracts, has proved a success. I would like from the minister a comparison of the expense of working a lift lock and of working an ordinary lock such as in use in other parts of the country. What is the difference in time and expense of the two systems? We want the fullest information, and I would like parliament to know how this $100,000 which is voted this year is to be expended. Is it to be expended for the completion of the upper lift lock in order to enable us to get communication with Lake Simcoe, or is it intended to expend it in some other way?

Mr. German—Having let the contract the hon. gentleman no doubt decided in his own mind whether or not the canal should go from Rice lake to Port Hope or to Trenton. Did the hon. gentleman or his government decide that question?

Mr. Haggart—There is no doubt that when our government was in it was never thought that the canal was going to Port Hope, but it was urged upon the government that this would be an equally advantageous scheme.

Mr. German—Then you decided against Port Hope?

Mr. Haggart—The hon. gentleman has asked me to give an opinion of the two routes when the government, which he is supporting has not given such an opinion. Do you think the opposition have not as much right to dangle two routes before the people as the hon. gentlemen supporting the government?

Sir William Mulock—What route does the hon. gentleman favor?

Mr. Haggart—Hon. gentlemen say that it is not routed, but would ask the opposition to adopt a particular route. We have not the routing of the canal.

Mr. German—You had it.

Mr. Haggart—And then we proceeded upon a plan and intended to complete that plan.

Sir William Mulock—To what point?

Mr. Haggart—But when these gentlemen got into power they said: No, the canal is not routed at present. They have not surveys or information enough to enable them to determine whether the canal is to go to Port Hope or to the Bay of Quinte. The general election is coming on this fall, and in each section of the country through which the proposed routes run, hon. gentlemen will be able to give assurances to their friends and will send letters into the country: Do your duty by our candidates and we will see that you get justice in the building of the canal.

Sir William Mulock—The ex-Minister of Railways and Canals professes to say that his government really placed under the contract the works which have now been completed, and manifested great energy, zeal and earnestness to complete that work, and if I understood him rightly, he went on to say that the government or himself had decided in favor of the outlet to the canal at Trenton.

Mr. Haggart—I never did.

Mr. Cochrane—No, he did not say any such thing.

Mr. Haggart—I carefully avoided that, and I told the reason why.

Sir William Mulock.—The hon. gentleman says he was working on a fixed policy rapidly to complete that enterprise, and he dropped a remark that Trenton was their destination.

Mr. Cochrane—No, he did not.

Sir William Mulock—I am surprised that the hon. member for East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) should seek——

Mr. Cochrane—I am not surprised because I always advise people to tell the truth.

Sir William Mulock—I am sorry that we have East Northumberland against East Northumberland in this matter.

Mr. Cochrane—You need not say that at all. You have been fibbing to me for 18 years, and I am not going to allow you to do it any longer while I am here.

Sir William Mulock—The hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Haggart) has informed us that he had given great study to this question and was pushing it forward, and he had here stated to us that, according to his conception of the scheme, Trenton is the outlet. I am surprised that the hon. member for East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) does not try to hold him to that expression instead of helping him to escape.

Mr. Cochrane—I will attend to East Northumberland without any help from you.

Sir William Mulock—He is not helping East Northumberland at this moment. But to return to the hon. member for Lanark (Mr. Haggart). After all, what would be the policy of the late Government that began this enterprise in 1890, and in 16 years had expended upon it in all $882,000, or the record of this government, that in eight years has expended $3,200,000 upon it. We have expended nearly four times the amount that my hon. friend's government expended upon it.

Mr. Haggart.—You have expended $3,200,000?

Sir William Mulock—That is what I am told by the engineer. He said that all we have done is to complete the contracts he had let.

Mr. Haggart—I said that.

Sir William Mulock.—I am now speaking on the information of the chief engineer, and my hon. friend will of course bring out any errors and the chief engineer will be obliged to give me the correct information. I will now give the information I have from the engineers who are now present, the chief engineer and Mr. Rogers, the engineer in charge of the work. I wish to show my hon. friend how erroneous he is in his statement that we have practically done nothing except to allow the running on to completion of contracts which he had let before this government went out of office.

We found the following contracts let by the previous government, and we have completed them:—The contract of Brown, Love & Aylmer, the Corry & Laverdure contract, and the Onderdonk contracts. These are the only uncompleted contracts handed down as legacies to the present government. The present government has let the following contracts and there has been expended on these contracts the sums which I am about to mention:

Clarking & Sangster...	$296,860
Dominion Bridge Company, for the lift lock...	211,160
Brown & Aylmer.....	282,660
Central Bridge Co., bridges.....	42,4.0
Dominion Bridge Co., bridges.	4,901
Hamilton Bridge Co...	45,514
Conroy...	7,658
Edward Conroy, for piers, Grand Trunk Railway track...	23,490
James Bogue...	6,625
Battle, for cement...	610
Lakefield Cement Co.....	60,948
Owen Sound Cement Co.....	55,041
Ruthbun Cement Co...	190,441
A. T. Rowley...	14,200
Sola cement...	23,214
Wurtelle cement	5,428
Land damages'...	310,619

These land damages, of course, are not contracts, but are features of the scheme.

Mr. Cochrane—Are there contracts for them?

Sir William Mulock—No, one cannot contract for damages of that character. My hon. friend says that they were determined to carry this scheme through, and, therefore, that we are only completing their work, so that they are entitled to all the credit; that we are simply drifting on with what they commenced.

He says that on the other hand we pronounced ourselves against the scheme, and yet to-day are committed to it. Well, we have heard of the one who said he would not, and yet he did, and of the other, who said he would, and yet did not. To whom belongs the greater credit? My hon. friend the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Haggart), when in office, favored the Trenton route. Out of office he favors both the Trenton and the Port Hope routes. Any gentleman who would voice the opinion of his party as favoring two routes, evidently favoring neither, because he knows that no government would ask Parliament to vote an expenditure for connecting that inland system at the two points.

Mr. Gourley—I would support both routes.

Sir William Mulock—There is another available route as well. That would be three routes. There is the Cobourg route. Is the ex-Minister of Railways going to give the go by to Cobourg? It is true that Cobourg in the last election or two did not support these hon. gentlemen, but prior to that it gave them good support. Why, then, turn their backs on Cobourg?

Mr. Cochrane—You want to help your candidate.

Sir William Mulock—I want to do what is right. It is contended by the people of Port Hope that the surveys made up to date in favor of the Trenton route are not reliable. They contend that their route has not received fair consideration. That may be true or it may not. I am sure that none of the officers who have been giving consideration to the selection of a route would unintentionally do any injustice; but, nevertheless, it is quite possible that the merits of one route may have been so paramount in the minds of the engineers that they paid no attention to a more desirable one. I am not offering any opinion, because I know nothing of the relative merits; but when a great portion of the community, when the people in the eastern part of the county of Durham and the western part of the county of Northumberland assert that they have a more desirable route, is it not the duty of the government to listen to their representations and give them an opportunity to make good their statement. We have received twice of late very influential deputations of prominent men from the county of Durham, urging the government to have a careful examination made of of the topography of their country before reaching a final conclusion. We would not be a representative government if we turned a deaf ear to such an appeal. Therefore, before any government would be justified in committing itself to any special route, it should have unbiased and reliable advice as to which is the better route. This is the course we intend to pursue, and one which will commend itself to the taxpayers of this country. When expert opinion is obtained and all information with regard to the business side of the question, the government will be in a position to decide. Did the ex-Minister of Railways ever have a survey made of the Port Hope route? Did the late government ever have plans and specifications showing the work to be done on the Port Hope route, and a classification of the advantages and disadvantages, or did they reach a decision with regard to the Trenton route, without considering any other? I would like an answer to that question.

To be continued.

DRESS COATS.

Their Cheerful Symbolism in the Family—True Value of Etiquette.

How far or how much should we behave at home as we do in company? Must we be just as much dressed and just as agreeable in family life as in society? Must our husbands and sons wear dress coats at dinner? Yes, if that means they should be just as agreeable and polite as if they were with other folk than their own; no, if it means that they have not time between office business and ward politics to conform to the usual etiquette of attire, provided that at least they have time enough to seem glad to be at home again.

Shall women wear evening dress at the family home dinner? That depends on whether such dress means low neck or only something better than the morning working gown. At any rate, they should "change their dress," as the phrase goes. But how can they do it when they have to prepare and dish a dinner? Just here comes in the advantage of training. If cooking schools had done nothing else than to show women how to cook without getting red in the face, how to have everything got ready when men and children were out of the house and then how to dish the dinner and yet not seem tired (even if one is) and how to be pleasant (when one does not feel so) they yet would have largely contributed by their teaching to the pleasures of home life.

Whether one should or should not wear the conventional evening dress in daily life depends on the style and spirit of the home. Its style—that is, its income—often forbids rigorous application of such costume, though its spirit always commands it, for the sense of welcome, leisure and ease conveyed by evening dress can be nourished just as much by a fresh collar or shirt waist as by a dress coat or a low necked gown. The symbolism of the dress coat is the grace before meals, the thankfulness that one has wife, husband, child, friend, somebody, if only oneself, for whom it is worth while to look as charming as one can. The less attractive one is in appearance—for not all are beautiful—the more need is there of the dress coat symbolism.

In many homes where dress coats cannot abound, as well as in those where they do, the family reserves its bits of news, its choicest anecdotes, its conundrums and jokes for the dinner table. Such conversation makes palatable many an ill cooked dish and is economical in the long run, for a merry mind and heart aid digestion. If we can but realize the higher meaning of etiquette we shall look upon the dress coat as merely the temporary outward sign of permanent inward courtesy of thought which in act we would as eagerly extend to our family as to our guests.

Then when we do accept society's conventions of dress we do so without losing the large simplicities of our heart.—Kate Gannett Wells in Boston Cooking School Magazine.

Why Not Have a Raffia Hat?

It is not such a tedious, difficult matter as most people suppose to make one of those pretty raffia hats that are so popular just now. Of course elaborate designs may be attempted, but the plain woven hat looks as pretty when worn as the more fancy ones. These woven ones may be made in a couple of evenings and are very pretty made up in the wide sailor or trio corner shape and trimmed with bands of velvet or foliage. The raffia, which comes in black, red, green, brown and natural shades, is on sale at the Review Office, which is open every evening.—2d.

Would You?

If you had it to do over again, would you marry?

Of course you would, for if you had your life to live over again you would live just as you have lived.

But if you had known, when young, what you know now, would you marry, as you did?

That, however, is not a fair question, knowing that such a thing is impossible.

Besides, you could have learned from the lives and experiences of others if you had been anxious to know all about married life before entering upon it yourself.

Possibly you were advised this way and that, warned to look out for trouble and assured of complete success. No wonder advice is so cheap; it is so plenty. And who wants anything so cheap that it is given away just to get rid of it?

That's how you felt, no doubt, and that is, or once was, your excuse for doing as you did.

It is better that you didn't take advice from others, for if you had you might now regard them as your mortal foes and blame them for all your troubles and your woes.—Pittsburg Gazette.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S FOOT GUARDS ARRIVE

The Crack Ottawa Regiment Makes Peterborough the Objective Point of a Visit--Camp on Murray-st. School Grounds--Church Parade on Sunday--Sermons by Rev. J. C. Davidson, St. John's and Rev. Father Bader, St. Peter's--The Splendid Band Concert.

The Governor-General's Foot Guards of Ottawa, one of Canada's crack regiments, invaded Peterborough Sunday morning and took up a position on Murray-st. school grounds. It is just thirteen years since this regiment last visited Peterborough, and on that occasion it will be remembered they trooped the colors, and otherwise so conducted themselves as to make the memory of their brief stay here a pleasant one to the citizens. They are here again, and very welcome are they. Everything by way of most hospitable reception is being done by the officers of the 57th Regiment, and by the people of the town, and it is hoped that the visiting regiment's holiday will go down to memory as having been a most enjoyable one. The Foot Guards began their journey from Ottawa about 11 o'clock on Saturday night, by special train, each company occupying a coach. Shortly after seven o'clock Sunday morning the regiment was marching up George-st., with the splendid band playing, on the way to their camp on the Murray-st. school grounds, where tents had been pitched on Saturday afternoon, and everything ready. Counting officers and men of the regiment and bands, the number of visitors was about three hundred and fifty. The officers are Lieut.-Col. Roper, commanding officer; Majors Taylor, Bate and Winter; Capt. Surgeon Kidd, Capt. Quartermaster Rothwell, Major Robinson, of the 21st Regiment, attached; Captains McLean, Graham, Cunningham, O'Hara and McLaren; Lieuts. Prince, Alexander, Bate, Ross and Chrysler; Sergt.-Major Mahoney, Bandmaster Brown, Quartermaster-Sergt. Birtch, Staff-Sergt. Firth, Drill Master Cawardine, Staff.-Sergt. Donaldson, Staff-Sergt. Thoburn. The regimental band consists on the occasion of the band of thirty-five pieces, while the bugle and fife and drum band has about the same number. As the Guards marched to the camp grounds they were admired by many people, who even at this early hour on a Sunday morning were looking with pleased expectancy for the visitors. Representatives of the officers of the 57th, Lieut.-Col. Miller and Major Stevenson, and of the non-coms., the band, and the stretcher bearer corps met the Guards at the station. Accompanying the visiting regiment are nine representatives of the Ottawa Field Battery, a corps which has repeatedly won honors at the annual firing competition, and which last year made way for the Midland Field Battery. The Army Medical Corps was also represented.

The event of Sunday was the big church parade to St. John's and to St. Peter's Cathedral. Both regiments formed in Central Park, and the parade was in the following order:—Representatives of the Ottawa Field Battery and the A.M.C., the band, and officers and men of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, the band and officers and men of the 57th Regiment. The 14th Field Battery was represented by Capt. Ackerman. At Hunter-st. the band of the 57th regiment escorted to St. Peter's Cathedral those of the Guards who desired to worship there. In their scarlet uniforms, and great busbies the visiting regiment presented a very fine appearance. The regimental band has a handsome uniform with deep braidings of gold, and attracted considerable admiration. The bugle band also has a fine uniform and this corps added to the imposing appearance of the regiment.

The organization of the Governor-General's Foot Guards took place on the 7th of June, 1872. One of their privileges is to furnish guards of honor for Parliament and the representatives of the Crown and on great state occasions. By reason of their status, they have precedence over any other regiment. It is noticeable by decorations that there are among the Guards many veterans, and the regiment undoubtedly has a proud record in peace and war. Probably the man who has seen the most service is Major Winter, who was in Egypt, in South Africa, and in the North-West. In the latter campaign at the battle of Cut Knife Hill he was severely wounded, a bullet striking him in the face. There are other very interesting individual records in the regiment. It is without doubt one of the smartest, best-officered and equipped regiments in Canada today and Peterborough is honored in the visit.

The streets were thronged with people when the regiments returned by Hunter and George streets from worship and proceeded to the camp. It was in imposing spectacle. The parade state of the 57th was large, and the appearance of the local regiment came in for much of the praise.

The officers of the visiting regiment were entertained yesterday afternoon and evening by those of the local regiment, and there was also a pleasant sociability among the men of the two regiments. The afternoon was spent, for the most part in visiting points of interest about town.

This morning the Str. City of Peterborough was at the disposal of the men of the two regiments for trips to the lift lock and return. This afternoon the non-coms. of the Guards will be entertained by the local non-coms. on a trip down the river by the Sovereign.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the officers of both regiments and their friends will be entertained at the Golf Club, and this evening a banquet will be given at the 57th officers' mess.

SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S.

The military service yesterday morning in St. John's church was very bright and short, partly on account of the intense heat of the weather. After the militia had been seated, the church rapidly filled with people. The Rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson, conducted the service, and the lesson was read by Lieut.-Col. J. W. Miller.

In beginning his address the Rector said that he had been commanded by the commanding officer to extend on behalf of the 57th Regiment a warm welcome to the visitors to Peterborough, and also on behalf of the citizens, and said he hoped that they would enjoy their visit much more than the previous one, about thirteen years ago. The parks and other places were at their disposal, and he hoped that they would take advantage of them. Their homes, also, were open to all the Guards, and he said the citizens would all be glad to have them call. He announced that in the evening special services were being held for the soldiers in the several churches, and extended an invitation to them from the different pastors.

The speaker chose his text from II Kings, V., 1st verse: "Now, Naaman, . . . a leper." The Rector first referred to Naaman's greatness, and said that the ambition to be truly great was a healthy one. It is one in some sphere and degree that may be realized by every man of ordinary powers, and more especially in the militia. There were different spheres in the advance to greatness, just as Naaman was a great man, but, the speaker said, if you so advance, don't mistake the path. It does not lead by the way of self-assertion and self-advancement. We must embrace with all our hearts the constituted authority, just as Naaman did.

The speaker admired the militia for the splendid opportunities of training in obedience and respect to masters and officers, and the effect produced. Every private has an honorary position in the regiment, and was a very particular part in it. Pte. Perry, for instance, has won for himself a great name, and the speaker paid a high tribute to him. He next referred to the non-commissioned officers, and said they were the backbone of the regiment. These men serve without hoping for promotion, and they are the ones that are in touch with every man in the regiment, and they are constantly assisting the commanding officer. No promotion is true greatness, but true greatness may be achieved just where we stand.

Naaman was an honorable man, and every true heart responds to that word. Success and greatness is never found in a short way. There is a way open in all public and private life and in the commercial world, and it is by fair and square dealing and by being true and just.

Naaman was also mighty of valor. Every man should set his heart on this, whether it is the battlefield or in the everyday life. You will need courage for the unexpected things that happen, and the call well be laid on you to be brave and heroic. It must be the man's heroism and self-sacrifice in the ordinary desire of achievement.

Naaman had a terrible disfigurement—that of leprosy, and in you some day will stand revealed your faults. This leprosy is a terrible thing, but in heathen lands does not prevent advancement, as among the Israelites, where total isolation is made, where total isolation is made, and where it is supposed to be the mark of sin. We have marks in our lives, but we also can get rid of them if we have the enterprise of Naaman and do as he did. He had faith in God and acted accordingly.

In conclusion, the speaker said the words Naaman used, were such as foolish men to-day use. He exhorted the people to give all their advancement and greatness up to the Lord, and in company with the church, fight the good fight of life and lay hold on eternity.

During the offertory an orchestra of the Guards rendered a selection.

SERVICE AT ST. PETER'S.

A body of about one hundred men of the Guards attended worship in St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday morning. They were escorted thither by the 57th Regiment Band, detaching from the main body at Hunter-st. There was a very large congregation in the sacred edifice, and an appropriate address by Rev. Father Bader, of the Redemptionist Order, from Saratoga, N.Y., pointed to the duty of the soldier, as not only a defender of his country, but in being faithful to his God. Rev. Dr. O'Brien was the celebrant in the mass. Rev. Father McColl, in a brief address, welcomed the visitors to the church, expressed the hope that their trip hither would be a pleasant one, and referred to the calling of a soldier as being most praiseworthy when he was true to his Creator as well as to his country.

EDIFYING SIGHT.

Rev. Father Bader, in opening his address, said: "If there is an edifying sight in the Church of God, it is to see a number of men in the presence of their God to show Him His due homage and worship. This is our privilege to-day, to see a number of men, brave men, men who have banded themselves together, who have shown they have the courage to make sacrifices in order to be on the alert to defend their country. But, my dear men, it is not sufficient that you have assumed the uniform of a soldier. There is required that sterling, necessary quality of a brave heart. By the fact of your being here present, I will also assume that this is also a part of your make-up—bravery of heart. Why? Because by your presence in the House of God you show you also acknowledge certain duties that you owe to your God and Creator. The man who honors his God and acknowledges his allegiance to his King, that man alone can be brave of heart and a true soldier. If he will neglect the more sacred duty he will also neglect that towards his temporal master and his country.

FAITH WITHIN THEM.

Why is it that you have come hither? It is on account of the faith that is within you. You know there is another duty higher than to your temporal lord and master—that of bringing homage to your God. He commands us, "Thou shalt keep holy the Sabbath Day." You have acknowledged that commandment and are fulfilling it by being present here, and the motive is the faith that is within you. Rev. Father Bader exhorted them to be men not alone willing to defend their country, but men of faith, first faithful to their God, and they most certainly would be true to their country. Our Divine Saviour tells us that unless we have faith we cannot be saved, and unless we acknowledge God to be God. In order to be a true Catholic you must be enlivened and permeated with that faith which God requires of you. The word faith is sometimes misunderstood. We often hear men saying, "Well, I cannot understand it." My dear men, there is a great difference between believing and understanding. The Catholic faith means that we accept the revealation God has manifested to us as being true, not because we may happen to understand it, but wholly and solely because He has revealed it, solely on account of His authority. Faith has a constant claim upon our daily lives—every day we are required to make an act of faith. How much more willing should we be to make an act of faith in that which God tells us and reveals to us. God cannot deceive, He must be infinitely truthful, otherwise He could not be God. In other words, to be practical, everything you are required to believe in the Catholic Church you believe because God has said so, because He is infinitely truthful, and would not and could not deceive you.

QUALITIES OF FAITH.

We should have a practical faith, relying upon the truthfulness of God. No matter what comes in our way, we should remain firm in our belief. It should not be vacillating. In our daily lives we should have an exclusive faith, everything opposed to it must be rejected. Our faith must be a universal faith, accepting everything that the Holy Church gives to us. We should have a practical faith in our daily lives, not simply being a Catholic man on Sunday, but in our business transactions, in our employments, our work, our relation to our fellow men. Let us also see that we practice Christian charity, that we be honest and just to our neighbor, practical Catholics in the true sense of the word by observing the commandments of God, so that in all our thinking, in all our speaking, doing or acting, we ask ourselves, is this pleasing to God, or not? If I find that God forbids the act, then I will also condemn it, and will not make myself guilty of it. This is living a Catholic life. Do you as soldiers be faithful to your God, and it then follows that you cannot be faithless to your country, your commander, or to your fellow-men.

A REPROACH.

The speaker referred to words of reproach sometimes made with regard to the Catholic Church; that it demanded things of its members which were not compatible with the loyalty of a soldier to his country. On the contrary, said he, the Catholic Church admonishes and exhorts you to remain faithful to your country and to defend your country. As a Catholic is called upon to make a sacrifice in order to be faithful to his religion, so is the soldier called upon to make sacrifices. As a Catholic it it is required of you to be courageous in spite of the jeers and the smiles of ridicule of your fellow-men. To be a soldier you must be brave. If you have practiced this bravery in regard to your God and your religion, it will be easy for you to practice bravery as a soldier. I claim that there is no soldier as brave as a Catholic soldier that is called upon to defend his country with his blood, to sacrifice his life. He first makes his peace with God, and then throwing all cares aside, is not afraid to meet death. God has forgiven him that which has displeased Him, and that man has now peace of soul and may even court death to obtain the peace and the happiness, and the reward which God has promised him for faithful services on earth. Be therefore good practical Catholic men and you will ever be good, loayal, courageous soldier boys.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON'S SACRED CONCERT

IN VICTORIA PARK BY THE BAND OF THE FOOT GUARDS.

The Programme greatly Enjoyed by a large gathering of People—A Splendid Musical Organization

Of course it had to rain yesterday. The water came down in sheets and it looked as if the sacred concert by the Guards' band arranged for the afternoon in Victoria Park would have to be postponed. After an hour's hard work, however, the weather settled down to fitful outbursts and after a while ceased its tearful operations. The splendid band of the Guards, under the direction of Bandmaster Brown gave an excellent programme and delighted the large gathering which had assembled in spite of dampness to hear it. There were thirty-five pieces in the band and the rendition of the various numbers showed well balanced parts, exquisite harmony, a fine expression and musicianly interpretation. The programme opened with a march, "King of the Winds," nicely rendered. With great unity the band played the overtures to William Tell and Poet and Peasant, by Suppi. Other numbers were "Reminiscences of England," cornet solo, "Columbia," (Rollinson), by C. Dunigiy, "Evening Idyls," by Barnhouse; "The Holy City," with cornet solo by J. Barrett; sacred selection, "Joy to the World" by Barnhouse; medley, "Bedelia,"; march, "The Buffaloes." At St. John's church in the morning the band rendered the Andante by Mozart very effectively. The playing of the Guards band is of a very high order. The brilliant execution of the numbers yesterday was greatly enjoyed by the citizens, who have always appreciated similar work on the part of the 57th Regimental band. The musical corps of the Guards is purely a local organization and this fact renders its accomplishments all the more creditable, not only to the men, but also to Bandmaster Brown.

The fife and drum and bugle band has also reached a high degree of excellence and it is not frequent to see such an organization as proficient as they upon the two types of instruments, the fife and the bugle.

57TH. WIN TROPHY

News Announced Yesterday by Major Winters of Ottawa.

After the parade yesterday morning the pleasant news was announced by Major Winters, adjutant of the Dominion Rifle League, that the rifle team of the 57th had been successful in carrying off the trophy of the league for the year, being eight points ahead of the 13th Regt., of Hamilton, and closely followed by the 10th Royal Grenadiers of Toronto, and the Vancouver Rocky Mountain Rifles, of British Columbia, of which Pte. Perry is a member. He congratulated the regiment in a neat speech.

This is the second trophy of the League that the 57th has won, the other one coming here about five years ago. Not many regiments have as good shots as the 57th, and several times they have had the opportunity of going to Bisley.

See T. Hurley on Monday and buy some of the properties he is advertising. Call early as he has to return to Toronto. 1d

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

LOCALS LOST BY 2-1

QUINLAN PITCHED GREAT BALL FOR FIRST ATTEMPT.

Both Teams First Class and made few Errors—No Scoring done until the Eight.

One of the best and closest games of baseball played here this season was played on Saturday afternoon at Nicholl's Oval, and the locals were defeated by Oshawa in a Midland League game by the close score of 2-1. Both teams played excellent ball and only three errors were made, and those by the home team. Quinlan pitched his first league match with the seniors, and certainly made good, as he struck out fourteen and allowed only three hits, and one man to walk. Parker, the visiting twirler, also pitched a good game, abutting out fourteen, allowing one man to walk and giving only 7 hits, which did not prove of very much use. The locals have nothing to be ashamed of in their defeat, as they put up a winning game, but a costly error allowed Oshawa to get in two runs. In the eighth innings McDonald got hurt and Long took his place, and succeeded in scoring the only run. Up to the eighth innings neither team had scored and everyone feared that the game would end that way, but the visitors got in their two.

Hambly was the first to bat for Oshawa and he died at the plate. Crowley and Brockman both grounded to Lamont. T. Pilling for the locals reached first on a safe hit to right field. Lamont and Graham both fanned and Whitcroft grounded to Parker.

Costello and Bowden both were struck out and Cawker grounded to Quinlan. Sheridan, J. Pilling and Earls followed each other out.

In the third Ginnett hit safe to right but was caught at second after a nice throw of Graham's. Giles struck out and Parker grounded to Lamont. McDonald fanned, Quinlan grounded to Parker, and T. Pilling's nice hit to centre was gathered in by Costello.

Hambly again fanned. Crowley walked but was also caught at second. Brockman and Costello reached first but Bowden died. Lamont got first on balls, but was caught stealing second. Graham and Whitcroft did not reach first.

In the fifth, Cawker, Ginnett and Giles failed to reach first. Sheridan hit safely to right but was put out on Brockman's double play to first on J. Pilling's hit. Earls also died at first.

In the sixth Parker fanned, Hambly grounded to Lamont and Brockman fanned. Crowley was left on second. McDonald was struck out, Quinlan grounded to first and Pilling hit a nice two-bagger to left field. Lamont fanned.

Costello and Bowden were struck out and Cawker grounded to Whitcroft. Graham and Whitcroft fanned and Sheridan sent a two-bagger to centre but J. Pilling tapped to Parker.

Billett flew ti right field. Giles fanned. Parker grounded to Whitcroft and Hambly hit safe to third. Crowley sent a two-bagger to right field and Ginnett and Hambly scored. Brockman grounded to Whitcroft, Earls was struck out but Long hit safe to right field and scored on Quinlan's two-bagger to right. Pilling grounded to Giles and Lamont was again struck out.

In the last Cotello Bowden and Cawker fanned the air. Graham did a similar act and Whitcroft got safe on a hit to right. Sheridan struck out and Pilling followed.

MYSTERIES OF NATURE.

Some of the Many Things That Find No Ready Explanation.

Whatever opens up new doors or windows for us into the world about us, whatever widens the field of our interests and sympathies, has some sort of value, says John Burroughs in Country Life In America. But much of the so called nature study opens no new doors or windows. It affords no mental satisfaction or illumination or aesthetic pleasure. It is mainly puttering with dry, unimportant facts and details. Do you know the edelweiss flowers or our own matchless arbutus after you have merely analyzed and classified them? No more than you know a man after having weighed and measured him. The function of things is always interesting. What do they do? How do they pay their way in the rigid economy of nature? How do they survive? Why do the roots of trees flow through the ground like "runnels of molten metal," often separating and uniting again, while the branches are thrust out in right lines or curves?

Why is our common yellow birch more often than any other tree planted upon a rock? Why do oaks or chestnuts so often spring up where a pine or hemlock forest has been cleared away? Why does lightning so commonly strike a hemlock tree or a pine or an oak and rarely or never a birch? Why does the bolt sometimes scatter the tree about and at others only plow a channel down its trunk? Why does the bumblebee complain so loudly when working upon certain flowers? Why does the honeybee lose the sting when it stings a person, while the wasp, the hornet and the bumblebee do not? How does the chimney swallow get the twigs it builds its nest with? From what does the hornet make its paper?

I have never been greatly interested in spiders, but I have always wanted to know how a certain spider managed to stretch her cable squarely across the road in the woods about my height from the ground.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

The aimless life cannot be the endless life.

A rough diamond is worth much polished dirt.

There is no comfort where no compassion is.

They who put pleasure first are the last to find it.

Awkward deeds are better than eloquent dreams.

The finest music heard in heaven is made on earth.

No man ever reached a joy by jumping over a duty.

Wandering afar is not essential to the welcome of home.

Finding flaws in the sermon is easier than following it any day.

People who advertise their troubles never clear off their stock.

There is no promise of pardon for confessing the sins of others.

Living on a Few Cents a Day.

The problem of living on a few cents a day is not so difficult of solution if one cares to limit oneself to the actual necessaries. For instance, we could point to the workers in the turpentine forests, who labor hard from sun to sun on a bill of fare that costs not more than 5 or 6 cents per meal. The average ration of a turpentine "hand" in the woods per week is five pounds of bacon or pork, one peck of cornmeal, one quart of molasses and a pint of salt. The value of this ration is about $1 to $1.10.

The real problem, then, is not really how cheaply may one live, but how many of the extras of eating one is willing to do without.

Surprise the Doctors

Most doctors are astonished at the results obtained by Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema, salt rheum and itching skin diseases which are often considered well nigh incurable. By word of mouth from friend to friend the exceptional merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment have gradually become known until it is now a standard the world over and has a record of cures unparalleled in the history of medicine.

A Scientific Experiment

By Robert C. V. Meyers

Copyright, 1904, by Robert C. V. Meyers

In her rosy room Mrs. Van Stylert felt more comfortable than had been the case for days.

"After all," she said vaguely, "scientific experiments are wonderful things."

She rested her chin on her hands and looked into the flare of the grate with a reminiscent expression in her eyes.

The secretary made up the ten minutes the following day, and, although Mr. Harroway did not put in an appearance, Mrs. Van Stylert was quite difficult; said that the plain manner in which the secretary wore her hair was disgraceful and felt that she could tell her so because she had gone to school with her mother; quite agreed with her secretary, who, she insisted, had so expressed herself, that Tom Harroway was no use in the world and that if he had a grain of manliness in his composition he would attempt a business career. She said she felt she could so criticise the young man in his absence because his father had been one of her earliest beaus.

A few days later, and when this sort of medicine had been given in heroic doses, Harroway came for his cup of tea. He was very cheerful. Mrs. Van Stylert was puzzled, but wisely waited for him to explain himself.

"Well," he said at length, "I have two confessions to make. One of them is that I am going into business. John Templeton will have me for a partner. You know we were graduated together and have always been pals. The other confession is that his sister Charlotte and I"—

"Oh," fairly shrieked Mrs. Van Stylert, "so it is arranged at last! It took a long time, I must say. And now you must tell me all the particulars. Miss Harroway saw her going along in front of him.

Sefton, if you don't mind, we will defer our notes till tomorrow. I shall not need you today."

The girl jumped up.

"Stop!" Mrs. Van Stylert called after her. "Why not come this evening? I shall not go out till 10. Come at 9."

"But," demurred the secretary, "I fear"—

"At 9 o'clock!" loudly repeated her employer. "We can then finish today's work. No objections, if you please."

The secretary took herself away, trembling in every limb. She had no intention of going at 9 o'clock in the evening to do the work which she had contracted to perform from 4 to 5 in the afternoon. And to be spoken to like that before Tom Harroway!

As for Harroway, he was furious.

"Upon my word, Mrs. Van Stylert," he said, "you have needlessly humiliated a lady," and went hastily from the house.

If he expected to see the secretary outside he was doomed to disappointment, for when he reached the street she was nowhere in sight.

Mrs. Van Stylert had her maid fetch her a cup of strong beef tea, she felt so used up.

"Amy thinks I want him to marry Charlotte! And," she said, "hereafter I shall sympathize with every scientific experiment I hear of. And human nature is the same as it ever was! Hold, though! What shall I do when Amy comes tomorrow, for of course she will not come this evening? I suppose I must chance it. I am growing reckless. And Charlotte means to marry the count! Didn't her mother hint as much last night?"

As for the secretary, she had something to think about. And in the warp and weft of her thought was a thread of satisfaction that a young man had seen the folly of being an idler and was about to become a useful member of society. It is always a satisfaction to know that our theories receive support. And, apropos of that young man, what sort of spirit did he think she possessed when she would put up with such treatment as he had witnessed Mrs. Van Stylert inflict upon her? And suppose he was flirting with Miss Templeton! She tossed her head.

She had promised the lady with whom she boarded to go to the opera that night, the lady having had two tickets presented to her by a friend who was hastily called from the city and could not use them.

The thought of Harroway's possible flirtation with Miss Templeton made her feel that she should like to look her best that evening. Her hair was her first care, and she arranged it so as to set off its abundance and color.

"As though it would be in good taste to wear it this way when I am attending to business!" she said loftily.

Next she donned a white gown full of fleeciness and rippling with ribbons. She looked in the glass and was not dissatisfied with the reflection.

It was then 8 o'clock, and she sat down and waited for the lady who was to escort her to the opera. Instead the lady had to go and tumble down the back stairs and received such contusions and abrasions as made it impossible for her to stir from the house that night. Of course the secretary could not go alone, so she started to take off her finery. All at once the enormity of Mrs. Van Stylert's treatment of her struck her more cruelly than ever. Should she keep on accepting that lady's favors? "Not if I had a dozen mothers," she said, "and she had been to school with every one of them!"

She would inform Mrs. Van Stylert tomorrow that she must decline to act as her secretary any longer.

Tomorrow! It was not yet 9 o'clock. Mrs. Van Stylert had commanded her to come to her at 9. Why not go tonight and tell her not to expect her next day and, just as she was, let that arrogant schoolmate of her mother see her possibilities as a well dressed woman?

It was all very foolish, very girlish, but she did not care to be considered a dowdy any more than she would accept gratuitous contumely.

A maidservant was coerced, and, covered with a long cloak, the secretary went forth on an errand prompted by righteous indignation.

At about the same time Mrs. Van Stylert was issuing from her maid's ministrations also in opera array. She seldom courted music until late in the evening, when, as she said, she reached Wagner's agony and soon had it over. She looked up as her secretary entered the rosy room, whose shaded candles cast a most becoming light. Perhaps she had never been so scared in all her life before. She had not expected Amy, and the brilliancy of the girl's eyes and the bloom on her face told her that a battle was imminent.

The secretary eased the clasp of her cloak—there was a pulse in her throat that hurt her. For when she stood in the presence of her mother's old friend who had been of such signal service to her and noted that Mrs. Van Stylert's face now showed kindness and even admiration her courage seemed to ebb from her.

Mrs. Van Stylert was the first to speak.

"I am so sorry, Amy, child," she said, "to bring you out at night. I wasn't in earnest."

Not in earnest! At that the secretary's courage flowed back again. Was she to be made sport of all around?

"I came," she said, "to tell you to look out for another secretary. I am no longer in your employ."

Mrs. Van Stylert regarded her in silence, knowing not what to say, admiring the girl's well arranged hair, her face that was beautiful in its excitement, but, more than all, her spirit and vigor.

Now, Harroway had felt uncomfortable all the early part of the evening. By the time he had dined at the club he was quite of opinion that he should visit at Mrs. Van Stylert's no more. He refused to be a further witness of the humiliation of a poor girl at the hands of the lady who presumed on the fact of his being her heir and so making marriage arrangements for him. Confound the money! First, he must set Mrs. Van right with regard to Charlotte Templeton. She had cut him off when he had begun to tell her about Charlotte's engagement to the count, taking it for granted that he himself was the happy man. A woman like that must not remain uncorrected in such a mistake. And if the secretary thought he was flirting—He wiped the perspiration from his brow.

But why shouldn't he go to Mrs. Van's this evening, not waiting till tomorrow afternoon? By tomorrow some one or other might be already told of his presumed engagement to Charlotte Templeton. It irritated him mightily to think of such a report being attributed to him, even though the mistake might be corrected later on.

He went. On the threshold of the pink room he paused. Inside the two women confronted each other.

"Another thing," the secretary was saying. "You tell me that you have informed Mr. Harroway that I despise him for having no desire to make his way in the world. I never said so. I told you that every man, in my opinion, should do his best to carve out a niche for himself in the world"—

Just then the speaker saw Tom Harroway. Her hand that had clutched the cloak at her throbbing throat faltered, and the long loose garment slid down to the floor, and she stood revealed in a fleecy white gown, a fair vision of girlish charm.

Harroway took a step toward her, she looked so sweet and lovable.

"I should like," he said, "to—that is—I wish to correct something"—

"Nonsense!" interrupted Mrs. Van Stylert in a loud voice, and refusing to let the girl use her as a shield. "I know you are not engaged to Charlotte Templeton. While you may not know it, I am a bit of a scientist, which accounts for my recent behavior toward you and Amy— Ah, I must see my maid!"

She fairly tottered from the room, closing the door after her, noting as she went away that the secretary let Harroway take her hand, the young woman and the young man looking preposterously happy, if somewhat conscious.

In her sleeping room she sank on the side of the bed as her maid ran to her.

"Beef tea!" she managed to say. "I experimented scientifically to see if they couldn't be made to fall in love with each other," and something about going to school with somebody's mother and having somebody else's father for one of her earliest beaus.

At that time in the rose colored room Harroway talked with the secretary.

"I came tonight to have it out with her," he said.

"Oh, did you?" she cried blithely. "I was waiting to see when you should do so. I should never have done it myself if I waited till doomsday, after"—

"After you thought I was flirting with Charlotte Templeton?" he asked admiringly.

She shrugged her shoulders.

"So much of the jest is gone," she said. "Mrs. Van has been playing with us all the time, the mean old dear."

Just then the "mean old dear" rushed into the room. She had found it impossible to keep away.

"Oh," she said, "Amy—Tom—all this has been a scientific experiment. I designed to bring you two together."

"And you succeeded," responded Harroway, taking Amy by the hand, "for we have been married over a month!"

The end.

OUT OF WORK.

Tragedy of Unemployment to the Man Who Is Aging.

The tragedy of unemployment deepens in the case of those men who are visibly aging, passing prematurely into that condition when society has neither use nor regard for their services. The development of the modern city life in its feverish thirst for gain sucks up the activities of the young. Work can always be found for the children. But the man of forty has already become suspect. At fifty there is evidently stretching before him the bleak old age of the unwanted poor. The despairing clutch of the aging at any degrading occupation which before they would have scorned is one of the commonest and pitifulest sights of modern life. I think of those whom I have known, those who dye their hair to keep the appearance of youth, the applicants for positions, their efforts toward respectability, the ink lined coat, the shabbiness concealed, the attempt, always so grotesque and ineffective, to strike the right note between a dignity that will command respect and an eagerness that will become a mere mendicant pleading for aid.

I remember one with a record of over thirty years' consistent service, exhibiting hands twisted and gnarled with disease, who shuffles daily through his work with the help of kindly comrades, fearing each day to be detected. Though the work itself is an agony, the one panic fear is not that he shall be compelled but that he shall be forbidden to continue. I think of others tucked away out of sight in the recesses of tenement dwellings, flung aside from the active machinery of the world, who "cannot quite bring themselves" to join the unemployed processions or solicit a promiscuous charity of the crowd, who cling to the desperate hope that one day the cloud will lighten, the miracle happen that some one will be found desiring their services. This is in no austere and frugal community, with difficulty supporting its children, but amid wealth pouring into its borders beyond the dreams of avarice and such luxury and vain display as can only be paralleled in the later days of Rome.

Guarding the Mouth.

Remember the disgust which overspreads the faces in a railroad car when a woman was seen to give her poodle a drink from the public drinking glass. No one else touched it during that trip, but it is more dangerous and not less disgusting to drink after human beings than a dog. Fortunately most disease germs die easily, and it is chiefly by the quite direct means of contact just suggested that the contagious diseases pass from one to another. If we put nothing into the mouth except what belongs there, we might ride in a car with a diphtheria patient and run no chance of catching the disease. Disease germs do not fly about seeking whom they may devour. The matter of protection is largely in our own hands.—Good Housekeeping.

Hopeless Case.

The forgetful man was stepping jauntily along with a smile on his cheerful face when he was accosted by a friend.

"Look here," said the man. "Why in the world are you carrying two umbrellas?"

"Why, let me think," said the forgetful man. "Oh, yes, I know how it happened. My wife wanted me to get her umbrella that's been mended, and she thought I'd better bring along mine to remind me, it being a pleasant day, and then I thought I'd better bring two in case I stepped in anywhere and happened to forget one of them."

Trapped in Armor.

Trying on ancient armor is not always an agreeable experiment, judging from the experience of a French artist. He had bought a quaint old helmet and put it on his own head to judge the effect. Unfortunately he touched a spring, the visor shut down suddenly, and, being alone in the studio, he could not free himself from the mediaeval head covering without help. At last he ran into the street, where his appearance created considerable amusement till a charitable passerby managed to set him free.—Hour Glass.

CUT RAILWAY CHARGES

Railway Commission Gives Out Several Rulings.

Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company Enjoined Against Charging Higher Freight Rates on Cedar, Etc.—Canadian Freight Classification No. 13 Amended and New Classified 10th Class in Carloads—Wallaceburg Factories Benefit.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—The Railway Commission has given out several decisions. In the matter of Scobill vs. the Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company, the latter is enjoined against charging higher freight rates on cedar timber and its products, such as fence posts, ties, telegraph poles, etc., than on other timber and the products thereof of like description, and the railway is ordered to revise its freight tariffs accordingly, so that the tolls on cedar lumber, cedar posts, etc., shall not be higher than on pine, hemlock and other kinds of lumber, poles, etc.

An order is also being issued that Canadian freight classification No. 12 is to be amended so that rails, fence posts, telegraph poles and ties of all descriptions, which are now carried by Canadian railways by special contract only, shall be added to the list of commodities which are included in the term common lumber, and are classified 10th class in carloads.

In the case of the Sutherland-Innes Company and the Wallaceburg Cooperage Company, manufacturers of cooperage stock, at Wallaceburg, Ont., and other points, it is ordered that the railways must carry cooperage stock at the same mileage tariff rates as common lumber; and further that coperage stock from Wallaceburg, etc., to Montreal, be carried, in carloads, at the rate of 16½ cents per 100 pounds for local delivery, and 18 cents per 100 pounds, including Montreal cartage and port charges when for export. The present rates are 18 and 19½ cents respectively.

In the case of the Sydenham Glass Company of Wallaceburg, Ont., who applied to the Commission for relief in connection with shipments of glass bottles in carloads, railways are directed to reduce their rates to the following basis, namely:

To London, 8 cents per 100 pounds.

Toronto, Hamilton and Berlin, 13 cents.

Montreal, 23½ cents per 100 pounds, exclusive of cartage.

The present rates are 18 cents to Toronto, 19 cents to Hamilton and Berlin, and 25 cents to Montreal.

WROTE HIS REPLY.

Mr. Arnold-Forster, Secretary of War, Answers Mr. Runciman.

London, Aug 1.—In a written reply to a question by Mr. Runciman as to the number of British troops stationed at Esquimalt and Halifax, the annual cost and what contribution is made by the Canadian Government, Mr. Arnold-Forster, the Secretary of War, says there are 362 at Esquimalt, and the annual cost is £44,200, half of which is contributed by the Canadian Government. There are 1,785 at Halifax, and the annual cost is about £20,500. There is no Canadian contribution.

Hon. Mr. Lyttelton, addressing the members of the British Medical Association at Leamington, said no men were doing more splendid work on behalf of the Empire than the medical men of the colonies in attacking diseases fatal to those in the administration of Britain's tropical possessions. The meeting in 1905 will be held at Leicester. An invitation to Toronto was under consideration.

TEMISKAMING RAILS.

Soo Mills Ask For Contract and Commission Is Considering.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—The Temiskaming Railway Commission held a session on Saturday at which a proposition was made on behalf of the reorganized Lake Superior Company of Sault Ste. Marie to supply the steel rails for the remaining portion of the Temiskaming Railway to be constructed to the junction with the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. J. K. Drummond of Montreal, appeared on behalf of the Soo Company and assured the commissioners that it would be able to supply the required material.

Robert Jaffray, chairman of the Commission, stated that the proposition was under consideration, and the Commission would make known its decision at a later date.

BELZ RODE TO DEATH.

Toronto Loop-the-Loop Performer Succumbs at Buffalo.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—People who a fortnight ago were watching the performance of "leaping the gap" at Hanlan's Point will regret to learn that Oliver Belz, the young fellow who made a rather sensational debut at the game, has had his adventurous career cut short by death.

Belz was injured at Crystal Beach, near Buffalo, on Wednesday, the wheel slipping over the runway, precipitating him some 40 feet to the ground. He received a depressed fracture of the vertebrae, and was partially paralyzed. He died on Saturday morning.

Found Baby's Body.

Toronto Junction, Aug. 1.—While Charles Oakes, a C.P.R. conductor, was walking across the vacant lot between Hoskin avenue and Victoria streets, which adjoins the C. P. R. property, about 1 o'clock yesterday, he found the body of a small child lying in a cluster of weeds. The remains were those of a new born female child and were wrapped in an old apron. Dr. Clendenan will hold an inquest.

Will Run For Presidency.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 1.—In a telegram received here Saturday, Thomas E. Watson of Georgia states that he will accept the nomination for President, recently tendered him by the national Populist convention.

A DEMAND BY GERMANY

Unless Complied With Minister Will Leave August 4.

Venezuela a Slow Payer—Surprise Expressed at Washington at the Latest Phase of the Situation, and Officers There Think Belgium Item of Protocol Should Remove Necessity of Any Arbitrary Action By a Signatory Power.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, Aug. 1.—It is reported that Herr Pelldram, the German Minister at Caracas, has delivered an ultimatum demanding the immediate payment by the Venezuelan Government of the interest on the amount of the award to be paid to Germany as stipulated in the protocol signed by Herbert W. Bowen, representing Venezuela, in February, 1903. If this demand is not complied with, the report says, the Minister will leave Caracas, Aug 4.

Surprise at Washington.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Not a little surprise is evinced here over the news from Willemstad, as the general impression has been that President Castro was meeting the demands of the protocols signed by Mr. Bowen. Germany, Italy and Great Britain, according to the decision of The Hague Tribunal, were to have preferential treatment in the payment of their claims against Venezuela, after which the non-blockading powers were to be paid.

All the payments were to be made out of 30 per cent. of the customs receipts of the ports of La Guiara and Porto Cabello. Some reports which have reached here have intimated that a full 30 per cent. of the receipts at the two ports named were not being set aside for the payments of the claims as provided. This may have a bearing on the action which is said to have been taken by the German Minister.

At the same time provision also was made that if Venezuela failed to keep the terms of the protocol the Belgian Government was to take charge of the customs at the ports named and administer them until the claims of the powers were settled along the lines agreed on. This the officers here think, should remove the necessity for any arbitrary action by any of the powers signatory to the protocol.

PREMIER ROSS HOME.

Says He Had a Good Time and Looks Well Again.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—Hon. George W. Ross, Premier of Ontario, arrived in the city from Buffalo on the 4.10 train Saturday afternoon. He was evidently feeling very well, and looked as if his prolonged visit at Hot Springs, Virginia, had benefited him greatly. His color was remarkably healthy. "I have had a most enjoyable time and am extremely well pleased with my trip and with the results," he said.

UPHEAVAL IN BOGOTA.

Rumor Circulates That High Officials Have Been Declared Traitors.

Colon, Aug. 1.—News from the coast of Cartagena says rumors are in circulation of an upheaval in Bogota.

President Marroquin and President-elect Reyes are, the rumor says, declared to be traitors, and Congress has been closed. Few boats come down. The Magdalena River is dry.

The town is frantic. The people of Cartagena are anxiously awaiting confirmation of the rumors.

Trolley's Collide.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 1.—By an accident Saturday night on the Rochester, Charlotte and Manitou Railroad, a trolley road running from Ontario Beach, a distance of about 11 miles, thirteen persons were seriously hurt, three or four, it is feared, fatally. The trains came together at full speed. Among those hurt is Anna Blakeley, Madoc, Ont., whose right kneecap was torn off and ligaments crushed, leg will have to be amputated.

G.T.R. Fireman Killed.

Hamilton, Aug. 1.—Arnold F. Stonehouse, a fireman on the Grand Trunk, died in this city Saturday night from injuries received by being struck by an express train at Burlington. The unfortunate young man, who is about 25 years of age, while he was standing on one track watching a C.P.R. express pass, going to Toronto, a G.T.R. express from Toronto struck him. On his arrival here he died.

Killed By a Train.

Woodstock, Aug. 1.—Robert Watson, residing on the Puslinch side of the town line, of East Flamboro, met with an untimely end Saturday afternoon. He was crossing the C. P.R. track when the train struck him, and threw him off to the side. His neck was broken. The deceased was 83 years of age, and nearly a long life resident of Puslinch. He leaves a large family.

Ottawa Loses 10 Hotels.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—On Saturday night ten hotels in Ottawa shut up shop as the result of having the licenses cut off in conformity to the bylaw passed by the City Council reducing the number of licenses.

FRANCE AND THE VATICAN.

The Note Which Severed the Relations Between Them.

Paris, Aug. 1.—The note severing the relations between France and the Vatican was couched in the following terms.

"After having on several occasions pointed out the serious blows struck at the Government's rights under the concordat by the Vatican, dealing directly with the French bishops, without consultation with the power with whom the concordat was signed, and seeing that the Pontifical Secretary of State, in his reply of July 25, affirmed those proceedings, the Republican Government has decided to conclude official relations which, at the Holy See's desire, has become objectless."

Papal Secretary of State Merry Del Val replied that an order to leave Paris would be telegraphed to Mgr. Lorenzelli. The Nuncio left Paris last night on his way to Rome.

Joe Martin is Dignified Hole.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 1.—Because his invitation to attend the opening of the Westminster Bridge did not include the official luncheon Hon. Joseph Martin wrote Premier McBride declining to accept. His reply says: "I have looked over the program as set out in your invitation, and it would appear that the only item on the program that is not open to the public at large is an official luncheon at 2 p.m. I also find by the slip enclosed that your invitation does not cover this item. Under the circumstances, therefore, I cannot see that any invitation at all is extended, and as the honor seems a most empty one, I must decline it."

Another British Bye-Election.

London, Aug. 1.—Joseph Chamberlain's prestige has sustained another damaging blow from the Oswestry election, where a Liberal free-trader was returned for the first time. Oswestry lies within the electoral zone known as the Birmingham sphere of influence, and is the first seat to be won by the Liberals within that sphere. The Unionist candidate was a Chamberlainite protectionist. Chamberlain wrote him a strong letter of recommendation.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

To Mr. R.A. Anson, by his Fellow Employees of the C.G.E.Co.

On Saturday there was a gathering of men from the C.G.E. Co., of town, to bid farewell to a fellow employe who was severing his connection with local interests.

The chair was taken by Mr. M. Mowry, who called Mr. R. A. Anson forward, and briefly communicated to him the object of the meeting and conveyed to him the feeling of the men of the works. Mr. Anson has been for some years foreman in the machine shop, and has won for himself the regard of the men and the esteem of his employers, and these things were pointed out by the chairman, who also added hearty wishes for his success in the future. Mr. Anson goes to England for a holiday and to look up old associations and returns to take up work further west.

The following address was read by Mr. W. A. Patterson, and the presentation of a Masonic keystone pendant and gentleman's shaving outfit was made by Mr. R. Shepherd, each of these gentlemen making a few suitable remarks.

To Robert Anson, Esq:

Esteemed Friend,—Once more we are called upon to bid farewell to one who has come into our midst and been accepted in our heart of friendship. He came, he saw, he conquered. Now he leaves us, and sad are the hearts that are left behind.

Robert Anson, we are bidding farewell to you, a comrade-at-arms in the field of labor, understanding that you visit your motherland and again return to Canada, but not to us.

We all appreciate the many acts of kindness shown by you while foreman with the Canadian General Electric Company, and on this eve of your departure, we ask you to accept this memento as a token of our regard and a remembrance of the friends you leave behind.

Farewell, and may your future be bright and prosperous.

Signed S. Drury, J. Wilson, R. H. Shepherd, F. E. Derrick, M. Mowry.

Mr. Anson replied in suitable terms, and referred to pleasant relations at all times existing between himself and the men in the department, and which he ascribed largely to the good sense and loyalty of the men.

During the evening songs were sung by Mr. R. Shepherd, Mr. M. Anson, Mr. Bert. Turner, and a recitation was given by Mr. E. Desautel. The meeting broke up with cheers and congratulations for Mr. Anson, and hopes for a pleasant trip.

REV. JONATHAN BASTOW'S AFFECTIONATE GOOD-BYE

His Farewell Sermon to People of Murray-st. Baptist Church.

Rev. Jonathan Bastow, who for the past five and a half years has been pastor of the Murray st. Baptist church, said good-bye to the congregation last evening, the appropriate text of his sermon being the words of Paul to the Ephesians, "And now, brethren, I commend you to God and to the Word of his Grace, which is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among them that are sanctified." The speaker delivered an inspiring parting message, filled with beautiful thought, appreciative expression and sound advice. The congregation was very large and listened with great depth of feeling to the partings words of one who had identified himself so largely with the life of the people in Peterborough, as a minister of the gospel, as a man and a good citizen. At the conclusion of the service Lieut.-Col. E. B. Edwards and Dr. Scott on behalf of the congregation presented Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Bastow with an address and well-filled purse as tokens of appreciation, and Rev. J. C. Davidson and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt gave voice to the very kindly relationships existing between the members of the Ministerial Association and Rev. Mr. Bastow during the past five years and a half. Many people took occasion to personally say farewell to Rev. and Mrs. Bastow, whose purpose is to leave Peterborough, probably next Wednesday. Prior to his address Rev. Mr. Bastow stated if there were any present who had given their hearts to Christ and wished to make open profession of their faith it would be great joy to him to baptize them before leaving town.

PAUL'S FAREWELL.

Rev. Mr. Bastow read as the evening's lesson the 20th chapter of Acts and selected the 32nd verse upon which to base his farewell address. Paul, he said, was closing his three-year pastorate when he uttered these words to the leaders of the church at Ephesus. This was the longest stay with any one church that was known of in Paul's life. He was pre-eminently the apostle to the Gentiles and had been the means of planting and building up thoroughly the church at Ephesus. He had instructed them wisely, loved them tenderly, yet counselled with them in public and private and helped them in all ways in which it was best to keep his fellowmen and especially his fellow-Christians. The church had become very strong and from it a powerful influence had emanated round about. He could not now go to Ephesus himself, but summoned the representatives of the church at Miletus. He had preached the whole truth to them, and had exemplified the gospel in his life. It was always a grand thing when a man's preaching and life were in perfect accord.

It was this ministry of Paul's that Rev. Mr. Bastow said he had held before himself during the time he had been here, though he felt that his ministry had fallen far below the example. The farewell of Paul was one filled with sorrow and joy—that though they would see each other no more in the flesh, they would meet in a better land where partings would be no more. We scarcely know how much interest we have cherished until we begin to think of saying good-bye and then we begin to realize how much love there has been in our hearts and we begin to appreciate the more the services that have been rendered. Still these partings were among the most precious and inspiring recollections and Christians especially have in connection therewith a feature that overshadows the pain of parting to some extent, —our communion with Christ, which cannot be broken by distance or time. We may meet in the flesh again, but we certainly shall meet in the better land, where all our imperfections shall be taken away and our excellencies shall be developed in the highest and best degree.

FEELINGS EXPRESSED.

Paul's farewell might be properly called a pastor's farewell to his flock, especially that particular sentence chosen as his text. The speaker had never preached from that text before yet he did not know of a single sentence in the whole Bible that expressed his feelings as perfectly towards his congregation. He first pointed to the tender, affectionate spirit breathed in the sentence. Paul called the leaders brethren, and this was certainly the feeling he had in his heart. We are all brethren and God is the father of us all. Nowhere except where the Bible has not got, has this spirit of brotherhood never been thought of and wherever it had entered it had destroyed that bitter enmity, that awful cruelty which was usually the outcome of differences of nationality, color or creed. It realized for man the spirit of justice, kindness, patience, self-sacrifice and mutual helpfulness. Rev. Mr. Bastow said he had looked upon all people as his brethren, whether they were members of his church or not, and he thought that the people had recognized that fact.

BROTHERHOOD OF SAINTS.

There was another and higher sense in which this word has been used—the brotherhood of Saints in the Kingdom of God. These saints at Ephesus had been born into the kingdom, they had been made partakers of the divine nature, regenerated and sanctified, members of the divine family. Therefore the word brother meant a great deal when spoken by Paul in this latter sense and it meant a great deal for all to think that they were bound together by the blood of Jesus Christ, by the sanctifying grace of God and in the end made partakers of the heavenly life.

The people at Ephesus recognized in Paul also their spiritual father, and this was one of the strongest ties that bound him to them. The speaker pointed to the life of Paul as being that of the model pastor ready to help and guide and protect his people under all circumstances of life. The speaker also made application of the tender attention of Paul and his deep concern for the spiritual safety of his people and he warned them earnestly and tenderly as he looked into the future, reminding them of the place of safety. The fact was emphasized that that permanency of the church did not depend upon the pastoral relation. God was an ever present and mighty director, and the speaker said he did not feel concerned for that church if it would only follow the leading of God. He urged them to cultivate the consciousness of the presence of God, walk with him, get nearer to him all the time. He commended to them the Bible as God's guidebook, reading and teaching it in the Sunday School, in the home, as a perfect revelation of God through which His spirit finds access to the heart. God alone was able to build up His temple after His own image. The heritage, the birthright, was an inheritance among the sanctified. We shall be satisfied when we get into Gods' presence. It is not for me simply, but for everyone. We may have it by simply confessing our sins, asking God's pardon, putting ourselves in His hands, and if we are sincere in this, though we may stumble and fall in many ways, we shall find we are better and getting nearer to the heavenly kingdom.

During offertory, the choir sang very effectively the anthem, "Consider and hear me," Mrs. J. B. Miller taking the solo.

THE PRESENTATION.

At the conclusion of the sermon Dr. Scott and Lieut.-Col. Edwards ascended the platform and signified their intention of carrying out the wish of the congregation with regard to the departure of their pastor. Mrs. Bastow also came to the platform at their invitation and Lieut.-Col. Edwards read the following address:

To the Rev. Jonathan Bastow—

The members of the Murray street Baptist church, Peterborough, desire to place on record an expression of their high appreciation of the very valuable services which have been rendered by you during the period of five and a half years of your pastorate of this church. It has been a period of growth and progress in every branch of church work. During this time the church has grown in membership from 199 to 323, over 200 new members having been received and of these 110 have been received by baptism. The Sunday School and all other organizations connected with the church have grown in numbers and in spiritual life and interest. The interest in missionary work has increased in at least in proportionate rate. You have proved yourself an able minister of the gospel and a very faithful, active and zealous pastor. You have taken a high place as a citizen of this community and have gained to a marked degree the esteem and respect of the people of all the churches of the town. You have ably represented this church in the Association and in the Convention and have done good service to the Baptist cause in Canada.

The members of this church greatly deplore the loss which they will sustain in the removal of both yourself and Mrs. Bastow from their midst. Mrs. Bastow has in the Woman's Circle, in the Sunday School, in the Mission Band, and in every department of church work proved herself a true help meet to the pastor. In the Sunday School especially, in which she has filled the position of Assistant Superintendent she will be greatly missed. Her influence in leading and guiding many boys and girls into the right path, her zealous work and bright example of Christian activity have been an inspiration to others, and the position which the School occupies to-day may be largely traced to her influence and efforts.

This church will always hold both you and Mrs. Bastow in affectionate remembrance and will wish you both many years of blessed service for the Master.

Signed on behalf of the congregation,

W. D. SCOTT,
GEO. COCHRAN.

Peterborough, July 31st, 1904.

THE REPLIES.

In his reply Rev. Mr. Bastow expressed himself as greatly obliged for the very kind words. He was accustomed to composing and knew what it cost to put things so nicely and strongly as had been done. His sermon had been somewhat of an indication of the place occupied in his heart by his people. Had it not been that he loved them he could not have worked with them so long, so heartily and willingly. It was a great joy now to see so much appreciation expressed more tangibly than ever. He would remember his people here with great interest wherever he went, for he felt that he had here a large number of friends who he could not help feeling would be strong and lifelong. He did not wish to go into particulars with regard to his work, for he had been most gratified with the progress of work among the young people and in this he said he had been greatly assisted by Mr. Roddon. Mr. Bastow was thankful also to say that the ministers of the town had treated him with the utmost courtesy, having made him president of their Association for two years. He had not been accustomed to be in close fellowship with ministers of the Church of England, but here they had been his special friends. The general public, the press, had treated him with great kindness, and in conclusion he said he was pleased with the general spirit and morality of the town and expressed best wishes for its prosperity. He thanked them for the kindly references to Mrs. Bastow.

Mrs. Bastow made a very feeling reply expressive of the great happiness which the past five and a half years had been to her. It had been said to her that upon coming hither from the United States she would not find the same high standard of civilization. This she had been delighted to find was an entirely erroneous idea and she had learned a great deal about a people, and a nation she otherwise would not have known. The interests of the people here had become her interests and she felt that her heart had been deepened and enriched. She thanked them for their kindness expressed in so many ways.

KINDLY EXPRESSIONS.

Rev. J. C. Davidson was present and upon being invited to speak said he was pleased to acquaint the congregation that a most unanimous resolution had been passed by the Ministerial Association expressing deepest regret that the town was losing the services of Mr. Bastow, who had endeared himself to every minister in town. He referred to the happy relations existing in the Ministeral Association, the growing feeling of fraternity therein, the unity of purpose in the cause of Christianity, keeping in view the great wide fields of Christian experience and effort. The town of Peterborough, he said, would certainly be the poorer for the departure of Mr. Bastow and whoever his successor, his trust was that he would not only work for the Baptist congregation, but would, like his predecessor, have a broad conception of Christianity and would work for the wider church of the living God.

Rev. E. A. Langfeldt of St. Luke's said he had asked Mr. Bastow for the privilege of being present to pay his tribute to one who had always been dear to his heart and whom he had always looked up to as a father in Christ. Rev. Mr. Langfeldt said he agreed with every word that had been said and was perfectly convinced that wherever Mr. Bastow went he would shed abroad a blessing and would be a help to everyone he came in contact with, to his church and to the community. His hope was that Mr. Bastow's successor would be as good a man.

The service closed with Mr. Bastow's two favorite hymns, "Blest be the tie that binds," and "There's a land that is fairer than day."

An Old Fashioned Salve.

An old recipe used for over 100 years in the writer's family and excellent for gatherings, cuts, chilblains, etc., is made thus: Put one-quarter of a pound of pure beeswax, one-quarter of a pound of rosin and one-quarter of a pound of mutton suet (freed from all skin) into a jar and place the jar in a saucepan of boiling water. When the mixture has thoroughly dissolved stir and pour it into little pots or jars. It is an old fashioned but most effective remedy.

Recasting His Phrases.

"It's curious that women are never great poets or great musicians," said Mr. Meekton.

"What did you say?" asked his wife.

"I was merely remarking that women are too sensible to squander their energies on poetry and music to the extent that some men do."

Justifiably Jilted.

Boggs—Why did Toggs break his engagement with Miss Sadbird? Jeggs—Because when he took her for a walk up Fifth avenue he found that none of the men stared at her.

Got His Wish.

Tommy — Ma, I wish you'd gimme some cake. Mother—Tommy, didn't I tell you not to ask for any cake? Tommy—I ain't askin'. I'm just wishin'.

There is no impossibility to him who stands prepared to conquer every hazard. The fearful are the failing.

FAMOUS BATTLE SONGS.

Two Instances Where the Tide Was Turned by Singing Them.

There are two instances on record of a battle being won by a war song. In the fifth century Germanus, bishop of Auxerre, and Lupus, bishop of Troyes, were sent into Britain to refute the doctrines of Pelagius. During their stay in this island the Picts and Scots, hearing that the Roman legion had been withdrawn, commenced hostilities, and drove the Britons from the northern to the more southern parts of the island. Germanus, at the request of the hard pressed islanders, led them against the Picts and Scots, who had advanced as far as Mold, in Flintshire.

The bishop, having been a military commander in his youth, placed his men in an advantageous position and then started one of the songs of the church. This song began at the commencement of the battle, and so vociferously did the Britons sing the refrain, "Hallelujah," that the hills, echoing with the sound, terrified their enemies and caused them to flee in all directions. This was called the hallelujah victory. The date is fixed by all historians at A. D. 429.

The second instance occurred on the 6th of November, 1792, when the French, under Dumouries, encountered the Austrians at Jemmapes, in Belgium. The day was going dead against the French, when Dumouries ran out to the front and raised the "Marseillaise." Forty thousand voices instantly took up the chorus, and, inspired by the magic of the battle song, the French rallied and fell so furiously upon the Austrians that the tide of battle was completely turned and victory given for defeat.

The Silence of Butterflies.

After all, the chief charm of this race of winged flowers does not lie in their varied and brilliant beauty, nor yet in their wonderful series of transformations, in their long and sordid caterpillar life, their long slumber in the chrysalis or the very brief period which comprises their beauty, their lovemaking, their parentage and their death. Nor does it lie in the fact that we do not yet certainly know whether they have in the caterpillar shape the faculty of sight or not, and do not even know the precise use of their most conspicuous organ in maturity, the antennae. Nor does it consist in this—that they of all created things have furnished man with the symbol of his own immortality. It rather lies in the fact that, with all their varied life and activity, they represent an absolutely silent world. • • • All the vast array of modern knowledge has found no butterfly which murmurs with an audible voice and only a very few species which can even audibly click or rustle with their wings.—T. W. Higginson in Atlantic.

Material Used in Making Note Paper.

It is not a pleasant thought that the brilliant white note paper which your hand rests upon may have in it the fibers from the filthy garment of some Egyptian fellah after it has passed through all the stages of decay until it is saved by a ragpicker from the gutter of an Egyptian town, and yet it is a fact that hundreds of tons of Egyptain rags are exported every year into America to supply our paper mills. At Mannheim, on the Rhine, the American importers have their ragpicking houses where rags are collected from all over Europe, the disease infected Levant not excepted, and where women and children, too poor to earn a better living, work day after day, with wet sponges tied over their mouths, sorting these filthy scraps for shipment to New York. Our best papers are made of these rags and our common ones of wood pulp, which is obtained by grinding and macerating huge blocks from some of our soft wooded forest trees.—National Geographic Magazine.

Taking a Look
INTO AUGUST

A Lively Forecast

August is the month to make a dollar do duty for two at the Golden Lion. As the ranks of the summer goods get thinner, the prices get slighter and slighter.

Saving is rampant all over the store. Here is a woman buying a skirt that she has been longing for for two months, and it costs her half what it would two months ago. Here is a prudent one buying three Shirt Waists at their reduced prices and tucking them away for next summer.

That is the "why" and the "how" of August bargains here.

The low prices make it very easy for you to finish out the Summer with a new hat and other Dress Accessories, for there is a sharp cut in every department of Fair's.

If we're not making money we're making friends. Doing lots of business with little money in it, but clearances are absolutely necessary. That's how we look at it. The extraordinary bargains we will offer this month will attract many friends permanently to the store.

It costs quite a little to pack and store away odds and ends that accumulate at the end of a season's business, and it ties up a lot of capital, too.

Is it any wonder, then, that this progressive store wants to save all such items of expense, and that we are willing to lose our profit for the sake of a clear stock and the ready money?

Now is the time. This is the month that the price tickets speak loudly at FAIR'S.

DECISIVE BATTLE RAGING

Kuropatkin's Army Has Been Retreating Northward.

RUSSIAN REPORT IS OMINOUS

Causes Much Solicitude at St. Petersburg--Their Army Cut in Two--Japanese Charged Heights of Kangwa Pass With the Bayonet.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 2.—A report from an apparently reliable source late last night is to the effect that General Kuropatkin's main force had been rapidly moving north for several days.

According to this report, no troops proceeding to the front from Russia had gone past Harbin in the past three days. They will be detrained there, and every available piece of rolling stock will be rushed south empty for the removing of troops at Liaoyang and other points to the northward, leaving a skeleton force to contest the Japanese advance at vital positions.

Army Cut in Two.

London, Aug. 2.—A despatch to a news agency from Tokio says there is reason to believe that, after two days' fighting, the Japanese occupied Simoucheng, thus cutting off General Stakelberg from General Kuropatkin.

Kuroki Succeeds.

London, Aug. 2.—The correspondent of The London Times with Gen. Kuroki in the field, in a despatch dated July 31, says:

"This army began a general attack at daylight to-day, which lasted until sunset. The Japanese centre took the town, capturing the enemy's northeastern positions.

"The left advanced and occupied a position jeopardizing the Russian right.

"The Japanese right carried the position against superior numbers.

"There was tremendous artillery firing throughout the day, and the infantry finished with a brilliant march under the enemy's shrapnel.

"I believe that the Russian position will be untenable to-morrow."

Successful Near Haicheng.

Tientsin, Aug. 2.—It is reported here that Gen. Kuroki was successful in the battle fought near Haicheng Sunday.

Decisive Battle Begun.

St. Petersburg, Aug 2.—At last the decisive battle of the campaign seems to be in progress. Having completed his enveloping movement of the Russian position, General Kuroki has ordered simultaneously an advance from all points against Haicheng and Liaoyang. Fighting is raging on both fronts, and still continues. The latest reports contain nothing yet confirmatory of the rumors that General Kuropatkin has been defeated.

According to Kuropatkin's official despatch to the Emperor, the battle began for the possession of the important position at Simoucheng, which is located at the juncture of the Fengwangcheng and Fluyen roads. Two separate armies were launched from the east above the two roads, while a third, under General Ku, moved up east of the railroad from Tatchekiao to try to cut off the Russian force there from Haicheng. If the latter move is successful this force will be crushed.

A portion of General Kuroki's army at the same time advanced against General Keller's positions at Ikhavum, east of Liaoyang, trying the favorite Japanese plan of outflanking him on the right. Still further north on the Saimatsze-Liaoyang road, the Japanese moved forward against Yentalatze (25 miles from Liaoyang). At all points the Japanese employed artillery to the best advantage.

General Kuropatkin's situation will be desperate in the event of his defeat. The keenest anxiety is felt at the war office for news of the progress of the battle. The general staff seems utterly dumbfounded at the number of men the Japanese possess, and consequently Kuropatkin's statement that they are landing another heavy force at the port of Newchwang, adds to the solicitude.

Japs Landed Off Yinkow.

The Emperor yesterday received a despatch, dated July 31, from Gen. Kuropatkin, in which he says: Intelligence has been received of a considerable number of Japanese landing off Yinkow under the cover of several warships.

Charged Heights With Bayonet.

Haicheng, Aug. 2.—The Japanese on Saturday attacked the heights of Kangwa Pass, the right of the Russian position at Simoucheng. Under cover of their artillery, the Japanese infantry charged, but the Russian guns drove them back in confusion and silenced two of their batteries. The Russian losses were slight.

On Saturday night the Japanese made a desperate assault on Kangwa Heights with the bayonet, and a hand-to-hand fight ensued, but the Japanese were again repulsed, fleeing down the hill in confusion.

The Japanese renewed the attack at daylight Sunday, training all their guns on Kangwa Heights. The Russians are holding all their positions at the hour when this despatch was sent from Haicheng.

An Artillery Duel.

Liaoyang, Aug. 2.—Artillery firing occurred at Simoucheng Sunday. It is reported that the Japanese retired. Trains are running half way between Haicheng and Tatchekiao. The reports of skirmish fighting along all parts of the front are confirmed.

Off to Scene of War.

Frederick's Haven, Island of Jutland, Aug. 2.—The Russian auxiliary cruisers Don and Ural and two torpedo boats passed here during Sunday night. At the Skaw (Cape Sagen, the northern extremity of Jutland) the torpedo boats returned and proceeded to Odesund.

Cruiser Division Also.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 2.—Preparations have been completed for the departure, under the command of Rear Admiral Enquist, of the cruiser Division of the second Russian Pacific squadron, now lying off Cronstadt. The warships will weigh anchor and put to sea under sealed orders within three days.

GEN. KELLER DIES IN ACTION.

First High Russian Commander to Lose Life in War.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 2.—The report of Lieut.-General Count Keller's death is confirmed. He was killed on July 29, while repelling the preliminary attack of Gen. Kuroki's army on the Yanse Pass, 22 miles east of Liaoyang. The general was standing near a battery which was subjected to a terrific fire, when a shell burst close to him and he fell, mortally wounded, dying twenty minutes later.

Before he expired Gen. Keller had the satisfaction of knowing that the Japanese attack had been repelled.

Gen. Keller was the first high Russian commander to lose his life in this war. Gen. Zassulitch may now command the First Siberian Army Corps.

The loss of Gen. Keller is deeply felt in court circles. He was a personal favorite of the Emperor. His sister, Countess Klenmichel, is one of the leaders of St. Petersburg society.

Lieut.-Gen. Count Keller, at the opening of the war, was in command of the Second Siberian Army Division. He was 54 years old, and resigned the Governorship of Ekaterinoslaf in order to go to the front. He sustained two reverses at the hands of the Japanese recently—July 4 and July 17—being repulsed in attacks on the Motien Pass.

Sending For Red Sea.

Washington, Aug. 2.—The State Department has official information that two Russian warships passed Copenhagen Sunday en route to the Red Sea to replace the volunteer cruisers to be withdrawn from there.

TUESDAY, AUG. 2, 1904.

THEIR WORD ACCEPTED.

It is a rule of parliamentary debate that a statement of fact by a member must be accepted. Unless this were the case discussion in the House would degenerate into an unseemly wrangle. But the privilege thus accorded to members makes their responsibility greater for exercising great care in making no statement which is not in complete accordance with the truth. It is a pity that Ministers of the Crown have lately shown themselves quite unworthy of this credit except as a mere artificial technicality of the rules of debate without any solid foundation. Not so very long ago Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who, as leader of the Government and of the House, has the greater responsibility, and is bound to set a good example, repeatedly reiterated that he had no documents in relation to the G. T. P. and even fortified his statement by the assertion that he spoke without equivocation. A very important document was produced in spite of this, when the Premier resorted to the subterfuge that it was a private letter to himself. Yet this pretended private letter was a petition from the Hon. Geo. A. Cox and his associates for the grant by Parliament of a charter and bonus to the G. T. P. ending with the phrase, "and your petitioners will ever pray"; a queer formula for a private letter. More recently Mr. Fisher addressed the House twice within an hour, his second speech admitting that the whole of the first was a deliberate falsehood. On the same occasion, Sir Frederick Borden read a typewritten document almost equally mendacious. Later he declared that the suppressed report of Lord Dundonald was marked private and had to eat his words on the spot, though he still continues to conceal it from the House, while giving erroneous accounts of its contents, through his organs. He stated that Col. Gregory had written a letter while in command of his regiment and in camp, and when confronted with the fact that the letter bore a later date, tried to crawl out of his misstatement by saying that he was at all events on the reserve of officers. Immediately afterwards he averred that Major Glasgow was the senior major, only to be refuted on the spot by the army list. Sir Richard Cartwright, while defending subornation of perjury, and his reward to the criminal, made his own statement of the facts in accord with this view of political morality.

If this goes on the rule as to accepting a member's statement will require the rider, "except in the case of Ministers of the Crown."

The hero of the murderous emergency rations is trying to make the people believe that he is a greater man than the hero of numberless exploits in north and south Africa.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues were so afraid of further exposure od their corruption and maladministration by Lord Dundonald, that they got a member of the administration who was in London to demand his recall.

In stating that Sir Frederick Borden had only supplied one rifle to two militiamen, we understated the case. The official figures show that three militiamen have one rifle between them.

Sir Richard Cartwright defends his friend, Jackson, K.C., for buying evidence from gaol birds to unseat Mr. Sutherland. It will be remembered that the Sullivans, as emissaries of Messrs. Ross and Stratton, threatened Mr. Gamey with the same treatment. Sir Richard evidently approves of their corrupt attempts to seduce a member.

From the Hansard report of the debate in Committee of Supply on the Trent Canal, Sir. W. Mulock with the utmost effrontery dangled before several constituencies the prospect of the expenditure of public money, though he well knows that all the engineers have reported against the abandonment of the Trent. He also combed the figures as he did those of the Farmer's Loan and of the Post Office Department.

The Ministerial organs persist in describing Lord Dundonald as an insubordinate servant of Mr. Fisher. Would they term Prof. Saunders a servant of Sir Frederick Borden, or Mr. Collingwood Schreiber, C.E., a servant of Mr. Fielding. Would they describe these experts as being insubordinate servants, if they refused to take orders from Ministers of other departments? All the Cabinet Ministers are servants of the people of Canada, like Lord Dundonald, but he was a good servant, while they are bad servants, aspiring to be masters.

DRAGOONING.

Petty and Dishonest Tyranny by the Minister of Militia.

The Dominion Government seems to have lost its temper completely in connection with the Dundonald affair. The current issue of The Canadian Military Gazette furnishes a striking instance of futile anger descending to pettiness. The Gazette has taken the side of Lord Dundonald with considerable vigor. On June 28, its proprietors received a letter from Colonel L. J. Pinault, the Deputy Minister of Militia, informing them that the agreement to insert Government advertisements in The Gazette would terminate on Sept. 30 next. This letter, The Gazette observes, tells its publishers "that the Minister does not approve of its recent policy in the Dundonald exposures and gives it until Sept. 30 to make amends. If it does not do so a considerable part of its revenue will be cut off."

That is small fighting. It is more than that—it looks like an effort to use Government patronage to influence press comment.

The current issue of The Gazette contains a list of instances of pettiness in the Government's conduct of the controversy. The average man will be surprised to learn that Lord Dundonald was paid up to the particular midnight on which he was dismissed, and not for a day further. He got neither a week's notice nor a week's salary. Military bookkeeping, as a matter of fact, is very stringent, and the system prevails of paying officers by the day. The General Officer Commanding, however, has been paid a fixed salary, and few business institutions would calculate so closely. A more striking instance of meanness is the dismissal of Capt. Newton, Lord Dundonald's A. D. C. This officer's services were terminated at the same moment as were those of his chief. Capt. Newton, who is an Imperial officer, might be expected to resign when his General vacated office. He had not, however, expressed any opinions, or transgressed any regulations. Yet he was deprived at a stroke of his pay and his post.

Another case is recorded in The Gazette. It asserts positively that "an officer in the permanent employ of the Militia Department, whose name is well known, advised certain militia officer of senior rank not to attend the Dundonald reception at Toronto, or assist in any way." This officer's name should be given by the Gazette. Pending publication we might ask, who is doing the dragooning in this country?—Toronto News, Indep.

Rebels Near Mush.

Constantinople, Aug. 2.—Official telegrams report that a band of Armenian revolutionists ambushed a party of soldiers near Mush. On the arrival of reinforcements the Armenians fled, setting fire to three villages on their way. Another band of Armenians number sixty attacked the village of Moosum, in the vilayet of Eruzerum, but was repulsed by the garrison and attempted to escape to the Russian frontier. The escape of the band, however, was prevented by the frontier guards, only four of the Armenians getting away.

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN

Women drift into a condition of half invalidism without knowing what ails them. Languor, exhaustion, aching back, limb pains, indigestion, headache. ANTI-PILL will lift these burdens. Any woman can prove this by writing Wilson-Fyfe Co. Niagara Falls, Ont., for free trial bottle.

This announcement is particularly addressed to women, because of the peculiar adaptation of ANTI-PILL to help sick and ailing women, who feel that they are gradually losing strength and vitality.

The use of ANTI-PILL never fails to arouse energy to search out and overcome the ailing cause. It's a revelation in medicine that brings relief to the distressed, and brightens the despondent. It doctors but don't drug—is purely vegetable and can be used with perfect safety by delicate women at any stage of life. Its gentle and effective.

RIPE FOR SUBMISSION

Mr. Chamberlain Says His Policy Is Ready For People.

Former Colonial Secretary Declares the Opportunity of Making Preferential Arrangements Is Slipping Away—That Ultimately the People Will Endorse His Policy to Bind the Empire Together—Premier Balfour Speaks.

London, Aug. 2.—(C. A. P.)—The House of Commons was crowded when Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman (Liberal leader) rose and moved his vote of censure to the effect that the House regretted that certain of His Majesty's ministers had accepted official positions in a political organization which formally declared its adhesion to a policy of preferential duties involving the taxation of food. He said that the absorption of four ministers into what he contended was an annex to the Tariff Reform League was incompatible with the non-taxation of food and was inconsistent with the assurances given from the treasury bench definitely pledging the Government against a preferential tariff and a duty on imported food.

Lord Hugh Cecil, comparing the German Zollverein with the proposed colonial system of preferences, said that thirty years after the Zollverein Prussia had violently annexed two states also in the Zollverein. It was a mistake to assume that increased trade necessarily meant an increase in affection. Britain had a larger trade with Germany than with Italy, yet they did not love the Germans more. There was preferential trade with Canada down to 1860, but were the Canadians then more loyal than they were now?

Mr. Chamberlain said an attempt had been made to prove Premier Balfour's policy was identical with his absolutely. If so, there would not have been any necessity for his leaving the Government. "From the very outset the Premier had said he sympathised with my policy, even if it involved a slight addition to the duties on food, but he thought it was not practicable at the moment, nor was the country ripe for it. In my opinion," continued Mr. Chamberlain, "this policy is ripe enough at the present to be submitted to the people of this country. I do not say it will be accepted at once by the people accustomed for 60 years to another policy, but that it will be accepted I am as certain as that I stand here, and the sooner it is submitted to the country the sooner that consummation will come. If it is legitimate to make a reciprocal arrangement with a foreign country why in Heaven's name is it not proper with your own kinsfolk.

"The colonies wanted this arrangement. Canada had given the most absolute proof, short indeed only of an actual treaty. Will you accept the views of three successive Prime Ministers of Australia? The preference opportunity was sliding away, and if not accepted within a reasonable time the offer of the colonies would no longer remain open."

Premier Balfour ridiculed the idea that every member of the Cabinet must agree on every point before the country. He was a free trader, but did not accept all the definitions of free trade put forward by the Opposition. He believed there was an historic reason for the feeling that existed against the taxation of wheat.

Sir Gilbert Parker said he held in his hand a letter from a great colonial statesman, who said that once the British people grasped the fact that the colonies were asking nothing but preference for preference, the struggle would soon be over.

The Government's Majority.

London, Aug. 2.—(C.A.P.)—In the House of Commons yesterday the Liberal leader, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, moved a vote of censure concerning the part taken by Cabinet members in the Liberal-Unionist Council sessions, July 14, at which the fiscal policy of Joseph Chamberlain was approved. The motion was rejected by 288 to 210.

DRIVEN FROM CANADA.

Western Engineer Had to Leave at the Point of a Revolver.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 2.—One of the best known western engineers who has been employed on the Canadian Northern Railroad, arrived from Manitoba Sunday night, having been arrested at the point of a revolver by mounted police and ordered to leave the Dominion. The man's name is withheld for the reason that he has taken steps to interest the United States Government in his case, as well as that of others who have been driven over the border during the last week under the Canadian labor laws. The engineer says the Canadians are jealous of the American engineers.

Murderous Rage of An Engineer.

Kingston, Aug. 2.—James Brown, an engineer, who, in a rage, fired several shots from a revolver at J. Babcock, is under arrest. While drunk he bothered Babcock, who put him on the walk. Then Brown with a revolver peppered away at Babcock, but with no effect. He is to be tried to-day.

BREAKS MAN'S SPINE.

Horse Falls on James Anderson Cobourg Man at Cobourg.

Cobourg, Aug. 2.—A shocking accident here yesterday morning was a rather inauspicious opening to Home-Comers' Day and Civic Holiday. James Anderson, coachman for J. C. Rose, of Pittsburg, who is summering here, was perhaps fatally injured by a horse, which he was riding. The horse shied at something on the street and reared on its hind legs. It lost its balance, and fell back on top of its rider. In its struggles to rise, the horse severely trampled Anderson as he lay on the ground, and when picked up it was found that he had suffered several fractures—one of the spine, one of the hip, of the harm and of the leg. He was unconscious. Although living at a late hour last night, he has no possible chance of recovery. Anderson is 35 years of age, and came from Pittsburg. He has a wife and two children in Cobourg.

Drowned at Stratford.

Stratford, Aug. 2.—The pleasure of Stratford's Civic Holiday yesterday was marred by a drowning accident, whereby Alexander Ainsworth, a machinist, employed in the Grand Trunk shops, lost his life. Ainsworth, with two companions, went in swimming in the river, and it is supposed he became entangled in the weeds. Deceased had been in the country only a few weeks, and leaves a wife and child in Scotland.

Sad Homecoming.

Ste. Flavie, Que., Aug. 2.—Miss Delia Hamilton, coming from Montreal, destined to Ste. Gabriel, a parish near Ste Flavie, jumped off the train on to the platform while it was still in motion. Before assistance could be given she fell onto the track under the wheels and had her two legs cut off above the ankles. Amputation is necessary, and she is not likely to live. The unfortunate girl had been away from home for 12 years, and is paying her first visit to her family since she had left them. Her father, who is advanced in age, was at the station to witness the terrible scene.

Car Floor Gives Away.

London, Aug. 2.—On the Pere Marquette Railway in the St. Thomas yards yesterday afternoon, an excursion train of Londoners bound for Port Stanley was leaving St. Thomas when the floor in the second to last coach gave way at the rear end, throwing the other end to the ceiling. About a dozen seats were jammed together, throwing their occupants in all directions. Several people were hurt, all Londoners, Miss E. Hamilton, daughter of A. M. Hamilton, being particularly unfortunate. The physicians say her case is very grave, the shock of the accident tending to break up her nervous system. The other injured passengers escaped with nothing more than a few bruises and a severe shake-up.

From Over Study at School

This Girl Became Pale, Languid and Nervous -- Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Her Well.

MRS. R. WAREHAM, 267 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., states:—

"One of my children suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, and in fact was all run down, pale and languid. These troubles we attributed to over study and confinement at school. She began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I can say that we have found this treatment exceedingly helpful. It has relieved her of headache, steadied her nerves, and built up her system wonderfully. We can see a great change in her, as the color is returning to her face and she is gaining in flesh and weight."

Dr Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

TUESDAY, AUG. 2, 1904.

THE TRENT WATERWAY

An Interesting Debate in the House of Commons.

Mr Haggart.—I will answer everything as soon as the hon. gentleman is through. The hon. gentleman took me to task about my statement that this government only carried out the contracts which the late government had let for the purposes of this canal. Well, there are two contracts which he let since he came into office—one to a Mr. Brown, and the other to a Mr. Larkin. The contracts he read had reference to the Hamilton Bridge Company, the Dominion Bridge Company and other bridge companies, and four or five cement companies. All these were for the purpose of carrying out the contracts which I had let when I was in power. The cement is for the purpose of building the locks, and the iron and steel are connected with the lift lock, so that his boasted comparison between the expenditure of the late and present government falls to the ground. The hon. gentleman talks about the two routes. To go back to ancient history, the first route, the Trent Canal route was surveyed by the imperial engineers shortly after the battle of Waterloo.

Sir William Mulock—Some seventy odd years ago.

Mr. Haggart.—Yes. The plan they —adopted was by Trenton up to Lake Simcoe, and further on into the Georgian Bay. They built a couple of locks, I think upon the Trent canal, which became the property of the Province of Ontario when the assets of the provinces were set aside. The hon. gentleman asked me if I had a survey of the Port Hope route made. Why, I never heard that route suggested until these gentlemen got into power. The first person I ever heard speak about it was my hon. friend from Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane.) He did not begin agitating until long after the work was under construction by the late government—and I do not know whether it was the late or the present government which got a survey of the two rival routes. We would like to hear which is the cheaper and better route. If I remember rightly, from the information which the present government brought down to the House and the surveys made at that time, it was decided that the Port Hope route was the more expensive and the most difficult to construct.

Sir William Mulock.—Who decided that?

Mr. Haggart.—The engineers did. If remember rightly, I heard the hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) criticising the report of the engineers, and pitching into the engineer in charge of the work, saying that his report and skill were not to be relied upon, insisting upon the government having another and a better survey of the route, because it was condemnatory of the Port Hope route.

Mr. Emmerson.—One of the reports I laid on the table was from an engineer who was connected with the department, Mr. Macleod. The other is the report of Mr. Rogers, the Superintending Engineer of the Trent Valley Canal. But there was an independent report.

Mr. Haggart—The report of the engineer in charge of the Trent Valley Canal was in favor of the Port Hope route. Is that so?

Mr. Emmerson.—I do not remember.

Sir William Mulock—It is.

Mr. Haggart.—I heard the Hon. member for Durham criticising it in the House, insisting upon having a survey of the route, because the route proposed, or supposed to be better than the Trent route, had been examined by the engineers attached to the department, who showed that it was more expensive and a less valuable route than the other.

Mr. Scott—Which one do you favor?

Mr. Haggart—I am not responsible for the route of the canal at the present moment. But the gentlemen who are responsible for the legislation of this House, when they come down with a vote, and we ask the fullest information, and when they have the fullest information from their engineers as to the feasibility of the one route or the other, ought to be prepared to give a decision upon the information they possess which route will be selected.

Mr. Scott—I understood the hon. gentleman to say that he favored the construction of both.

Mr. Haggart—The hon. gentleman is entirely mistaken. I never said anything of the kind, nor insinuated anything of the kind.

Mr. Scott.—My hon. friend from Colchester (Mr. Gourlay) understood him so.

Mr. Haggart.—If the hon. gentleman interrupts me again, I wish he would be more accurate, and state something which is pertinent to the remarks which I make. It is unfair to make interruptions of that kind especially when they suggest an inference that I said something some time ago, and was saying the contrary now. I never did that. What I said was this: It is not my business to have a policy in reference to this matter. I am not called upon to give a decision between the Trenton route and the Port Hope route. What we say is that the government, when asking for a vote at the present time upon information from their own departmental engineers upon facts which are in their possession, ought to give the House the information and decide at once upon the route, instead of descending to the petty party politics of holding up the two routes before the electors in the coming election, and saying to them: Gentlemen, we are making an accurate survey of the two different routes, and it may be that the route which you ask us to take will be the preferable of the two. Now, I want this information from the Minister. I want to know when the contract will be completed for the upper section so as to give communication into Lake Simcoe? I understand from the Minister there are about 130 miles of continuous navigation completed. I did not think there was that much.

Mr. Emmerson.—120 miles.

Mr. Haggart.—I am glad to hear it. That takes you to within 16 miles of the Bay of Quinte and within 17 miles of the Bay of Quinte, and within 17 or 18 miles of Lake Simcoe. I think that the true policy is for the government to make up their minds at once and go on and complete the canal. But I want an answer to these questions. When will that contract be completed? What is the comparison between the cost of a lift lock and the ordinary locks serving the same purpose? What is the time saved; and whether this lock has proved to be the success that they expected?

Mr. Scott—I much regret that my interruption has ruffled my hon. friend. But I am within your judgment, Mr. Chairman, and the judgment of the other members of the House, if the hon. gentleman, in his former remarks, did not advocate the construction of the canal over both routes, the Trenton route, and the Port Hope route.

r. Haggart—I stated distinctly that I did not, and here is the hon. gentleman getting up again in the face of my denial. If I did say so, and I stated afterwards that I did not say so, he is obliged to take my denial.

Mr. Scott—Certainly, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Haggart—Why is he repeating it?

Mr. Scott—I have not the slightest intention of declining to accept the present statement of the hon. gentleman. But I was proceeding to say that I was with the judgment of the chairman and the other members of the House that my hon. friend did——

Some hon. members—Order.

Mr. Haggart—I will not allow the hon. gentleman to question my statement.

Mr. Scott—I will ask the hon. gentleman to read the "Hansard" tomorrow.

Mr. Haggart—Order.

Sir William Mulock—Allow me to make a remark.

Mr. Deputy Speaker—I will point out the rule. The rule is that is an hon. gentleman is charged with making a statement and denies it, his denial must be accepted, and the matter must end there.

Sir William Mulock—I was going to offer a word of explanation, because, while I freely accept my friend's denial, yet I am in the same position as my hon. friend from Assiniboia (Mr. Scott). My hon. friend from Lanark will remember that after his remarks I commented upon his attitude.

Mr. Haggart—Yes, I know.

Sir William Mulock—We are trying to clear the matter up. I want the hon. member from Lanark to do justice to my hon. friend from Assiniboia, who is quite ready to adhere to the rule of debate. I honestly belied that the hon. member for Lanark made the statement attributed to him by my hon. friend, and I think other members of the committee were under that impression. Probably the hon. gentleman does not remember what he said. He may may not have intended to say it. That is his position. My hon. friend from Lanark did not intend perhaps to express himself; but I am under the impression that every member of the House understood him to say that he favored both routes. Then I proceeded to say: Why does not my hon. friend go further? There is a third route, why does not he favor that as well?

Mr. Gourlay—That was myself.

Mr. Haggart—Does the Minister think I stated on the floor of the House that I was in favor of building both routes?

Sir William Mulock—I think he said so, yes.

Mr. Haggart—I never said anything of the kind.

Sir William Mulock—My hon. friend will find, I am sure, that he is mistaken. He did not intend to say so, and that disposes of the whole point. But my hon. friend will find on reference to the "Hansard" that he so expressed himself.

Mr. Cochrane—I regret that this matter has been dragged into little parish politics by the Postmaster-General, and we have an illustration now how the progress of the estimates is hindered by Ministers of the Crown dragging parish politics into a large question like this. I was never more surprised in my life than to hear the Postmaster-General on a big question like this, when he was so elated by seeing the superstructure that is built, and that magnificent lift lock, that when we were taking into consideration the estimates to finish that job, he should drag in parish politics by referring to the member for East Northumberland as he did. I am here to say to the Postmaster-General that I can go into East Northumberland and challenge the electorate upon the question whether I ever misled them in any statement I made. I do not think that any Minister who is sitting on the treasury benches now and who was sitting in Opposition in former years, can truthfully make that statement in the House. They no way that we are aiding them. We are, and I want to tell the hon. Minister who is now controlling the Department of Public Works, and I want to tell Hon. Postmaster-General that I am here to act upon a higher plane in promoting the best interests of this country, and that I am not here to import little party politics into every question that is submitted for the consideration of this House. I care very little whether the money of Canada is expended provided it is expended in the best interests of the country, and I desire to draw the attention of the hon. Postmaster General and the Hon. Minister of Customs to the fact that when we were promoting this canal we got almost abuse when the estimates were submitted. They made party and parish politics out of it, and they said that we were throwing away the people's money in order to secure the return of Conservatives to this House. They do not get that criticism from us now. We are prepared to vote the money, provided it is to be expended for the promotion of the best interests of the country and for the development of trade. When we were in power we were developing great works in this country. We built the Soo canal. We deepened the St. Lawrence canals. What have these hon. gentlemen done? Millions of money have been frittered away for paltry party ends in the Maritime Provinces, and in the Province of Quebec. Although we built the Soo canal, it is useless from the fact that these hon. gentlemen, instead of spending a few thousand dollars to build a wharf, are allowing all the trade to go to the American side. There was $60,000 spent to build a wharf to benefit an hon. gentleman who is in this House.

Sir William Mulock—I want to ask the hon. gentleman——

Mr. Cochrane—If you want any information in reference to the canal, ask it from the engineers. That $60,000 that was spent to benefit an hon. gentleman sitting in this House, if it had been spent at the Soo, would have built a wharf there so that Canadian vessels would not require to go over to the American side to land. The large amount of money which has been spent on the Soo canal is almost useless, because you have not made the entrance of the canal what it should be, and you have not built a wharf on this side, so that vessels can go in there. I do not care where this money was spent on this route, and I am not opposed to it.

At six o'clock House took recess.

In Our Grandfather's Youth

Paralysis was almost unheard of in the youth of our grandparents, and now nearly every newspaper contains a record of someone being stricken with this dreadful form of helplessness. Paralysis is in reality a starving of the nerves, and can always be prevented by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, a preparation which has no rival as a creator of nerve force.

A New County Map.

The Review has issued, for general distribution, a new edition of its well known map of the County of Peterborough. The map has been re-drawn and brought up to date and is the most accurate map existing of the county. It is of convenient size and yet legible and handy for reference. Copies may be had by calling at the Review Stationery Store, or will be sent by mail on receipt of 5 cents in stamps to cover postage.

Why Not Have a Raffia Hat?

It is not such a tedious, difficult matter as most people suppose to make one of those pretty raffia hats that are so popular just now. Of course elaborate designs may be attempted, but the plain woven hat looks so pretty when worn as the more fancy ones. These woven ones may be made in a couple of evenings and are very pretty made up in the wide sailor or trio corner shape and trimmed with bands of velvet or foliage. The raffia, which comes in black, red, green, brown and natural shades, is on sale at the Review Office, which is open every evening.—2d.

Poets' Opinions of Each Other.

A good story about Browning and Tennyson is to be found in the diary of the Right Hon. Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff. Browning referred readily to the charge of obscurity in his poetry. "He once told me," says Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff, "after repeating a story Wordsworth had told him illustrating his own strange want of humor and wit, that Wordsworth, after all, was unjust to himself, for that on hearing of Browning's engagement to Miss Barrett he had said, 'Well, I suppose they understand each other, although nobody understands them.'"

Tennyson's opinion of Browning (and incidentally, of himself) is shown in his remark that "Browning is devoted to music and knows a great deal about it, but there is no music in his verse. I know nothing about music and don't care for it in the least, but my verse is full of music."

In reading Milton's Lycidas aloud, says Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff, Tennyson would stop at the line,

And, oh, ye dolphins, waft the hapless youth, with the comment that this was "the only bad line Milton ever wrote."

The best way to mash potatoes is to rub them through a wire sieve. You can then be sure there are no lumps left.

For luncheon or supper serve the bread and butter in the form of sandwiches. Cut the bread thin and remove part of the crust. Cut in stripe after buttering or in rounds with a biscuit cutter.

By cutting old potatoes into very small balls, allowing them to soak for three or four hours in cold water, then boiling in cold salted water and serving with cream sauce, a very good substitute for new potatoes is obtained.

A Game of Catch.

Somebody once twitted John Graham on the way David Dudley Field and he were drifting apart—he remaining in the harness as a criminal lawyer, while Field was selected by his state for the exalted duty of codifying her laws.

"It is simply a game of catch between Field and myself," he answered. "He tries to put up as many bars as possible, all uniformly strong. Then I go around and try them and see how many weak places I can find."

"Which beats, Mr. Graham?" he was asked.

"Oh, I think I do in the long run," he responded. "Field never succeeded in keeping me out as many times as I have succeeded in breaking in."

East Indian Names.

Mercantile clerks with many letters to write to India tradesfolk are to be pitied. The following, picked at random from the books of a London firm doing business in India, are not at all bad specimens of the general run of names throughout the empire: Jogavajala Seethasamachendrudu, Manthri Pragada Suryanarayana, Vangar Pathangy Vijayaraghavacharriar, Conjeeveram Muttukumaraswamy Mudliar, Poonamalie Shunmugasundaram Mudliar, Keduramangalam Subramanlet Chidembera Iyer, Peruvayel Coomaleeswarenpettah Rajaruthna Moodliar.

Still the Work Goes On.

"Any more germs, doctor?"

"Oh, yes. We are now in hot pursuit of the germs that eat the other germs."

Various Methods.

All men must make their choices,
Some are wise and some are rash,
Some statesmen raise their voices,
And some others raise the cash.

He Had a Perpetual One.

"Riddles," they said, "do not seem to interest you?"

"No," he replied; "I married one."

Thrift.

That quaint old adage ne'er grows sear—
"A penny saved is a penny won."
The white ducks father wore last year
Are now the duckilings of his son.

Spoke Too Late.

She—You married me for my money.

TOWN COUNCIL'S REGULAR SESSION

Many Communications Were Received--Sewer to be Laid on Park-st.--Ormond & Walsh Take Action Against the Town--High Court of I.O.F. of Eastern Ontario Meets Here--Repairs to Wolfe-st. Wharf Needed--Other Business.

The regular meeting of the Town Council was held last evening. In the absence of the Mayor, Ald. Morrison, on motion of Ald. Adams, seconded by Ald. Rush, took the chair, and there were also present, Aldermen Best, Barton, Clinkscale, Adams, Rush Hicks, Edgcumbe, Mason and Johnston.

The minutes of last meeting were confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS

From the Town Solicitor to T. A. S. Hay, Town Engineer, re the sewer on Park street. The Solicitor pointed out that clause 14 of agreement with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company provides that should a sewer be constructed on Park street, the company are to remove and relay their ties and rails at their own expense. Clause five provides that in cases where the Council requires the company to construct the railway on additional streets, if a sewer is constructed on such streets within ten years after the construction of the railway, the corporation will at its own cost move and replace the rails and ties. This was referred back to the Board of Works.

On motion of Ald Adams, seconded by Ald. Johnston, the Street Railway Company will be notified that the town intends constructing a sewer on Park street north. Also that the sewer on Park street, south of Charlotte, will be constructed in the middle of the street.

From the T.A.S., applying for remission of taxes on their grounds. This society's taxes amount to $40. Referred to the Finance Committee.

From the Canadian Machine Telephone Company, saying that they have now located their lines for the new telephone system which they are installing under a franchise granted them by the town, and have their plans prepared, showing the streets to be travelled and the location of their poles, manholes, etc. They respectfully ask that this matter be referred to the Town Engineer to report thereon. Referred to the Board of Works.

From Court Chemong, I.O.F., of Peterborough, saying that the High Court of this Society of Eastern Ontario, will convene here on the 17th, 18th and 19th August, when 400 delegates will be present, and asking for a grant of $50 to aid the local Court in carrying out their programme more creditably than they could otherwise do. Referrred to the Finance Committee with power to act.

The application of the Young Women's Christian Association for remission of taxes was referred to the Court of Division.

From W. H. Meldrum, Otonabee Power Company, asking for an immediate decision on his application of three weeks ago for permission to lay a siding on the south side of Simcoe street, from the C.P.R. spur to the American Cereal Company's Mills. Referred to the committee of the whole, Council to meet Thursday night.

From H. Calcutt, drawing attention to some very necessary repairs to the Wolfe street wharf. He suggested that the south end be extended in line with the remainder of the wharf, for the security of passengers. Referred to the Board of Works.

The C.P.R. asked permission to run a short track across Wolfe street, north of their present siding, and connecting it just east of the line of Wolfe street for the purpose of serving a firm they propose to locate on their property at the corner of Wolfe and Aylmer streets. Referred to the Board of Works.

From Dumble and Johnston, stating that they are instructed to bring an action against the Town for damages, in consequence of the flooding of the cellars of Ormond & Walsh by reason of the town's negligence in not providing sufficient ways of escape for water brought to their store by street graded and maintained by the town.

The town propose building a sewer to carry out the surface water.—Referred to the Legal Committee.

Architect Argus addressed the Council on behalf of the proprietor of the National Hotel, who proposes, among other improvements, to build a balcony over the street in connection with the hotel. It would be of handsome design and supported by iron columns resting on the street, and the cost would be about $250. The balcony would be fireproof. It was the desire to find out the opinion of the Council in the matter before proceeding.

The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT.

Ald. Edgcumbe presented the following report:—

Gentlemen,—Your Fire, Water and Light Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:—

1. That the same amount be paid the Peterborough Light and Power Company for street lights for the past quarter as was paid them for the previous quarter, until the changes in the lights are made, and certified to by the Town Engineer.

2. That Engineers and Drivers of the Fire Department be furnished with uniforms to wear while on duty at the Fire Hall and that the tender of Tully, Merrill & Meredith for the three suits at 14.70 per suit be accepted, and that they be paid for on the certificate of the Chairman of this Committee. Also that the Chairman be authorised to purchase three caps for the Engineer and Drivers and that they be paid for in the same manner.

3. That the Drivers in the Fire Hall be allowed two weeks holidays each on finding a suitable substitute, and that the Treasurer be authorised to pay the substitute on the certificate of the Chairman of this Committee at the same rate as the Drivers are paid.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted.

BOARD OF WORKS.

Ald. Best presented the following report:

Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report as follows:—

1. We recommend that Thos. Rehill be paid $12.50 for gravel in accordance with a certificate of the Town Engineer.

2. Your Board received a report from the Town Engineer in regard to the condition of the bridge on Charlotte street and ordered that two bents be put in the bridge on each side of the street railway track as a temporary measure.

3. We recommend that the Chairman and Engineer be authorised to employ an Inspector for the construction of sewers and that he be paid on the certificate of the Town Engineer.

4. We have examined petitions for the construction of granolithic walks as local improvements on the following streets, and having found them sufficiently signed, recommend that they be granted, namely—

Stanley avenue, south side, from Stewart street east 140 feet.

Queen street, east side, from Hunter street to Simcoe street.

Hunter street, south side, from Queen street east 279 feet.

5. We examined a petition from T. E. Wade and others for the construction of a sewer as a local improvement on London street, east from the manhold at the corner of Harvey street 180 feet, and having found it sufficiently signed, recommend that it be granted.

6. We recommend that the Town Engineer be instructed to strike a grade for the street railway on McDonnell street, west of Park street.

7. We recommend that the Street Commissioner be authorized to begin his sidewalk work on Aylmer street, commencing at Charlotte street, and to continue the work on Crescent, Lock, Wescott and Perry streets.

8. We recommend that this Board be authorized to advertise for tenders for the numbering of the houses in Ward Five, and of houses in other parts of the Town, which have not been heretofore numbered.

9. We recommend that H. Evans be paid at the rate of $2.25 a day during the time he is engaged on the construction of granolithic sidewalks, on the certificate of the Town Engineer.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted.

A by-law introduced by Ald. Adams to change the names of certain streets in the Town of Peterborough, to avoid duplication; was given two readings.

The Council adjourned.

DEATH OF HERBERT REHALLY

A Young Man Twenty-Four Years of Age Passes Away after a Long Illness.

The death occurred last evening of Herbert Rehally, son of Mr. John Rehally, a young man aged 24 years who has been ill for about two years from tuberculosis. For some time he had been at Gravenhurst, hoping that the change would bring some improvement in health and for the past few months he had been in St. Joseph's Hospital. He was a bright young man and his death will be deplored by all who knew him.

The funeral will take place from St. Joseph's Hospital on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Death of Mrs. Jos. McGill.

Many friends will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Jos. McGill, of Manvers, who passed away on Thursday last at the age of 72 years. Deceased was a daughter of the late John Pritchard of Manvers and with her husband enjoyed the esteem and respect of a wide circle of friends. A notable thing in the fact that the deceased lady was the mother of thirteen sons and daughters, ten of whom are now living. Deceased was the mother-in-law of Mr. Robert Roseborough of town. Her illness was of short duration, being confined to bed just three days.

WATER BY-LAW CHANGED

May Use it from Four to Nine in the Afternoon.

At the last meeting of the Water Commissioners the bylaw affecting the time allowed for using water on lawns was changed, and people may now use water from four o'clock until nine in the afternoon, and from five in the forenoon until nine. Any breach of this by-law will be severely dealt with in the Police Court.

OUR BOULEVARDS.

Remarks by Visitors on Their Improved Appearance.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—A recent visitor in our midst remarked upon the improvement noticeable everywhere in the condition of the lawns and boulevards. Unfortunately there are some exceptions to this rule, noticeably in the case of the rink on Brock-st., and a few other buildings, whose owners do not "sport the fancy" in their make-up. A little thoughtfulness in this respect would remove most of the few remaining.

Yours, &c.,

TURF CLUB'S ANNUAL MEET

SOME SPEEDY WORK DONE AT THE DRIVING PARK.

Minnie Keswick Wins the 2.40 Class and Jubilee the 2.16 Trot and Pace in Straight Heats—An Exciting Running Race.

The third annual meeting under the auspices of the Peterborough Turf Club, lasting for three days, opened yesterday afternoon at the Driving Park, and about five hundred people saw some excellent sport. A good string of horses was entered and the three events were very keenly contested in every heat. The events were a 2.40 class pace and trot, purse $300; a 2.16 class pace and trot, purse $300 and a half mile running race. The track was in very good condition and more favorable weather could not have been desired. The 57th band was in attendance and rendered a fine programme during the day. Everything passed off very satisfactorily.

Five horses started in the 2.40 class. These were Minnie Keswick, owned by Geo. Curtis, of Lindsay; Donna Belle, owned by Dr. Johnston, of town; Pearl Wilkes, owned by Brown of Niagara Falls; Headlight, owned by Acton of Gananoque, and Johnnie P., owned by Clarke of Gananoque. Nettie Wright, owned by Acton of Gananoque, and Bourbon Brook, owned by Briggs of Paisley were on the card, but failed to appear.

In the first heat Minnie Keswick had the pole and took the lead at the start. At no time during the heat was she in danger, although she was followed closely by Pearl Wilkes. Donna Belle made a sensational sprint and took third place with Headlight fourth and Johnnie P. fifth. The time was 2.25.

The second heat was almost a repetition of the last. Minnie Keswick did the two circuits with the head of Pearl Wilkes flush with the nest of her sulky. It was Johnny P. who made the sprint in this heat and it was a close finish between that sprinted gelding and the Niagara Falls mare. Donna Belle was away behind in this heat and Headlight finished fourth. Time 2.24 1-2.

Minnie Keswick, Pearl Wilkes and Headlight were about neck and neck for the first quarter in the last heat. Donna Belle again made a good showing by stepping in neatly to third place in the second round but went up in the air and it was a close finish between Johnny P. and Headlight for third place. The latter took it but was set back for performing an irregular gait. Time 2.26 1-2.

The money was divided as follows: Minnie Keswick 1st; Pearl Wilkes 2nd, Headlight 3rd, Donna Belle 4th.

Five horses started in the 2.16 class pace or trot. They were Looking Glass, by Watson of Uxbridge; Sphinx B., by Powell of Orillia; Jubilee, by Wood of Hamilton; Blucher by Connors of town; Bertha W., by P. Maher of Toronto. In the first heat Bertha W. had the pole and looked like the winner, but coming down the home stretch she broke and Jubilee following very close behind finished first. The Hamilton horse apparently held back until the second lap when she stepped up handily and took second place from Looking Glass and it was an exciting finish between the three leaders. Blucher finished fourth, and Sphinx B. who was disappointing to the Peterborough spectators, finished fifth. Time 2.17 1-4.

In the first quarter of the second Bertha W., Sphinx B. and Looking Glass put on a nice spirt but on the second round the order was Jubilee 1st, Looking Glass 2nd, Bertha W. 3rd and Spinks B. fourth. Time 2.17 1-4.

It was between Bertha W. and Spinks B. for the lead in the first quarter of the third heat, with Jubilee next, Blucher 4th and Looking Glass a bad fifth. Jubilee again came to the front in the last lap, and Spinks B. held second for a while but Bertha W. crept in to the place and Blucher came fourth, while Looking Glass finished inside as the flag fell. Time 1.17 3-4. The Uxbridge horse is evidently a sulky animal, and better was expected of her than the showing in the last heat. The money went—Jubilee 1st, Looking Glass 2nd, Bertha W. third and Spinks B. fourth. The summary of the trotting is as follows:

2.40 Class Trot or Pace.

Minnie Keswick, c. m.	1	1	1
Pearl Wilkes, b. m.	2	2	2
Headlight	4	4	3
Donna Belle, b. m.	3	5	4
Johnny P., b. g.	5	3	5

Time:—2.25; 2.24 1-2; 2.26 1-2.

2.16 Class Pace or Trot.

Jubilee, b. g.	1	1	1
Looking Glass, b. g.	2	2	5
Bertha W., b. m.	3	3	2
Spinks B., r. g.	4	4	3
Blucher, blk. g.	5	5	4

Time—2.17p1-4; 2.17 1-4; 2.17 3-4.

Great difficulty was experienced in starting the half mile running race. There was a string of eight ogers, and some of them were rather gingery. Hugo of Hamilton giving considerable trouble, manifesting a desire to get either over or under the fence. It just took one hour and twenty minutes to get the bunch away in anything like a satisfactory manner. The horses and their owners were: Michaelmas, Parkeng of Toronto; Dementon, McGinnis of Belle-

LAST DAY FOR GUARDS

LEFT LAST NIGHT BY C.P.R. AFTER HAVING A PLEASANT TIME.

Visitors Entertained at Golf Links and at the Armories — The Non-Coms. go down the River

Yesterday was certainly the militia man's day, and all day could be heard the bugles and drums, and the streets were lined with men in scarlet coats, for not only were the visitin gFoot Guards in uniform, but the 57th Regiment turned out to help to entertain them. In the morning at nine o'clock the steamer City of Peterborough conveyed the visitors over the lift-lock, and everyone enjoyed the novelty. In the afternoon the non-coms. of both regiments went down the river on the steamer Sovereign on a fishing trip, while the officers were conveyed by the steamer City of Peterborough and rigs to the golf links, where luncheon was served by the ladies of the golf club, and an enjoyable hour spent. A photograph of the group on the club house verandah was taken by Miss M. Barlee.

THE BANQUET.

In the evening at 6.30 the officers of the Foot Guards were tendered a banquet at the mess rooms of the 57th Regt., and around the festive board were seated:—Lt.-Col. J. W. Miller and officers of the 57th Regt.; Lt.-Col. S. E. D. Roper and officers of the Foot Guards; Major Robinson, of Rockliffe; Rev. Father McColl; Lt.-Col. H. Rogers; Lt.-Col. E. B. Edwards; Lieut. Bull, of the United States Navy; Sergt.-Major Young, Major Hall and Lieut. Medd, of the 3rd Dragoons; Mr. J. Hughes-Charles, and Messrs. Sparks and Davy, press representatives from Ottawa.

The chair was occupied by Surgeon-Major Halliday, president of the mess, and the vice chair by Major L. M. Hayes. After the toast to the King had been heartily honored, Major Halliday proposed the health of "Our Guests, the Foot Guards." He remembered with a great deal of pleasure the 57th Regiment's visit to Ottawa, and hoped that the visitors had enjoyed themselves as much as the 57th had done. He paid a high compliment to the Foot Guards, and said he hoped they would visit our town again.

After the toast had been honored, everyone joining heartily in dubbing them jolly good fellows, Col. S. E. D. Roper rose to respond and was greeted with loud applause. He wished to thank them for the manner in which they had honored him and the officers of the Foot Guards, and also for the entertainment which has been so heartily and cheerfully given them while in town. Speaking for the men of the regiment, he said that they had all enjoyed themselves, and on behalf of all ranks he thanked the officers of the 57th for their treatment, and said he hoped that they would come back again, and also that the 57th would go to Ottawa in the near future.

Capt. Rothwell also replied very nicely to this toast.

Capt. F. C. T. O'Hara entertained the company with a recitation, and Major Dennistoun contributed a song and Lt.-Col. Miller a recitation.

The toast to "Lieut.-Col. Miller and officers of the 57th Regiment," was then proposed by Cog. Roper, of the Guards, and most heartily drunk by their officers. Col. Roper had always had a warm feeling for the 57th Regiment, and he was sure that every man in his regiment would have a warmer one now. The 57th officers had been extremely kind and cordial in their treatment, and nothing was left undone that could have been done for their benefit. He gave them a strong invitation to go to Ottawa and said he hoped they would come during his term of office.

Lt.-Col. J. W. Miller, in replying, said that when the 57th Regiment first heard that the Foot Guards were coming from Ottawa they were pleased and delighted, as they remembered their previous visit to Ottawa thirteen years ago and the splendid treatment they had received, and hoped to endeavor to reciprocate the kindness. He said the regiment was honored to have such a splendid regiment as the Guards come here, and it had given him very much pleasure to welcome them. He would be delighted to go to Ottawa, and anything the officers had done for the Guards was a very small item in comparison with the 57th's visit thirteen years ago. He concluded by speaking of the splendid conduct of the visiting regiment, and of the esteem in which the citizens of the town held them.

A song was contributed by Mr. J. Hughes-Charles, after which Major Hayes proposed the toast of "The Army and Navy of the United States" which was replied to by Lieut. Bull, of the United States Navy, who is spending some days in town and at Stony Lake.

Major Dennistoun proposed the toast to "The Chaplain," and in his absence Rev. Father McColl was asked to respond. On rising, he was given a warm ovation. He said he was delighted to be present, and said there was something beautiful to be admired in being a soldier. There was a similarity in their lives and a soldier's—a great sacrifice, and a love of country and of God. He said that patriotism was a great virtue, and it ought to be cultivated, as it was a great thing for a country to be proud of. Anyone ought to be ashamed to lack patriotism. He hoped that the Guards had enjoyed their visit and was glad if he had contributed in any way to their comfort.

The chaplain, Rev. J. C. Davidson, entered just then, and was called on for a song, which he cheerfully gave, and was followed by Lieut. C. E. Prince and Capt. O'Hara with songs.

Major A. Stevenson then sang the familiar closing song, and after Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem had been heartily sung, the party adjourned to the park, and accompanied the visitors to the station.

Shortly before ten o'clock, the Foot Guards, headed by their own band, and the 57th Regiment band playing Auld Lang Syne, marched to the C.P.R. station, where a large crowd of visitors had gathered to bid them farewell. During the visitors' stay here they have made themselves solid by their manly appearance and good conduct, and everyone hopes they will come again.

BRITISH GREAT SEAL

STRANGE ADVENTURES OF THIS EMBLEM OF SOVEREIGNTY.

Fished From the Bottom of the River Thames, Buried in a Garden, Used as a Frying Pan and Broken to Pieces in the House of Lords.

It seems almost ludicrously impossible that the great seal of England should have ever been made to serve the humble purpose of a frying pan; and yet this is only one of many equally strange episodes in the romantic story of the seal which is the "specific emblem of British sovereignty."

Lord Chancellor Eldon was so fearful that the seal would be lost or stolen while in his custody that he never went to sleep without first satisfying himself that it was safe in his bedroom. One night—it was in the year 1812—he was roused from his slumbers by cries of "Fire!" Jumping out of bed he snatched up the great seal and, rushing into the garden, buried it deep in the middle of a flower bed. His house might be burned to the ground, but at least he would not prove unworthy of the great trust which had been reposed in him.

Next morning, however—so exciting had been the experiences of the night—he had completely forgotten in what part of the garden the emblem of sovereignty had been hidden, and it was only after his entire household had hunted for hours that it was at last run to earth. "You never saw anything so ridiculous," he wrote later, "as seeing the whole family down the walks dibbling with bits of sticks until we found it."

Once at least the great seal has been at the bottom of the Thames and would be there today but for a lucky accident. It was in 1688, when the second James was fleeing from England and the Prince of Orange to France, in company with Sir Edward Hales. He had intended to take the great seal with him, but as he was being rowed from Lambeth to Vauxhall, where horses were awaiting him, another and better idea occurred to him. He would fling the seal into the river, and that would place it once for all out of reach of his enemy. So overboard the seal went, and for some weeks it lay there until by a curious chance it was picked up in a fisherman's net and restored to the proper custodians.

The ludicrous frying pan adventure befell it when in the custody of Lord Brougham. The chancellor had gone to Scotland for a short holiday—seeing that he could not take the seal on the Rhine trip he longed for without putting it in commission at great cost to himself—and he was a guest of the dowager Duchess of Bedford at Rothiemurchus, where he kept his precious charge in his bedroom. One day the young ladies of the house party took the seal from the bedroom and hid it. Brougham was desperate when he discovered his loss and did not recover his peace of mind until the pretty thieves promised to lead him to it if he would consent to be blindfolded.

With his eyes bandaged he was conducted to the drawing room, and there he discovered the seal hidden in a tea chest. So overjoyed was he at its recovery that he consented to the young ladies' suggestion that they should adjourn to the kitchen and celebrate the joyous event by making pancakes in the seal, and thus, amid much laughter, the greatest emblem of sovereignty in the whole world was actually used as a pan in which to fry pancakes. The seal, it should perhaps be mentioned, consists of two silver disks hinged together, so that when they are closed they form a mold, into which the wax, green, red or yellow, as the case may be, is poured. Thus it would make not at all a bad substitute for the common or kitchen frying pan.

Many a time has the great seal been taken to the house of lords and broken to pieces at the bar by the hammer of a sturdy blacksmith, amid the frantic cheering of onlooking members. This was the fate of the seal which fell into the hands of the parliamentary army on the capitulation of Oxford in 1646. Three years later the old parliamentary seal, which represented Charles enthroned on one side and riding on horseback on the other, was similarly destroyed to make way for the new seal with its view of the house of commons in place of the deposed sovereign. Richard Cromwell's seal was broken by the hammer in 1659, and in the following year the great seal of the commonwealth itself was destroyed in the same way.

Once the seal was lost, by Charles II. in his flight from the fatal field of Worcester, and once it was stolen by burglars from Lord Thurlow's house in Great Ormond street, but it was replaced by a replica in the wonderfully short time of thirty-six hours. The seal that was in use when George IV. died was divided between Lord Lyndhurst and Lord Brougham, King William IV. presenting one side to each chancellor, mounted in a magnificent salver, and a similar present was made in later years to Lords Chelmsford and Campbell and to Lords Selborne and Cairns. Of the handsome satchels or purses in which the seal is supposed to be kept—exquisite specimens of art needlework in white and gold—so many fell to the lot of Lord Thurlow as perquisites that his good lady was able to make several sumptuous counterpanes and bed hangings from them.

Many John Smiths.

In Latin, John Smith is Johannes Smithius; in Italian, Giovanni Smithi or Fabbroni; in Spanish, Juan Smithas; in Dutch, Hans Schmithe or Schmidt or Schmitzes; in French, Jean Smeets; in Greek, Ion Skmiton; in Polish, Ivan Schmittiweiski; in Welsh, Ibon Schmidd; in Scotch, Jean Gowans; in Russian, Jouloff Skmittowski; in Chinese, Jahon Shimmit; in Icelandic, Jahne Smithson; in Mexican, Jontli F'Smith; in Tuscarora, Ton Qu Smittis.

Heroic War Measures.

Chaka, a great African native chief, trained a powerful army which was famous in war. If a regiment was beaten it was slaughtered on its return to the king's palace. If any man lost his weapon in war he was killed for cowardice. If the chief wanted to see what kind of weapons were most successful he would order a sham fight with them, in which real lives would be lost.

Editor Versus Lawyer.

A lawyer in a courtroom may call a man a liar, scoundrel, villain or thief, and no one makes a complaint when court has adjourned. If a newspaper prints such reflections on a man's character there is a libel suit or a dead editor. And this is owing to the fact that people believe what an editor says; what a lawyer says cuts no figure.

The Place For a Pupil.

"And there is one thing about the pupil of the eye that I can't say about lots of other pupils," remarked the teacher.

"What is that?" asked the scholars in chorus.

"It is always found up around the head."

HAWTHORNE'S WORKS.

The High Standard They Have Set For American Literature.

Two things are to be remembered when Hawthorne's name is mentioned. First, the glory he reflects upon American literature. Little has been done by us in letters or art that is quite of the highest order except the works of Hawthorne. These have the clear promise of perpetuity. The themes are of supreme and universal moment. He rises to their meaning and depicts them in commensurate form. He is not a preacher to cry aloud, but an artist who paints, yet not without a heart that throbs in pity and a fancy that muses over the wonder of it and will not suffer the pall of darkness to hang over it forever. That we have in Hawthorne an author whose work in these high fields of thought is crowned with unimpeachable honor and is sure of perpetual remembrance is a constant satisfaction as years go by.

But Hawthorne has a wider claim upon our gratitude—namely, the fact that he has set the seal of glorious achievement in letters upon the moral laws of our nature. The greatest things done in literature have been of this sort. They alone, from Job down, are remembered and cherished in the ages. Hawthorne is our only exponent of genius in this field, and how superbly has he filled it! His message is that of Dante and St. Paul and all great moralists—whatever a man does to another he does to himself, whether it be good or evil. Men will forever dwell in this truth and will never forget those gifted souls who see it clearly and set it forth in perfect forms of literary art.—Century.

At the Top of the Ladder.

A woman whose acquaintance with the methods and opportunities of work in a modern newspaper office is of the slightest was talking to a friend about her son's start in life. The young man had just left college and had secured a position as reporter on one of the important New York dailies in the humble capacity which is the usual lot of the "cub" journalist, that of a police court reporter. His mother was enthusiastic over his good fortune.

"Do you know," she exclaimed, "they've given him such a splendid position. He's the crime editor at the police court!"

The Island of Jersey.

The police court of St. Heller, the principal town of the island of Jersey, is remarkable in several respects. First, the proceedings are always opened with prayer; second, it frequently happens that after prayer there is no more business, and every one goes home. There is so little crime committed in the island that the police force (twenty strong) is kept up only for visitors. The beautiful carving in oak which forms the rostrum of this court is the work of a lady named Coxedge, a resident of the island. The dock is remarkable for its spaciousness and comfort. The authorities are very lenient with their prisoners, who are kept here, for court and station are under one roof. In the words of the genial old turnkey, "When we gets 'em brought in drunk during the day, if they behave well we lets 'em out at night." Every "bobby" is obliged to know the Psalms. It's all he has to do.

Billiard Balls.

Billiard balls are made of Zanzibar ivory, the other ivory, known as the Bombay ivory, being too liable to crack or chip. The Zanzibar ivory is soft and therefore lasts better. The regulation ball is two and three-eighths inches in diameter, and a set of four costs about $30. They are rough turned—that is, turned a little larger than the balls are to be when finished—and are stored away in open crates for from sixteen to twenty-two months to season the ivory after being turned and to allow any shrinkage to take place before the balls are finished. If the balls were not seasoned in this way they would be liable to shrink after they were finished, and, as they only shrink in the direction of the grain, they would become oval instead of remaining round, as they should be, and it would be necessary to have them turned again.

IN THE ROUNDHOUSE

THE ATTENTION THAT IS BESTOWED UPON THE LOCOMOTIVES.

Constant and Careful Grooming Required by the Great Iron Horses of the Rail—How the Tires of the Big Driving Wheels Are Tightened.

Any one at all familiar with railroads has seen the engineer dismount from the cab, oil can in hand, as soon as the train has come to a stop at some way station; seen him walk slowly about the ponderous machine, feeling of each bearing with his free hand as he filled the cups with oil; seen him perhaps tap a valve gently with a wrench or examine critically some ill working air pump.

To any man all this is interesting, but how many are there in all the vast crowd that enter the city daily at the great terminals who can tell offhand what becomes of the train when once the cars are emptied of the passengers? To be sure, they have seen the cars on a siding out in the yard. They know perhaps that a roundhouse is a place where engines are kept when not in actual use. But beyond this the ideas of the ordinary man are a bit hazy.

As soon as the passengers have left a train that has just come in from a long dusty run it is backed out into the yard, and the cars are set off on a side track. Men go upon them at once and begin to put them in readiness for the next trip. The windows are washed, cars freed from all filth and dirt, seats cleaned, water tanks cared for and the lighting apparatus put in order.

The locomotive, after leaving the cars, proceeds at once to the roundhouse, where the ponderous machine also receives a proper overhauling. First of all, the tanks are filled with water and the fuel supply is replenished. Then a few puffs bring the fire box above the ash pit, where the fires are cleaned and dumped altogether. The next thing is to stable the great iron horse.

The roundhouse itself is a most uninviting place, with its soot begrimed walls and smoky interior. These buildings are all constructed on the same general lines, low, one story structures, generally built of brick and semicircular in shape. The center of the circle is the center of the turntable. Arranged along the inner side of the building is a line of doors, each exactly like its neighbor. Under each runs a track of standard gauge, giving the whole an appearance not unlike a spider's web, the center of which is the turntable.

The turntable itself consists of a pit walled with stone, across which is a bridge free at the ends, but balanced at the center on a spindle. Rails are laid across this, as if it were a part of the roadbed.

When the fires of the locomotive have been cared for the engineer runs his machine upon the table. With deft hand at the throttle, he brings it to a stop at the precise point where the hundred tons of steel balance on the spindle that supports the bridge. Then the ponderous mass is slowly revolved until the required track is reached and the engine is backed into the roundhouse.

Once within the house the engineer's duty is done. He has but to go to the office and report in a book prepared for the purpose any repairs that are needed, and he can go home, assured that his machine will be ready for him when he starts on the next run.

The engine is now turned over to the roundhouse crew, who go to work on it at once. The attention that a locomotive receives on arrival at the roundhouse is about the same that one would expect to see bestowed upon a race horse. Wipers go over every inch of the surface carefully, removing all dust and oil. Others drop into the pit beneath the machine and wipe the running gear. The headlight is carefully cared for and the brass polished. In fact, the whole machine is put in first class shape in every way.

Throughout this work keen watch is kept for any signs of broken parts, and any found are repaired. The hundred or more flues are cleaned by steam pressure.

An engine seldom comes to the house that does not need repairs of some sort. The delicate mechanism is constantly becoming broken, and unceasing attention is required.

One of the most interesting of all the repairs that are made in the roundhouse is the tightening of the tires on the drive wheels. Each wheel is surrounded with a heavy steel tire. These occasionally work loose, and it becomes necessary that they be tightened without sending the locomotive to the shops.

To do this a stream of oil is fed automatically upon the tire and allowed to burn as it runs down. The result is that the whole rim is soon a circle of flame. This is kept up for a long time, and the tire, being heated faster than the wheel itself on account of the proximity of the fire, expands until the thin pieces of sheet iron can be inserted between the wheel and the tire. When the tire has again become cold it contracts and clutches the wheel hard and fast.

The cumbersome repairs, such as turning down worn drive wheels and replacing boilers, go to the shops, where lathes, cranes and forges are to be had. But all the minor troubles are remedied at the "stables," and the foreman of the roundhouse is responsible for the condition of the engines. He is the man to whom all look in an emergency, and it is he who must look forward and plan for the repairs in such a way as not to interfere with the regular operation of the trains.
